M. C. ROGART AND J. W. HALL, COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Despite the non mild weather on Monday the number of votes polled in the municipal contest was not quite up to that of a year ago. The vote for the Mayoralty was 11 less than in 1904, the two leaders and two tailenders show a decrease, while the centre four have an increased vote. The contest was a decidedly friendly one, and Mayor Lowry may well feel proud of his decisive victory over so popular a Councillor as W. T. Waller has been. There is considerable "new blood" on the Council Board this year and we should certainly have our streets lighted in a befitting manner in a short time, judging by the remarks of the Council-elect.

A. S. Kimmerly polled a magnificent vote for a new man, being only 7 behind the leading vote of 1903.

The returns began to arrive before 6 p.m., and the Town Hall was crowded by enthusiastic electors Following are the returns:

Justice Awakened.

Toronto News

Many persons on hearing of the decision of Magistrate Dale of Napanee, on the charge against the proprietor of the Parsley House, were surprised to learn that it was an infraction of the law to serve liquor to a guest of the hotel in his room. The law in this case is opposed to a very widely spread popular belief, but it is quite clear. In a case tried before Justices Rose and Macmahon, in effect the point was raised that the person supplied with liquor was a bona fide lodger, and entitled to purchase under the provisions of the law. The words of the statute are: "Nor shall any such liquor, whether sold or not, ever be permitted or allowed to be drunk in any such place during the time prohibited by this Act for the sale of the same, except by the occupant or some member of his family or lodger in his house." These words and Mr Justice Rose does not afford any license to sell, but are words prohibiting the drinking of liquor during the prohibited hours, whether sold or not; except that the occupant or some member of his family or lodger in his house shall be allowed to drink. He decided therefore that the fact of the purchaser being a lodger did not excuse the sale.

It was then argued that the sale to a lodger was permitted by implication under another section, making it an offence for any person other than the inmates of a hotel to buy or obtain or attempt to buy or obtain liquor during forbidden hours, that is that as this section did not make the inmates of the house punishable under the law for having the liquor, the sale was permitted. But Mr. Justice Ross decided that the positive prohibition contained in the law could not be cut down by implication. The most that can be said is that a lodger having liquor during prohibited hours is not an offender.

There can be no doubt therefore, that a technical violation of the law was committed in sending a glass of liquor to the room of a guest, no matter how rational, because it would be difficult to imagine a less objectional way of supplying liquor, if the convenience was not abused, nor a more temperate use of liquor than the taking of a glass before retiring at night. However, so long as the law exists, it must be enforced, and when it is politically convenient the laws of Ontario are enforced with great severity. As a general rule the licence inspector pays little attention to the consumption of liquor in a guest's room, provided that the practice is not abused and does not lead to disorder. In the Napanee case the defendant had pleaded guilty to the more serious offence of keeping the bar open after hours, but the magistrate declared that all the evidence must be heard, and that he would "shield no one." To this Spartan severity we are indebted for the knowledge that the guest was in the room. The leader of the Ontario Opposition is thus in the most important feature of the case in the view of Mr. Whitney's chief organ mentioned in the press which devotes a column to the report of an infraction of the liquor law, and heads it conspicuously with Mr. Whitney's name. Thus we have an answer to the slander that Ontario Justice is paralyzed. Plaggers, bribers and purloiners of perjury may go free or be rewarded, for even their failings lean to virtue's side, that is to the side of the Government. But it is clearly against public policy that lenity should be extended to the members of a factious and hateful opposition, bent upon destroying the greatest Government in the history of the world. We should, therefore, strongly advise these suspects to study the municipal by-laws carefully, especially those that are of such a trifling nature that they might be forgotten. Justice, just awakened and vengeful, is on their track. Right in the midst of the campaign Mr. Foy may be exposed to the gaze of a horrified public for one who has left the snow on the side walk, or Mr. Whitney's prospective Minister of Agriculture may have the career blighted by a conviction for allowing his cattle to wander at large. No guilty man will escape, at least until January 25.

He served in a New York regiment, and was a prisoner in Andersonville prison, that awful place of starvation, misery and suffering. He and his fellow-prisoners were released by General Sherman's final famous march from Atlanta to the sea. His sojourn in Camp Sumpter as a prisoner of war left him a confirmed invalid, shattered his health. At the time of his death and for several years previous he drew a pension. Mr. Thompson was one of those gentle souls who would not hurt or injure a fly for the sake of God's creatures. It has been said "an honest man is the noblest work of God." He was that and all that it implies. A loving husband, kind father and good neighbor has left this life for the peace of Paradise. Deceased was seventy-four years of age, and leaves besides his widow, formerly Miss Preach, three daughters and one son, Mrs. J. T. Bailey, of Peterboro', Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. Young, of Brantford, and Donald on the homestead. The funeral took place on Tuesday, Dec. 27th, to the Union Church. Mr. Thompson's only relative in this part of the country is Mrs. Lott, of Strathcona, who is related.

Impoverished Soil

Impoverished soil, like impoverished blood, needs a proper fertilizer. A chemist by analyzing the soil can tell you what fertilizer to use for different products.

If your blood is impoverished your doctor will tell you what you need to fertilize it and give it the rich, red corpuscles that are lacking in it. It may be you need a tonic, but more likely you need a concentrated fat food, and fat is the element lacking in your system.

There is no fat food that is so easily digested and assimilated as

ONE OF DR. CUPID'S PRESCRIPTIONS.

That Love sometimes cures disease is a fact that has recently been called to the attention of the public by a prominent physician and college professor. In some nervous diseases of women, such as hysteria, this physician gives instances where women were put in a pleasant frame of mind, were made happy by falling in love, and in consequence were cured of their nervous troubles—the weak, nervous system toned and stimulated by little Dr. Cupid—became strong and vigorous, almost without their knowledge. Many a woman invertvous and irritable, feels dragged down and worn out, for no reason that she can think of. She may be ever so much in love, but Dr. Cupid fails to cure her. In ninety-nine per cent. of these cases it is the womanly organism which requires attention; the weak back, dizzy spells and blue circles about the eyes, are only symptoms. Go to the source of the trouble and correct the irregularities, the drains on the womanly system and the nervous prostration disappears. So sure of it is the World's Dispensary Medical Association, proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that they offer a $500 reward for women who cannot be cured of leucorrhea, female weakness, prolapsus, or falling of the womb. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their method of cure. "Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the complexion and sweeten the breath, they cleanse and regulate the stomach, liver and bowels and produce permanent benefit and do not act on the system like pills, but are gentle laxative.

LOVE FOR AN HOUR IS LOVE FOREVER

Dick took the letter, and as he looked at it his face flushed and his hands nervously broke the seal.

"It is from Mexico," he said, "from one of the parties that owns mine—he wants me at once—there is an offer for the mine—a big offer. I must go as soon as possible. What luck it is!"

He had carelessly given a servant a piece of silver for Toro, and was reading and commenting as he read, with the utmost enthusiasm. Loida had risen and gone to his side. The squire was watching him curiously. Clara stood on the hearth looking thoughtfully into the fire, until she suddenly lifted her face and darted an inquisitive glance at Francesca. She, of all present, seemed quite undisturb by the letter. Dick, however, as the current of the conversation changed, sher mind went voluntarily back to the channel in which it seemed best to move, and to speculate. Would Lancelot in any way hear of his mother's death? Would it bring him home? She had a hope that Doctor Thorpe knew where Lancelot was. Surely he would write to him? In a few minutes Dick seemed to remember that Dick might meet Lancelot—that he might even try to find him. Looked at on that map Mexico did not seem such a very large country, and she had an idea that Dick had some unusual power or influence there.

She looked up at Dick. He was talking to Loida and Clara in an excited manner. The squire had gone to see Toro beyond temptation. He knew the gypsy's fingers stuck to a bridle. And yet he liked the brown Antinous. He had been born on Atherton moor, and was, in a fashion, one of his people.

"Come, Toro, I will walk to the gate with you," he said kindly, clenching the gypsy on the shoulder.

"Too much honor for the poor person, squire." But Toro put his fiddle in its green baize bag, and laughing rose.

"Doctor Dyson says you bought his horse—a bad bargain."

"No, no, squire—badly managed. I know a horse the minute I see him, temper and everything. The doctor's horse is quiet with me."

"Why did you walk into poor Hodgson's henhouse, Toro?"

"Did I squire?"

"Yes. Why?"

"Because he is poor. I do not spare the poor person because he has little. No one is poor but them God hates. That is the Romany creed."

"It is a wicked one. You promised, when I gave you a bit of land, to stay on that."

"The dog who travels about finds bones, squire."

"Are you sending your boys and girls to school?"

"In the highways and byways. Good-night, and God bless you, squire. Did you fear I would put dras in your mangers? None of us would hurt Atherton or Atherton's horses."

"I know you do not wish to, Toro; but sometimes the devil—"

"The 'good baron,' squire, must have the good word. He may be at our elbow."

"Speak for yourself, Toro."

But the squire laughed, and let the gypsy pass through the gate with the laugh, and as he turned toward the house the whole interview slipped from his memory. A vagrant thought. He felt a sudden melancholy assail him, and he quickened his footsteps, as he gladly re-entered the house. In the parlor Clara, Loida and Dick were standing together on the hearth-rug, talking with great animation; but Francesca's face was upturned to the group with a shadow of pain upon it.

"Well, Dick, Is it to be Mexico again?"

"Yes, squire, and at once. Loida is going with me."

"That is a nonsensical thing, Dick. It isn't a journey fit for a woman at all."

"Rashleigh, it is a lovely journey," said Clara. "There is no danger whatever, and very little discomfort. If you were not so full of business about the mill, I should ask you to take me also. What a splendid party it would be!"

Squire Atherton looked at his wife as a mother looks at a child who cries for the moon. He did not consider the supposition as a serious one.

"You see," continued Clara, "they have only to take a fine Cunard steamer to New York, and there is no danger or discomfort in that! None at all, I know, for I have crossed half a dozen times. From New York they can take a steamer to Mexico, or they can go to Orleans and take a Mexican steamer from that port. As Dick and Loida had no wedding-trip, I think this journey together may just take its place. No one knows what kind of stuff his or her love is made of till they have tested it on a journey together. We came near to shipwrecking our good opinion of each other when we were on the continent once or twice. Eh, Rashleigh?"

"We did nothing of the kind, Clara."

"We certainly did, whether you know it or not. You have a fine English—so rampantly English—all through France and Germany, so tremendously Church-of-England in Rome, that your sensible cosmopolitan, any scrap of human nature in all its charming variety, must have felt chafed and restricted. I did. But as fast as my intelligence blunted, my heart expanded you. For, upon the whole, Rasaleigh, you were a most unselfish, delightful traveling companion. I only hope Loida may find Dick as really effective and sensible as you were. It is not likely, though."

And she gave Dick a deprecating sigh, and smiled at him with just the smile which always won her way to his heart—which always put his wishes or his will under the feet of her least desire.

Loida had grown quite enthusiastic during the discussion. The squire looked at her heightened color and shining eyes with amazement. A year ago, a journey so far and so horrid would have been to the deliberate, methodical Englishwoman like a journey into an unknown country. Now she was absolutely at Dick's disposal.

"She could be ready in a day—half a day, if it were necessary."

"There is no time to lose, Sir," said Dick to the squire. "From what I learn, an English company propose to buy the mine, in which I still hold a controlling interest. Now is the great thing for me. I shall then have all my money in England. I can buy land; I can build a new house, and take the place in the county that I desire to take."

And this last argument was one that always appealed to the squire. He was not case satisfied.

"Will you be long away, Dick?"

"Not longer than half a year, and, as Mrs. Atherton says, it will be a delightful trip. Loida will get over my hour of it. It is time the dear little woman saw something of the world she lives in."

"And what of your mother, Dick?" asked Francesca, with that tone of reproach in her voice. Mr. Alderson? How will she like your going away, and to Mexico again?"

There was a tone of reproach in Francesca's voice. At the moment it annoyed Dick.

"I have not forgotten mother," he said, "and mother never puts herself before my interest. Mother, she will be glad to get word from Mexico, and marked 'Immediate,' sent Toro here with a letter. Loida and me will be glad to have Loida and me take a journey together, especially when the journey is a necessary one."

Then the details of this journey furnished a long and interesting discussion. They were much about New York, and Dick knew nothing at all; so all Clara's directions and advices were duly noted in her pocket-book. Dick knew everything about Mexico, but all his propositions were to discuss by the settlement of womanly taste and requirements. And there are matters which require more time to discuss than to realize; it took Loida about three hours to resolve to take one trunk only with her; it did not take one hour to pack that trunk.

It was already morning when "good-nights" were said, and there was little sense of rest, even then, in the house. Francesca, on reaching her own room, could not find heart to unclothe herself. There was a harder look on her lovely face than it had ever known before, and her mouth was not unreasonably thin. For in all these discussions and suppositions, Lancelot had never been named. Dick and Dick's fortune and Loida's comfort and pleasure had occupied attention entirely. There was no sufficient for every preparation. No one had even suggested the possibility of making a search for her lover, on the very spot of his disappearance, in the general enthusiasm over Dick's good fortune and extraordinary event of Loida actually going to cross the ocean.

She was overcome and horrified with indignation. She told herself that she had rejoiced with Dick and Loida, and that she had acted rightly to expect they would at least remember she was "weeping for her own loss. She felt as if every one did known injustice, as if every one willfully forgot him; yea, even at that moment she felt angry at his mother for deserting him. "I would have lived on in loneliness and suffering had I been in her place," she said, "lived on—if only to pray for him, and to welcome him home again." Then the thought of the sorrow-hunted woman came to her with extraordinary power and sympathy. She was instantly contrite for her angry memory, instantly and strangely conscious of "the agony that had consecrated" the room of that old, empty house, which but a little while ago echoed to Lancelot's voice and step.

She could not keep her spirit at Atherton. It wandered away to Leigh, and to that forlorn little churchyard on the wold; and there, reluctantly compelled by some influence she could not analyze, she imagined—sleeping or waking the whole night she remained there—hesitating, trembling, mourning with every spiritual sense, feeling the dead that were below and the souls that were overhead.

Very early, while it was yet scarcely dawn, a tap at her door awakened Francesca from her troubled visions. She was glad to see it was Clara, glad to feel her living face, the touch of her warm lips, and the clasp of her soft, strong hands.

"I was unhappy about you, Francesca," said the pleasant, sympathetic woman, sitting down on the side of Francesca's bed. "I thought I heard you moaning in your sleep—somewhere far off—have you been dreaming badly, my dear?"

"Yes, all night; dreadful dreams."

"About Lancelot?"

"Not exactly. He not speak of him."

"I have come purposely to speak of him. I have come to advise you to go to Mexico and seek him yourself. I would if were you. No one should prevent me. Loida can go. Then you, also, can go."

"They never named him last night. They only thought of themselves."

"You cannot tell their thoughts, nor yet their reasons for not naming him. I, for instance, was quiet because I knew it was not the time to speak to your father, and I did not wish an ill-considered word to excite prejudice a wiser application. But it is certain your presence will give diligence and force to the search, and it is my belief love will find out whatever is hidden."

"What will people say?"

"Whom do you love? 'People' or Lancelot?"

"Will father let me go?"

"Ask him."

"If you would—"

"No, not unless you fail. There is a point which honor forbids me to cross. Your father will refuse me nothing. For that reason I cannot impose on his love. He has an affection still deeper for you. Test it this morning. You will find his love strong enough to grant you this favor, I make no doubt. Would you like to go to Mexico? Lancelot disappeared from sight in that city. Will you trust to Dick and Loida making inquiries, or will you go yourself? What do you wish?"

"Clara, I wish with all my heart—Loida—to go! Shall I go?"

"Go to your father. Tell him your desire. I will stand by you."

"I will! I will! Clara, thank you for coming. How blind, how stupid I am not to have thought of the plan last night."

"No, Francesca; the plan was one entirely out of your mental horizon. If a girl has been taught she must not see beyond her own four walls, she is hardly likely to suppose she can see across the Atlantic. I was taught to believe that the whole world and the fullness thereof was mine."

"O Clara, you give me such good hope! I feel happy—happier than I have felt for such a long time. I must get up. I cannot rest. I wish breakfast was over. Would I do to speak to father before breakfast?"

Clara thought it would be better to postpone the great question till the squire had got a good hold of himself, and was in a mood to regard the subject from his usual views, and that there would be no after-disputing. Then, with a few brave, kind words, she left the girl to think the matter over in her own heart.

The subject was not an entirely new one to Francesca. Many times such a project had flashed across her mind, but it had appeared too climerical, too surrounded with insurmountable difficulties to entertain or consider. It came and went like a flash, without apparent reason or result. But now it appeared to be the most reasonable of projects, and this change of feeling in some singular way influenced her physical bearing and appearance. In that hour the touch which removes immaturity was given; she looked no older, but she did look more perfect. When she went to the squire's room after breakfast, she went with a step and an air as yet new to herself; she went as a suppliant indeed, but as a suppliant conscious of rights.

The squire was smoking, and reading his newspaper. Francesca's presence was never an intrusion; he smiled to her over the top of the Leeds Mercury, and finished the editorial he was reading. Then he looked again at his daughter, and said: "Art in some task to-day, my love?"

"Yes, father. I want to go with Dick and Loida, and so I came to ask your permission."

"I never heard tell of such a thing! Does their know what thou art saying? My love, it means crossing three thousand miles of stormy water, and, for aught I know, as many more miles when thou gets on the other side of the world. It means living with strange people, and sleeping in strange beds, and eating all manner and makes of strange dishes. From all that I ever read, or heard tell, when thou does get to Mexico thou wilt be in a country where no life is safe. Fighting and talk of fighting is all that goes on."

"Dick and Loida will take care of me."

"Happen they will, and happen they will not be able to take care of themselves. Surely thou art not in earnest?"

"Indeed I am."

"Well, then, I cannot listen to such sheer nonsense. Thou art not even joking. Go to Mexico! Thou must have lost thy senses."

"Father, I have been sad and sick for a long time. I have not been such a happy, pleasant daughter as you deserve to have."

"Thou hast not—that is the truth."

"It is about Lancelot. You know?"

"To be sure I know—I know too well."

"I think if I went with Dick and Loida, she would do me good. It would make me mentally and physically stronger. When I get to Mexico, I will see that Dick looks after Lancelot. I do not think Captain Benton ever did anything but spend money. I do not think Lancelot is dead; but if I myself can find out nothing, then I shall know it is so. That would be a great point. One can learn to accept the inevitable. It is the alternations of hope and despair that kill."

"To be sure. If Lancelot is found, what then?"

"I shall ask him to come home."

"Thou wilt not marry him, and stay in Mexico? That would fairly kill me."

"I will not."

"Because thou knows thou art my only child; thou art Lady of Atherton and Mapleton, and must not leave thy father and thy home and thy land, and the duty which one owes to such and all, just to please thyself. Thou could not do a thing like that, Francesca."

"I could not be Francesca Atherton and do such a thing. Lancelot must come back home if he wants to marry me. If he will not come home for my sake, do you think I will wrong you and every one that loves me, into this long search for his sake? No, father. I will then give him up forever. I will come home to you."

"And then thou will worry and fret thy life out."

"I will be a good daughter. I will then do all you wish me to do."

CAMDEN EAST.

The annual Xmas tree under the auspices of the Sunday School of St. Luke's church, Camden East, was a great success all round and well sustained its reputation made in former years. There were good recitations by Ruby Hamilton, Eva Hannah and Jessie Huff, Adam Hamilton, Dek Quinn and Willie Quinn; a good duet by Kathleen and Inez Preston; songs by Mr. Saunders and Mr. Morden; two good carols by the choir and Sunday School, as also "The Swinging Song" and "Hail Britannia" which brought down the house. The two plays, "Poor Pill eoddy" and "Scarlet Young Man," were given in a manner that reflected the greatest credit on the performers, the Misses Bessie and Lena Robinson, May and Helen Hamilton, Myrtle Galbraith and the Messrs. Roy and Willie Galbraith, Archie Love and Alton Robinson. "The Fan Drill" was executed in first class style. The tableaux costumes looked very picturesque and the fans bright and pretty. The following ladies took part in the drill: the Misses Helen Hamilton, Myrtle, Ethel and Olive Galbraith, Edna and Lena Robinson,

Only two weeks until we take stock. In both time we want everything in the shape of a Remnant or odd lot cleared out. To do this we will put them out at prices that will save you money.

OUR

PORT ARTHUR CAPTURED.

After a siege of eleven months, Port Arthur, the impregnable fortress of the Russians, has been captured. Stoessel surrendered, after blowing up the principal buildings left unharmed in the city, and the disabled warships in the harbor. The Japanese have acted very generously with their foes and allowed all the officers to march out with their arms and belongings, although they are pledged to refrain from taking any part in the present campaign.

The total number that surrendered is 25,000 soldiers and sailors. The total number of sick and wounded is 20,000. The Japanese are actually caring for the prisoners. The cost of the Japanese lost 50,000 men during the siege.

CAMDEN EAST

1905...

At the beginning of the New Year we wish to thank our many customers and friends for their liberal patronage during the year 1904.

The year that has just closed has been a most gratifying one to this store. It brought to us many new customers, and we lost very few of our old ones. We were able to take care of them all who favored us with their business, and they were not backward about expressing their satisfaction.

Our aim is to make this a better store in 1905 than in 1904.

We realize that we will have to work hard and earnestly in order to accomplish this end, but we are prepared to do it.

We ask a continuance of your patronage, and believe that you will find abundant reason for keeping your name on our list of patrons this year.

A NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE

REV. DR. TALMAGE HOLDS OUT HOPE AND ENCOURAGEMENT.

GOOD CAPITAL IS OPTIMISM

It Is Especially Necessary to Those Who Are Striving For the World's Betterment—Contrasts Drawn Between the Modern and the Old-Fashioned Methods of New Year's Time—Work For the Year.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Ogilvie, at Ottawa, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 1.—In this sermon the preacher brings to all, and especially to those who are striving for the world's betterment, a New Year's message of hope and encouragement. The text is Ecclesiastes 11, 4: "He that observeth the wind shall not sow."

What a change there is in our way of keeping the holidays from that of olden times! The old fashioned New Year's and the old fashioned Christmas, the old fashioned Thanksgiving Day were as different from their successors as the poke bonnets and hoop-skirts and the curls and the colonial days were different from the masterpieces of the milliners and dressmakers and hairdressers of modern times. We talk of the triumph of the locomotive and the telegraph in annihilating distance, but I am not sure that they have not done more to separate the members of families. The greeting that not many years ago from a son on the other side of the world in former times was brought by the son himself, who seldom went more than a day's coach ride from the old homestead. Then fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, cousins and grandchildren could all gather under the same roof. Then presents did not have to be done up in packages and sent days ahead across the continents or seas in order to arrive at their destination in time for the annual holidays. But each brother and sister, each child and parent, could deliver their Christmas gifts with a smile and, seal their holiday good wishes with a loving kiss.

Some of us can remember the good old times when New Year's was a day of hospitality, dedicated to the renewal of old acquaintanceships by a custom now almost lost in antediluvie. The good spirit of the new year seemed to say to all fathers and husbands, brothers and sons: "Go forth and find out how many friends you have in the world. Go forth and call on old or new acquaintances. Go forth and encourage each home for the coming struggle of the new year." Then all men and mothers and daughters in the early forenoon of New Year's Day in every living-room was filled with tempting viands. Everywhere on every street corner the cry of "Hot coffee!" "Happy New Year!" Thus in many a troubled home came courage and love and faith in God and for the renewal of those friendly New Year salutations.

A New Year's greeting is the sermon of this morning. With the same kindly spirit in which friends used to come to my mother's home and wish her a "Happy New Year," and with tender reminiscences of the past and cheerful wishes for the future make the day a joyous and hopeful one, I come to you this New Year Sabbath day. But instead of wishing you a "Happy New Year" in the hackneyed, happy-go-lucky way in which friend used to salute friend upon the street I am going, as your pastor, to have a heart to heart talk with you. I am going to have you first tell all your troubles and fears, and then I shall say: "Friend, for the past twelve months you have been looking on the dark side of life. You have been indulging too much in gloomy anticipations and anxieties. You do not seem to be willing to enter the battle of 1905 with a brave heart and a cheerful countenance. What is the matter?" Then you will point out to me all the dark clouds that are hanging upon the edge of your horizon, and you will tell me why this New Year's day is to you "full of sighing and not of song." Then I will try, by the help of God, to scatter those dark clouds and change your new Year timidities and doubt into new year certainties of gospel hope.

"Why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me?" "First," you answer, "because I have been defeated so often in the struggle of life that my backbone is gone. I have been like a sea captain who has been wrecked again and again until at last he feels that every threatening storm means a foundered ship. I am like a merchant who has been caught in three or four great panics and again and again, through no fault of his own, has had his fortune swept away. He is timid about making a new venture. I am like a mother who has buried four or five of her babies and has only one left. Each time the baby cough or catches cold over the mother is almost beside herself with fear lest she might lose her one remaining child. It is well enough for some people with bright eyes to anticipate the joys of a coming year, but as for me, I have had so many misfortunes that I have only half a heart for my singing which I intend during the next twelve months."

When the great philosopher wrote the words of our text he was not guessing a negative truth. "He that observeth the winds shall not sow," and the converse of that fact is that if a man will only go forth with a brave heart, if he will only plant and sow his seed faithfully and conscientiously, God will give him a large harvest. To him that observeth righteousness shall be sure reward." Will you not believe this? Oh, man, will you not go forth to your coming year's work with a brave and a hopeful spirit for a coming conquest?

But there are some whose apprehensions of coming trial are based on facts of a different kind. "My trouble," says one, "is not due to a lack of faith in God or in my own ability, but in the loyalty of others. The apostolic advice that we be unequally yoked with unbelievers extends further than the marriage relation. I am finding that out in the broader sense of business. It also means that those who are unequally yoked together can not pull well as a team. My business associates and I are fretting and worrying and irritating and retarding one another's labors."

Yes, brother, I at once catch the meaning of your Bible simile. Although born in the city, I have spent a great deal of my spare time in the country, and I have witnessed again and again feats of horse team pulling. The farmers have a great deal of pride in their horses. If one farmer can have a perfectly matched team of farm horses he always thinks they can outdraw and outpull all other teams in the country. It is an uncomfortable thing in county fairs to have these trials of strength tested. A great load will be piled upon a sled at the foot of a hill. Then the team will be hitched up. The farmer will take the reins firmly in his hands and cry, "Get up!" If the horses pull together evenly and steadily in all probability the sled will move over the hard, bare ground as if the runners were slipping over the winter's snow. But if one horse lags at the traces for a moment and then balks when his mate is pulling it is impossible to move the heavy load. The chief difficulty with your business and professional life may be that you are not "equally yoked" with your associates. You may have pulled while they are talking, and they may be pulling while you are balking. But did you ever stop to think that perhaps your brother, or the one-horse may be the chief reason why they have no faith in you and why they do not work with enthusiasm and hope?

Lack of faith in our own work will kill absolutely any faith others may have in our ability to bring help. The old proverb says, "Rats will leave a sinking ship." All our friends and associates will desert us as promptly as they can if they once get into their minds that we ourselves feel that we are going to encounter failure. A man who is always anticipating failure and taking a gloomy view of the future only works half-heartedly himself, but depresses his associates. What church would listen to a minister who preached most of the ultimate triumph of the gospel? If he were to preach week after week sermons the keynote of which was that man is a failure, the church a failure, Christ for the most of us a failure and the world is going to the dogs, would any one want to listen to such sermons? Would any one continue to work for the upbuilding of the grand old church of Christ, which has had such a mighty influence for good in the past and will have such a mighty influence for good in the future? No, of course you would not. You would say to yourself: "Well, the church is going to smash and the people are going to smash. I guess I will get off the train and let the 'Limited Express of Destruction' go over the open drawbridge as it may."

What you need, O man, at the beginning of this new year is to take a big inventory, not of your misfortunes, but of your blessings. Find out all the bright things you know about your life. Repeat them over and over and over to yourself. Get faith in God and in yourself. Then your associates will get faith in you. By their increased labor you will get fair wages from them. Then, together with faith in each other and in God, you will go forth with renewed zeal for the seed planting and the multitudinous harvest of the coming year. Never let your associates know that you have lost faith in yourself.

"Well," says another, "I am also afflicted with New Year's timidities, "I not only have lost faith in myself and in my associates, but I have also lost faith in the good deeds which I try to do for the lost and the needy. I am not an angel. I make no pretense of being a perfect man, but I do try to do some good in the world. Almost all my good intentions have gone for naught. I can understand the disappointment of men who have made honest but futile attempts to help people, for the more you do for some people the less those people seem to be willing to do for themselves. I do not want to lead a purely selfish life, but I do not intend to be bled for nothing." The desire not to throw away our good works is rational. When we plant seed we certainly want to see it grow.

What would you think of a farmer who should say to you, "I will not plant a kernel of corn unless I am positively sure that from this parcel will grow a stubble of corn, or a grain of wheat, barley or buckwheat unless from this very seed there will be my thirty or sixty or a hundredfold return." Why, you would laugh such a farmer to scorn. And you would say to him: "You do not know the first A B C of agriculture. A planter can afford to lose a thousand seeds if he can get a harvest from the remaining seeds he plants." Yet all through life you can meet men who are afraid their successes and failures not by the glorious returns they receive from a few good seeds well planted in good ground, but by the failure of the good seed which has inadvertently fallen in bad soil.

Why don't you help that young man who has just landed in town and is stranded? I grant that he has been a wayward boy; that his life is not what it ought to be, but in spite of that, why don't you help him? You know you can give him a position if you will. "Oh," you answer, "what is the use? I have tried to be a friend to you a great many times in the past, but I am done now with turning my business house into a Christian ministry. I draw the line sharply between business and philanthropy. I do my Christian work in church, but not in the store. I run the latter on business principles. When a young man comes to me for work he has to have good recommendations or I will not employ him. Why, sir, I have befriended four young men in the past! I even went so far as to try to send one of those young men through college because he was the son of an old chum of mine who is now dead. All four turned out badly. They were ungrateful dogs at that! You cannot make something out of nothing."

Yes, I grant that your good seed in the case of these four young men may have been thrown away. But surely it not be worth while to have four, five or even ten such good seed planted under favorable circumstances that the eleventh "seed" took root in some young man's heart and saved just some young man? Would not the satisfaction you get from having led one young man to be saved for Christ compensate you for all your wasted labor upon nineteen young men who were not saved? God will not reward you according to the success of your labors, but according to the efforts you have honestly made, whether they have succeeded or failed. It is your duty and leave the result to God.

Oh, missionary worker in the New York slums, what is the good of your rescue missions and your testimony meetings night after night? You know just as well as I know that nine-tenths of all your professed converts will become backsliders. That young woman who now sits with tears in her eyes and says, "Thank God, I have been saved from sin," may in-morrow be found again on the old path of wickedness. That man who signs the pledge to-night will get drunk again next week. That penitent gambler is only penitent until you give him a start in life again, and then he will gamble away his substance just the same as he has done in the past. Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth lately wrote a book entitled "After Prison, What?" After prison for most ex-convicts is a hell on earth. Two-thirds of the inmates of the penitentiary serve more than one term each. Once a thief for many of them is always a thief.

"All that you state is true," answers the missionary of the New York slums. "One-third, one-half, maye, perhaps three-fourths—of all our reformed cases may become backsliders. But if one out of every four—aye, if one out of every ten—be saved, is not the tenth man worth all the effort we have bestowed on the other nine? All the seed the Christian plants does not fall on good soil. Shall the farmer cease to plant? All our labors for Christ are not to bring in a gospel harvest, but are not the reward we receive a multipotent blessing for our labors? We are not in a gospel harvest, but are not the Yore missionary is right.

"Yes," the preacher says, "that is very pretty talk, but it does not bear well the test of logic. If while I sow one good seed nine others are sowing tares, will not the nine tares increase just as rapidly as the one good seed? Soon will not the earth instead of being covered with the glory of God 'as the waters cover the sea,' be covered with the blight of a destroyed world? Instead of the world being better, as we would wish, is it not morally and spiritually becoming more and more depraved? Have I not a right, then, to my new year resolutions?" No, my brother! No, no! A thousand times no! The reports of the gospel meteorologists do not bear out your theories.

Meteorology is as rational a science as chemistry or botany, biology, physics or any other science. Like a skillful general, the Government, guarding against surprise, has organized its weather bureau and planted outpost stations everywhere. Thus no storm can come without being out on its mission of destruction than the weather bureau lifts its signals of warning. Fishermen, farmers, cover, and fruit growers hold back their shipments, and railroad officials get out their snow plows and anticipate the attacks of the storm.

What the superintendent of the weather bureau can do in reading the positions of the atmospheric storm clouds the gospel meteorologist can do in finding out about the storm clouds of sin. What is it we learn from these Christian meteorological reports? From one and another heathen land comes the story of people turning from idols to serve the living God. Everywhere slavery and cruelty and inhumanity are being gradually suppressed. The world is coming more and more under the influence of the principles of Christ. It is a slow process, but the general trend is in the right direction. Evil for thousands of years has had its sway. We must not expect it to be easily or quickly dislodged. But the good time is coming. Only do not let us who live in Christian lands lose heart. We have for our safety the promise of victory, we see the sky growing rosy with the coming dawn, and we work on in the full confidence. Oh, my brother, think not this New Year's day opens a "dark day" for Christ. Think not that your labors for the coming year will be thrown away. Push on in faith and hope. Drive the plow up, in the name of Jesus. Plant in God's name; plant for Jesus Christ!

So New Year's greeting from me could be voiced in more inspiring language than that of my text. "He that observeth the wind shall not sow." Then eight words from me will be a lowing remembrance. If any one should ask me what was my father's favorite passage of Scripture, without a moment's hesitation I would answer, Ecclesiastes xi, 4, "He that observeth the wind shall not sow." That were to him his meat and strength for everyday work. He quoted them to every young man and many of his life. He quoted them to his wife and children hundreds, aye, thousands of times. If ever I am discouraged or blue or cast down, his advice always was the same. Take courage. Work on. Work away for right. "He that observeth the wind shall not sow." Shall not we on this New Year's Sabbath press on with glorious anticipation for the gospel seed planting at hand, which will ultimately mean our harvest ahead? Why not? God that this coming year may be the best of years to all of us, as it will surely be the last of many, many years to some of us. A happy, happy New Year!

Olean, N.Y., Dec. 23d.—One of the largest oil deals in western New York was closed last evening when the Scio oil field in Allegany county, N.Y., was sold by Sheridan and Dr. J. Ross Allen, of this city, of the firm of Sheridan & Allen, sold their oil property consisting of about one mile north of Scio, for $30,000. O. R. KIDNEY CURE

Miss Emma Monroe, Trenton, Ont., says. "I suffered for a long time with nervousness and back-ache. I then got a distressing backing cough, lost flesh, and felt very miserable every way.

I consulted two doctors; both said I had quick consumption and could only live a few weeks. A friend, who had used O. R. KIDNEY CURE, said she believed my trouble was due to weak kidneys. I commenced its use; and before I had finished six bottles, I felt like a new girl. That was two years ago, and to-day I am perfectly well and happy."

O. R. KIDNEY CURE is sold by all druggists, 50c per bottle; or write to the O. R. MEDICINE COMPANY, LIMITED, Toronto.

Ghosts would frighten many people who are not afraid of germs! Yet the germ is a real danger. In this microscope animalcules could be magnified to the size of proportion to the gendliness it would show like a giant python, or fire breathing dragon. The one fact to remember is that the germ is powerless to harm the body when the blood is pure. It is far easier to keep the germ out than to drive it out after it obtains a hold in the system. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the most powerful and perfect of blood purifying medicines. It increases the quantity as well as the quality of the blood, and enables the body to resist disease, or if disease has obtained a foothold, to make a footing in some weak organ. Wherever the nutrition is impaired, the nutrition of the body is diminished, for the blood is made from the food which is eaten, and half digested food cannot supply the body with blood in quantity and quality adequate to its needs. For this condition there is no remedy equal to "Golden Medical Discovery." It cures nine-tenths of every hundred persons who give it a fair trial. When taken in connection with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will promptly relieve and permanently cure.

Your Appetite

It Knows What is Best for Your Health.

Your appetite knows what is best for your health.

That is the theory of modern medicine—the doctrine of common sense.

Bread your appetite does not like is bread that is bad for your health.

How easily the human system assimilates good bread?

How hard bad bread is on health.

First, it's hard to eat the soggy, tasteless stuff, so many families call bread.

Your appetite rebels against it.

The appetite is wise.

It knows what's best.

You can trust it.

If it doesn't want a certain bread, make up your mind the bread is wrong

The appetite is never wrong.

We can safely leave our bread to the judgment of the appetite.

Once one has tasted Royal Household bread, made just right by following the recipes, that person will accept no other.

Other bread is flat and tasteless compared to it.

Eating Bad Bread Sours the Stomach.

Bad bread sours the stomach—lies undigested—creates dyspepsia.

No dyspeptic can work well.

No dyspeptic can be happy.

Those with weak stomachs, the sick—invalids—convalescents, need and crave, most of all, this slices of light, white well baked bread.

In the sick room Royal Household is indispensable.

What the Invalid Should Eat

Give the invalid the best bread you can secure.—give it to all you family and keep them well.

Keeping well—health by good living—is the modern way.

Royal Household is the modern flour.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

"My sake's I How well your husband is trained. How did you ever do it?" "Sh—didn't. Married a widower when I got him. It saves a lot of trouble."

The public should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is genuine, fully guaranteed, really effective—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints, and muscles, and aches and hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

He—What would you do, Miss Shapleigh, if a man were to kiss you? She—I would cry. He—But if he did it again? She—I would probably cry "more."

Be There a Will Wisdom Points the Way.—The sick man pines for relief, but he kindlies nothing for the asking which means bottles of drugs never consumed. He has but to send a postal to Dr. Pierce with compounds which enroll willafluously and taste water. But if he have the will to be honest with his afflictin wisdom will direct his attention to Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are a specific for indigestion and disorders of the digestive organs, have no equal.

Elder Sister—Sudie, you're quite old enough to be married. I think papa pah would like to marry without any more acquaintance.

A Clear, Healthy Skin.—Eruptions of the skin are the blotches which blemish beauty, but they are also the evidence of disease by unhealthy action of the Liver and Kidneys. In correcting these the healthy action is established and the organs to their normal condition. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will do this in a short time and the blood and the blotches and eruptions will disappear without leaving any trace.

Tom Minkle—And how did you know it was a pickle? Dick Tracy—Because the label had all the ear marks of a pickle, and put "Pickle Oil" on the back.

"For are cases of consumption so far advanced that Hoskin's Anti-Consumptive Syrup will not cure, but none so far that it will not give relief. For all coughs and all affections of the throat, lungs and chest, it is a specific that has stood the test for full. It promotes free and easy expectoration, thereby promoting the patient and gives the diseased parts a chance to heal.

Gentleman—What do you mean by putting your hand in my pocket? Light-Fingered Bill—Excuse me, sir, I'm so absent-minded; I used to have a pair of trousers exactly like those.

Governess—Yes, children, the eyes enable us to see. Now, Emerson, tell me what the nose is for? Little Emerson—I'm for holding eye glasses on.

Madge—Physical culture is just splendid. I'm taking beauty exercises. Margorie—You haven't been taking them long, have you?

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, cholera infantum, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children. Should be kept in every family relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. Acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Tommy—Talking of riddles, uncle, do you know the difference between an apple and a elephant? Uncle, benignly—No, my lad, I don't. Tommy—You would be a smart chap to send out to buy apples, wouldn't you?

"Now," said the voluble salesman, "here's a piece of goods that speaks for itself." "Ah, sigh," interrupted the weary buyer, "suppose you keep quiet for a couple of minutes and give it a chance."

"Say," queried the prospective customer, "is my credit good for a shave?" "No," replied the barber, "if you can't raise a dime keep on raisin' whiskers."

Rev. Mr. Hossack's Open Letter to Premier Ross

charge. Years before I first heard you, on the hustings, you were advocating publicly Prohibition and speaking in favor of it ever since. You will remember the plebiscite of May 1, 1894. There was a large majority of years upon the question. "Are you in favor of the immediate prohibition by law of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage?" Shortly after this vote, a convention was held in Toronto, and a deputation was appointed to wait upon the Ontario Government. It was received by Sir Oliver Mowat and four of his colleagues. Among other things, Mr. Ross delivered an address, a part of which The Globe reported as follows: "The result has exceeded his expectations. When he closed his speech, he read to the deputation the following statement: "If the decision of the Privy Council should be that the province has the jurisdiction to pass a prohibitory liquor law as respects the sale of intoxicating liquor, I will introduce such a bill in the following session, if I am then at the head of the Government.

"If the decision of the Privy Council is that the province has jurisdiction to pass only a partial prohibitory liquor law, I will introduce such a prohibitory bill as to the power we have, unless the partial prohibitory power is so limited as to be ineffective from a temperance standpoint."

Premier Delighted.

The evening of the same day, a mass meeting was held in the Horticultural pavilion. To this meeting the deputation reported. You were present, and delivered an address, a part of which The Globe reported as follows: "The result has exceeded his expectations. When he closed his speech, he read to the deputation the following statement: "If the decision of the Privy Council should be that the province has the jurisdiction to pass a prohibitory liquor law as respects the sale of intoxicating liquor, I will introduce such a bill in the following session, if I am then at the head of the Government.

"If the decision of the Privy Council is that the province has jurisdiction to pass only a partial prohibitory liquor law, I will introduce such a prohibitory bill as to the power we have, unless the partial prohibitory power is so limited as to be ineffective from a temperance standpoint."

Premier Delighted.

The evening of the same day, a mass meeting was held in the Horticultural pavilion. To this meeting the deputation reported. You were present, and delivered an address, a part of which The Globe reported as follows: "The result has exceeded his expectations. He expected a majority, but not such an overwhelming one." "The verdict of the people has been accepted by the Government heartily and by me gladly." He was glad the Government were able to express themselves in a way to satisfy the delegates. "It is what you had a right to expect. It is what it ought to do, and," he added, "it is the only kind of a Government I would be a member of."

You will remember the events which followed. Sir Oliver Mowat, in May, 1894, announced, in London, that his policy was to go as far towards prohibition as the power to legislate would permit. A. S. Hardy, when Premier, declared to a deputation that his Government, and you were a member of it, "had not receded from the position of their predecessors, that they considered themselves bound by the pledges of their predecessors." On Dec. 13, 1901, the Premier, stated to a deputation, from the Dominion Alliance, that your Government had declared itself upon prohibition and would not recede from that position.

On Dec. 22, 1901, the judicial committee of the Privy Council gave judgment, upholding the Manitoba liquor law, and declaring it to be within the limits of the power of the province. Then you became acquainted with trouble and you have never been without it since. Then began that long game of dodging the temperance issue.

Delays and Excuses.

Not long ago the sincere advocates of the movement to close the bars were cheered by the news that you would reorganize your Cabinet. Their time had come. You had personally made such a statement. You had your rebellious followers that now, when you knew the mind of every one of them, you would bring in the Government the men who would give you the necessary support upon this great moral question. You waited a long time; you made a most deliberate selection. Mr. A. G. Mackay and Mr. George F. Graham were chosen. The great convention met. the temperance question was introduced. Mr. A. G. Mackay and Mr. George F. Graham wrecked the temperance resolution while you looked placidly on. After all these years of solemn pledges and temperance speeches, when the crucial moment arrived you said not a word for the temperance resolution, but allowed it to be defeated. Under these circumstances, one is led to ask the questions. Why did you have a change in the Cabinet? Was there reason for bringing in Messrs. Mackay and Graham? for you knew their views on temperance, and since the convention you have expressed your delight at the action which was taken. So admirable have you been that it may be difficult for one who does not know you well to decide where you now stand in regard to temperance. However this may be, there can be no doubt about your sense of humor. Your speeches have always been lighted by it, but your latest production—your temperance speech—indicates the greatest development of this quality. "Time's noblest offspring is the last." I doubt if your closest friends imagined that within you should such a fountain of humor as would enable you to solemnly declare to the temperance people that your sacred pledges had been fulfilled by the tricky device of the referendum.

Is No Heroitus.

When one views your present position and then reads your speech delivered in the Horticultural pavilion, he is inclined to do a deal of thinking. He wonders what kind of expert political contortionist you are. You remember Lessie speech. "The verdict of the people has been accepted by the Government, heartily, and by me gladly," and again, "It is the only kind of a Government I would be a member of." The only kind of a Government you would be a member of—a government pledged to prohibition. Messrs. Mackay and Graham are with you. What kind of a Government are you in now?

When one views your solemn pledges, your temperance resolutions membership in temperance societies, your manifest dread of both the liquor traffic and the power of moral sentiment, your long continued game of dodging, your whole tortuous course with its inglorious climax at the bridge, no patriot and sun-crowned statesman, under whose benign influence freedom has developed from precedent to precedent. If the honest and observing elector should view your course with fairness and temperance, with charity, he will conclude that you are at least too weak and vacillating to remain Premier of Ontario.

"Deplores" Corruption.

It is sometimes said that you and your colleagues are not responsible for the corrupt acts of Liberal organizers and agents. You have, on several occasions, encouraged this theory by declaring that you were not in favor of corruption, and would stop it, if you could. But the word you used was "deplore." You deplored the corruption. Once at least you exclaimed, "Righteousness exalteth a nation." On other occasions you took high ground in regard to political purity and denounced political rascality in the abstract. The sworn statement of Mr. Hale, your candidate in Renfrew, would indicate that an enormous sum of money was promised for his election by one of our ministers. Of course, Mr. Stratton denies this, but Mr. Stratton denies nearly everything. There is no doubt that Mr. Hale's statement is correct; he has not found it necessary to make many denials. Some one in the Government involved your Government. The evidence in the West Elgin case touched your Government. Beside all these, you have deplored" the scandals, one would think you would have tried to stop them. It seems to me that it would be easy for you to refuse to retain office by a majority obtained by corruption. It did not even occur to you to give the country time to determine whether you held office by corruption or the will of the people. Then, unless the partial prohibitory power is so limited as to be ineffective from a temperance standpoint."

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS.

Miss Lucy E. Hinch,—

Dear Teacher,—It is with feelings of gratitude that we, the pupils of S. S. No. 16, Camden, assemble here to-day for the closing exercises of our school. During the time you have been our teacher you have endeared yourself to us in a very marked manner by your amiable disposition and painstaking efforts to advance us in our studies. Many times we have been a source of much annoyance to you, both by our conduct and neglect of preparation of lessons, but you have always exercised the greatest patience with us, and it is with joy we learn you are still going to be our teacher. In conclusion we ask you to accept this little present as a slight token of our affection.

Signed on behalf of the pupils.

YARKER.

The annual Sunday School Xmas tree and tea held in Ewart's Hall, under the auspices of St. Anthony's Church, Yarker, was a great success. A splendid tea was served in good style by the Yarker ladies, sustaining their reputation won in former years in this direction. Mr. H. S. O'Laughlin, Superintendent of the Sunday School, made a good chairman, and a good programme was rendered by the children, after which the Xmas tree was stripped of its presents, and all the children went away delighted. An enjoyable little dance brought a very pleasant evening to a close. All concerned in getting it up deserve the greatest commendation.

A spendid furnace has just been put into St. Anthony's Church. The committee appointed have acted most promptly, and secured good value for their money. The church can be kept warm now the coldest day in winter.

The question as to Ross on his strung its long-unceased bit of evidence on which it relies to send C. L. Tucker to the death chair for the murder of Mabel Page, stabbed to death in her suburban home last summer. It is a sheepskin, positively identified as having been owned by Miss Page and worn by her on the day of the murder. It was found in Tucker's coat pocket, when he was arrested, and is one of the strongest piece of evidence against him.

The Temperance Legislation League of which Rev. W. A. McKay, B.D., of Woodstock, is president, has come out straight for the Conservative party at the present election. The chairman of the executive said that in this election they had a question of public policy to be considered, and that therefore was the best time for running independent candidates, but that all temperance men to unite in trying to put a Government which had violated its pledges. The Liberal candidate of the Temperance Legislation League, Joseph Seeley, replied to the attendance calling upon the friends of the League throughout the province to unite with the Conservatives for the defeat of the Ross candidates.

NEWBURGH.

The first big storm of the season struck town on Friday. The wind increased toward night and the snow came down in a blinding storm. Saturday morning there were two feet of snow on the level, while banks, four and five feet deep were not uncommon sights. The citizens turned out and by noon all the walks were cleared. Miss Maggie Lockridge is visiting at Gilford.

Have you shovelled your sidewalk? Mr. Ballard, of Madoc, visited his brother, Harry Ballard, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Boarb spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller, Millhaven.

Division Court was held on Monday before His Honor Judge Price. There was a very light docket.

John McCauley was forced to leave his mail at Kingston Mills on Saturday owing to the storm, and finish his journey by train.

The B. of Q. train service was completely cleared on Sunday by the storm. The Kingston stage did not arrive until Monday. Conductor Lowe, of the Centreville stage, succeeded in getting through Monday afternoon. The B. of Q. train service was executed again on Monday, trains running very close to scheduled time.

The Newburgh Dramatic and Concert Company left for Bath on Friday about the time the storm struck town. They had accepted the invitation of the Anglican people of Bath to give the concert they gave in Bancroft. Their programme is made up of several drills and a very laughable farce entitled "Mr. Smith Abroad." Miss Barr, in the leading role, plays the part of Mrs. Smith to perfection, and Harold Ryan, as his servant, is right there with the goods. The rest of the cast, Sidney Littlewood, as a fraud, Jack Sadler as the Irishman, Mrs. Lemmon, as the new wife; Mrs. Adams, as her sister, and Miss Annie Sutton, as the domestic, play their parts well. The trip to Bath was made in good time, but the attendance at the concert was small, owing to the storm. It was impossible to return that night, but on Saturday the crowd was driven by Ernestine Station and they returned by train, the ride not coming till Monday. Mr. Millar and Rev. C. E. S. Radcliffe were not able to go through Bath, but Doc. you have a nice time?" we asked. "Oh, a lovely time," he replied. "You see, they are very nice people down at Bath and while the crowd was small at the concert, yet they were very appreciative. (He emphasized appreciative.) "What about the Marconigram received Saturday night?" we enquired. "What was that?" he asked. A Marconigram supposed to have been received on Saturday stated that the actor and yourself started for Newburgh, but had to turn back. While we were shivering and shaking on the top of snow bank the reefer asked, "Are you cold?" "No, answered, Cold? Non, non, mon, cher monsieur; I'm just rehearsing for the night we play at Thomsonville." "There is no truth in that," replied Quaxicum; "We may deny it then." "Yes," emphatically." "And you are thinking of writing a book on the trip?" "Yes, I think I will after a little time and will have it run as a serial in The Beaver." We subsequently learned that J. J. Snow will assist in the writing of the book.

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture is in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Losh, Sandy! Hae ye seen The Globe?
It has an awfu' tale.
Thot Whitney mon is fearfu' bad,
He shud be clappt in jail.
In Napanee the ither night,
When he to bed was goin',
He had a whuskey in his room—
Mark ye—not a sixpence.

I dinna say 'twas very wrong
To tak' a wee bit nip—
I've heered o' elders o' the Kirk
Who sometimes made a slip.
But Sandy! There were ithers there
Whe might ha' been ca'ed in,
And Whitney drank his bottle alone.
Hoot mon! The thing's a sin.

A SURE CURE FOR CONSUMPTION.

There is no such thing. Scott's Emulsion comes the nearest to it, but even that will not cure advanced cases, but taken in time it will cure this disease. 2b

ODESSA.

(For last week.)

Dr. Nathan F. Snider, LL.D., general merchant, and local manager of the C. P. R. telegraph and Bell Telephone companies, is dead, the consequence of an appalling accident yesterday, Tuesday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Snider started on a friendly visit, and to attend a dinner party at George Lucas', just south of the village.

All went well until they had turned on Factory street south, when, in some unaccountable manner, the young horse became frightened and almost unmanageable. Descending Factory hill at a terrific pace, the cutter slewed on the icy surface and struck the railing on the bridge. Confusion reigned, and the cutter was badly smashed to matchwood. The horse, freed from the wreck, flew two yards further on, wedged itself solidly between two cedar trees in the ditch, and stood trembling. Mr. Snider's son-in-law, Mr. Addison Snider, was driving in violent contact with the end of the bridge ridge-pole, the concussion being so great as to loosen the pole from its solid fastenings. He was conveyed home. Dr. Jay and Dr. Mundell, Kingston, were summoned in consultation, but the beginning of the end had already dawned, and Mr. Snider after making some lucid testimentary expressions from the injury at three o'clock this (Wednesday) afternoon, some thirty hours after the accident. Nathan F., third son of the late Uriah Snider, was born some sixty-three years ago on the old homestead, immediately west of the drill shed; taught school and afterward by dint of business capacity amassed a fortune in his native town, where nearly all his life was spent. He was kind of heart, and had many staunch friends. Politically his leanings were conservative. Odessa loses a quite, solid business citizen in Mr. Snider. His widow is the daughter of the late Uriah Parrott, Wilton, Ont., and mourns her loss, together with her daughter Florence and her son Urban, and their grief is shared by a vast circle of relatives and friends.

BATH.

By request and according to appointment the Newburgh ladies and gentlemen gave a concert in the Town Hall, Bath, January 6th. The programme was good, and in addition to the play, "My turn next," and the two drills, which were thoroughly appreciated, excellent songs were sung by Mrs. C. H. Finkle, with violin obligato by Mr. F. G. Millar, and Mrs. Sydney Littlewood. Bright swinging choruses were well rendered by Bath talent, and good guitar and piano selections by the Misses Rowse and Keller and Messrs Wemp and Bagle. The Rev. A. L. McTear, chairman, extended a hearty vote of thanks to all who contributed to the programme, and thanked the Newburgh people for their pluck in coming to Bath and the compliment by large audience for attending in spite of the weather. A supper was tendered the visitors at the close of the programme at the residence of Mr. Davy, reflecting great credit on the hospitality of the ladies of Bath. Mrs. C. H. Finkle and Miss Helen Finkle were the guests of Mrs Armstrong, who also was kept kind in looking after the Newburgh ladies both. F. G. Millar and Rev. C. E. S. Radcliffe were the guests of Mr. Lemuel McTear, and also were most kindly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Rowse. Rev. Rural Dean Dibb was the guest of Mr. J. J. Johnston. Being detained by the severe snow storm at Bath over Sunday, the Rev. Rural Dean Dibb preached at St. John's church in the morning, and the Rev. C. E. S. Radcliffe in the evening. The Rev. Mr. Guy, of the Bible and McNeill Presbyterian church was also detained at Bath by the inclement weather.

ARDEN

(For last week.)

The series of Christmas entertainments held on the Arden mission were among the most successful ever held. A special interest centred in the entertainment at Arden, as the proceeds went as a donation to Mr. Thomas Youmans, as a recognition of his sixty years faithful and devoted service in Sunday School work, thirty two years of which have been given in Hennebec. The largest audience ever seen in the Arden Town Hall witnessed the presentation. The proceeds of the entertainment amounted to $32.60.

William Scott, son of Charles Scott sr., and Miss Laura Campsall, of Parham, were united in marriage on the 28th of Dec. A reception was given the young couple at the home of Mr. George Scott on the evening of their marriage, at a presentation of a parlor lamp was made at the close of a very enjoyable evening.

A gloom has been cast over the community by the death of Mr. John Watt's two little girls, the one three years old and the other six. The youngest died on Wednesday, 4th inst., and the other on Sunday evening, 8th inst. Both had to be buried without a funeral owing to the contagious nature of the disease. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the family in their double bereavement. The other members of the family are out of danger.

Another of those accidents which seems to characterize our township occurred on Friday morning, 6th inst., at the Pringle and Avery camp. Mr. James Harten about nine o'clock in the morning met with an accident which cost him his life. Having felled a tree which lodged in falling the top in leaving a stump sprang back and caught Mr. Harten on the leg between the thigh and knee. It cut an artery and he bled to death before help could be given. The limb being broken where it was struck, also at the ankle. The unfortunate man was at once hurried to the station, where he took the 9 o'clock train for Kingston, arriving at the General Hospital at dark. It was found that the loss of blood had been so great owing to the fact that his clothes had stuck to the wound as well as broken that he was not only unable to stand an operation, but was beyond help. It appears that the man's life was needlessly sacrificed, for according to the statement of the hospital doctors, had a bandage been put around the limb above the wound to prevent bleeding, they could have saved his life. How much the general public need instruction in this line. Good authorities tell us as well as by drowning, is seen in such cases as this. It would pay any community to arrange for a course of lectures by some competent person even at considerable cost. It is in this case not only a man's life is sacrificed through lack of knowledge, but a widow with seven children are looking the world with very little comparatively of this worlds goods. The practical sympathy of the township is being extended to the bereaved wife and children.

Mr. James Parks jr. returned from Kingston Hospital on Saturday, although entirely recovered from the injury received when he was accidently shot, some weeks ago.

Mr. Alexander Pringle, who has spent over a year in British Columbia and Seattle, Washington, spent a few days with friends in Arden entering the newspaper business, and has gone to Toronto to take work on one of the daily papers.

Miss Minnie Clancy, Newburgh, Miss Ida Kellar, Detroit, and Charles Miller, Napanee, spent a few days renewing acquaintances in Arden and vicinity recently.

Mrs. and Mrs. Peter Brown are visiting friends in Western Ontario.

There will be an oyster supper in the near future in the basement of the public library, which is being agitated for the community.

TYPHOID GERMS.

The microscope shows that in the blood of every person who is suffering from typhoid little germs can be found as shown above. They are supposed to get into the water or milk we drink. The germs multiply so that one germ is capable of producing about one hundred trillion germs in twenty-four hours. That is why if they ever get into the water supply of a town they multiply so fast that nearly everybody drinking the water comes down with the disease. There are exceptions, however, and they are the persons whose health is perfect, whose blood is pure, and liver active. When the germs get into a healthy body they are thrown off with the other poisons. Recent Chicago statistics show that one-eighth of all the deaths in the past two years in that city have resulted from pneumonia.

The best advice we can give is to put the body into a perfectly sound, healthy condition. Be assured that you have rich, red blood and an active liver.

Many years ago Dr. R. V. Pierce, who is consulting surgeon to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N. Y., found certain herbs and roots which, when made into an alterative extract (without the use of alcohol), seemed to be the very best means of putting the stomach, blood and vital organs into proper condition.

This seemed to be as close to nature's way of treating disease as it was possible to go. For over a third of a century Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has had a wonderful sale and the cures resulting from its use are numbered by thousands. It is a tissue-builder, better than cod liver oil because it does not sicken the stomach, or offend the taste. It strengthens, or renews the assimilative or digestive processes in the stomach and puts on healthy flesh when the weight of the invalid is reduced below the normal.

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." Nothing else is "just as good."

LOVE FOR AN HOUR IS LOVE FOREVER

vary to do blundering wrongs under the name of truth and honor."

"I never heard you talk in such a way before, father."

Maybe not. I went with Clara up to the village school the other day, and heard a lad saying some verses to her call 'Casabianca.' Clara called them very silly verses, and I came to think she wasn't far wrong."

"Father!"

"Silly, and no mistake. Now, then, don't she stand to a foolish proverse, too, in offering advice about an unhappy marriage without waiting for any orders but the woman's own. As Clara said: 'If that boy Casabianca had been a better sort of a hero he would have known when to act under orders and when to use his own common sense. There is a nobler way than mere stupid obedience. Nelson refusing to see his admiral's signal at the battle of Copenhagen was a bit of disobedience that meant glorious victory. My dear lass, there is a deal of be-praised Casabiancaism in this world, and there is no worse form of it than sticking to the promise of a marriage that has become unsuitable and is like to be unhappy. There would be more honor and truth in keeping off that kind of a burning deck than in standing by it. So if Lancelot found it not all the fancy has painted him just insufresh orders to thyself. But I have not said that I would not have you go at all. I must talk to Clara about it. I do not know what she will say to such a move. I will tell thee plainly it is a very great trial to me only to think of parting with thee. But, my dear, I would be my hands under thy feet to make thee happy. It must be something more than my own feelings that says 'No' to any wish of thine."

And, of course, Clara combated all doubts and fears and reluctances with a tact that left the squire without a single reasonable opposition. She would not admit that the customs and traditions of other ladies of Atherton ought in any way to control Martha Leigh. Francesca, lived in a different period, surrounded by changing ideas and by changed circumstances, might well find the old not fit her conditions; she was compelled to order her life to its own individuality. To do otherwise would tempted me to speak. There is comnot admit the possibility. She had been a great traveler; many ladies of her acquaintance had traveled still more. Slight inconveniences there might be, but it would be good for Francesca to have her thoughts diverted from the loss of her lover to little physical inconveniences.

"You know Squire," she said, "how pressing and absorbing such trials can be; for I once saw you fret for a whole week about the loss of your shaving-soap—on your wedding-trip, too!"

"She may come across that young man, Clara. Women are not only good seekers, they are good finders; and I do not wish her to meet him again."

"I never saw the young man, Rashleigh, and I cannot say I am much impressed in his favor. Any reason for his total silence, within the bounds of good taste, must be a very probable. I think, with you, that Francesca ought to do better. But it is dreadful to think of the possibility of this old lover before Francesca can be induced to consider a new one. I know something of Mexico. If a young Leigh is in that country, he will not be easy to find. The Mexican does not do picturesque to any sort of purpose and wicked intent without the lurking dangers which would have saved her husband's whole life from understand what a cruel strait Lancelot was in then?"

"Yes! Yet was such absolute silence necessary?"

"My word, Clara! Thou can talk a man out of his boots."

"That is a poor compliment, Rashleigh, after I have talked a Yorkshire squire out of his heart."

And the squire drew himself up to his full inches, and a flush of pride and love covered his large, open face; and he turned to his wife as men have almost forgotten how to bow in these days—a noble inclination of both body and head, a mingling of veneration, courtesy, high-breeding and a sincere desire to please—something a shade different from the casual nod or the passing tilt of the hat.

Half an hour afterward, Clara and Francesca were trying to decide upon the proper trunk for the Mexican trip, and the proper clothing with which to fill it.

CHAPTER XV.

When a current of life sets strongly in one direction, it is remarkable how many smaller currents set in the same direction. Within a few days there came a letter from Doctor Thorpe to Clara asking her if she could give him any information about Lancelot.

"The rest lies," he said, "are already moving to get charge of the property, on the supposition that so long a silence implies death. Indeed, my dear, they may be such as would justify prevent your seeking your lover, because a meeting might only be re-opening a wound. You must go and see Doctor Thorpe, Clara, at once. So Leigh late afternoon, stay, with Mrs. Idle all night, and return to Atherton early to-morrow. I dare say your father will like to drive you."

To this plan there were no objection made, and both father and daughter three and all thinking of their parting and endeavored to make the trip as charming to each other as possible. When Clara's mother was not far from Idleholme, and in the evening Francesca found him there and at liberty.

How is it that a bachelor's house can be known the moment it is entered? Everything was in the smartest order, but Francesca knew there was no wife in the tidy place. Doctor Thorpe sat by a large fire; he had his slippers on, and was reading and making notes from a folio on a table before him. He was a little astonished at Francesca's appearance, and said, with an air of apology—

"My dear young lady, a letter would have answered my letter."

"No, it would not, my dear. At least, I want to tell you something, and ask you something. I am going to Mexico to look for Lancelot Leigh. Unless you know of any good reason why Lancelot and I ought never to meet again I am going. And in any case as this I not only ask, I deserve, your confidence.

"Going to Mexico to look for Lancelot! My dear, let me kiss you for the thought! My dear, if I was not an old man I would be tempted to that dare so sweet and true a pilgrimage! My dear, you should have lived a century ago. Then you got the truth—the whole truth, for you do indeed deserve it. And may God send you and Lancelot happiness! And he is a good lad—a lad any good girl may safely love."

"Why has he never written to me? Why has he hid himself away? If there were reasons forbidding our marriage, he might at least have told me them. He might have come and bid me 'farewell.' He might have sent me unmistakable some token of his remembrance."

"When Lancelot left his home and his love, he believed that there were insurmountable obstacles to the marriage with you, not only at that time, but forever. He believed—and then the doctor drew his chair close to Francesca's and dropped his voice to the lowest key—"my dear, he believed that his mother was utterly an insane woman or a murderess. I had the same awful doubt. I had loved Martha Leigh as my own son, and I understood what the young man suffered. My dear, he was in the loneliness and the heartsick mood; and though he looked at me with such eyes as almost tempted me to speak words of comfort to him, I did not dare—at that time, to do so. Now, I am convinced of the terrible reason which materially affect his position."

"What are they, doctor? Surely you will tell them to me."

"The first is that Martha Leigh was actually insane and quite irresponsible for her actions. The second is that her insanity was an individual trait; she had no taint from her forefathers, and she transmitted none to her children. In fact, her insanity was the result of long-continued anxiety, ever tending to the same end. The strain was to great upon certain faculties, indeed, my dear, when we try to see beyond the grave while still on this side of it, we must either miserably deceive or fatally injure ourselves."

"She was insane, then, when Lancelot left?"

"She had undoubtedly lost her mental balance. But when Lancelot left, there was still so much method in her madness, she was so insistent on her own sanity, that it was impossible even for me to say, 'This woman is insane;' and yet equally impossible to say, 'This woman is practically a murderess, for she is out of purpose and wicked intent within—held the medicines which would have saved her husband's whole life.' Can understand what a cruel strait Lancelot was in then?"

"Yes! Yet was such absolute silence necessary?"

"I am sure it was the only wise and kind thing. What could he have told you? How could he have told you? Can a son accuse his mother? Could you have continued to love him if he had done so? And let me tell you that his utter silence is the expression of the noblest self-denial and self-effacement. If his life was ruined, he did not wish to ruin yours also. He hoped you would forget him, and love and be happy with some more fortunate lover. A small, selfish man would have demanded remembrance. If he had broken your heart to obtain for himself such consolation to his pride and self-love. Poor Lancelot! He was made of earth's best blood and noblest aspirations. Some men would have called his honor to his dead father and his refusal to touch a penny of what he believed ought still to have been his father's a very quixotic proceeding; I think he acted under the noblest impulse that governs us—love grounded upon justice and truth. Now—now—he may wisely and lawfully be more worldlike. Now he may take what death has left him without a single reproach from his sensitive conscience."

"May I tell no father these things? He has been a little set against Lancelot."

"I do not blame him for being set against Lancelot. Any father listening in the dark would be. Yes, you may tell the squire. He has no small places in his nature. When he sees the right, he will be the right."

These were the main points of a conversation which lasted far into the night. Every fact and detail in it spoke to Francesca of her absent lover. She remembered Lancelot's great love for his father, she understood the living agony of the passionate son in the presence of doubts so terrible—of love so tender. The letter that Lancelot left behind him at once, but it drove away sleep and compelled her through the long midnight hours to pace her room. Hunger not only with her lost lover, but with the lonely, unhappy mother, Lancelot had left behind her heart's unutterable longings and despairs unsatisfied and unlightened.

As they rode slowly back to Atherton, Francesca told her father with conscientious distinctness all that Doctor Thorpe had confided to her. The squire listened silently, bending slightly forward, with set lips and eyes cast resolutely down. But when all had been spoken, and she asked, "Do you blame Lancelot now, father?" he answered, "No? I do not blame Lancelot. I say he acted like a man of honor and delicacy. But I am sure his mother was out of her mind."

"And I remember that you thought her very queer on the day of her husband's funeral."

"On the day of Stephen Leigh's burying she behaved to me as no woman in her senses would have done. And I did wonder at it, because for simple worldly wit and plain common sense the Leighs, father and son, mother and daughter, Leigh Grenest was always a wise bird; able to make its way, and to hold its own."

"Doctor Thorpe said she had become insane with fretting about Mr. Leigh's peculiarities endangering her home; and by encouraging the idea that she could see and talk with the dead."

"Poor woman! Maybe now she was born when those bad planets and the moon were opposing one another. Thou heard what Dick said about Saturn and Mars and Mercury, and I am very sure Mrs. Leigh was unlucky enough to have been born in the thick of their opposition. It is a queer world, Francesca, and what we do not know about it would make a big book, my dear."

"I thought I ought to tell you all that Doctor Thorpe said to me."

"To be sure. Thou would have been a poor daughter to have put such secrets out of my hearing. My dear girl, I trust thee like my own soul. The honor of thy name and of this house is in thy hands. But in England or Mexico, this side the world or the other thou wilt remember that. The game has just begun at thee, and the future has a right in thee. No man and no woman can live for themselves alone, unless they be selfish as the Dives that perish."

Then she lifted her face and kissed him, and he saw her pure, strong sad shining through her tears, and he felt the assurance it gave him to be beyond all spoken words or oaths or written bonds. As soon as Francesca and the squire returned to Atherton, Dick and Loida went back to Aldersen Bars, to complete their own arrangements. From Alderson they would go to Liverpool, and the squire and Clara promised to bring Francesca there to meet them. Between now and then there was only to be an interval of twelve days, but Clara said even that was ten too many. The small deliberations, the doubts evoked purposely to be talked away, the fears useless to combat while they were so far off, the small consultations about the care of clothing, the formal little notes of farewell to every acquaintance, the wonderful forethought about such trifles as pins, needles, and hairdressing, and these petty incidentals of travels amused and at times annoyed a woman so ready and impulsive as Francesca.

"A ticket taken and ten hours' notice, and I am ready to go round the world and to occupy Wall of China," she said; "and you are talking lots of things, Francesca, that you will throw away before you get back."

However, all events come and go whether we have patience or not, and the moment arrived for Francesca's last words of farewell. She said them with tears, with an undisguised emotion, with a desperate feeling that even at this final moment she must abandon her intention and stay by the father whose blank, speechless grief and anxiety were so pitifully evident through all his acts and tempts at smiles and nods and waving kerchiefs.

The squire and Clara did not wait for the lifting of the anchor. The squire thought it was not lucky to watch those going away out of sight.

"If you do, they never come back again," he said, with a childlike pathos.

"Rashleigh, I do hope you are not superstitious—an observer of fruits and signs." And Clara shook her head gravely.

"No, my Clara! I am not superstitious; not a bit of it. But, then, it is just as well to have the signs on your side. Eh, my dearie?"

She laughed, and turned the conversation on Loida.

"How amazingly cheerful and satisfied she looked upon Dick's arm! Did you notice her, Rashleigh? Her whole air seemed to say: 'Look at Dick Alderson—at my Dick Alderson! Consider Dick's wisdom and Dick's bravery and Dick's goodness in everything.' Did ever any husband love his wife as much as Dick loved his? Never, I am quite certain. Love forgives. But even forgiveness is a poor substitute for love. I am sure she will be happy."

"How could she be otherwise? Dick and Loida are a very delightful woman, besides being in her present state of Dick-adoration, a most sensible companion for lover. She remembered Lancelot's great love for his father, she understood the living agony of the passionate son in the presence of doubts so terrible—of love so tender. The letter that Lancelot left behind him at once, but it drove away sleep and compelled her through the long midnight hours to pace her room. MR HILL HAS PROVED IT.

Toronto Man Explains How he Gained Three Pounds in a Few Weeks. Remarkable Statement.

At 85 Fuller Street, Toronto, lives a man who claims to have proven beyond the shadow of a doubt that Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill is the most wonderful remedy ever introduced. His name is W. A. Hill, and hereafter the following statement, over his own signature, will be found:

"I was very much run down, and had a constant pain in my side, which made life a drag to me. I fully believed my days were numbered, but, I was induced to try a treatment of Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill, and the results were marvellous.

"After a short time I found myself restored to perfect health and strength, which I am thankful to say I have enjoyed ever since.

"I have gained thirty pounds in weight since I commenced to use Anti-Pill."

Mr. Hill's statement is only one of many. No one has ever used Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill without benefit. Price, 50c. All druggists, or The Wilson-Pyle Co., Limited, Niagara Falls, Ont. Sole agents for Canada.

out of consideration. It is a pretty old place, and it has associations that no money can buy. Francesca had told the squire about its fine rooms of sad consciousness. She said—she could shut her eyes and fancy shadows walking quietly about them, every one in dark garments and wearing their veils so great and long.

"Hush, my dear! Thou makes me feel creepy, and eerie as can be."

"And the queer old garden, too, with its ragged ways and its solemn cluster of shrubs, its twisted trees and strange plants. Francesca fancied she always heard voices behind them and strange words and weary whisperings."

"Wilt thou be quiet, Clara? Now, then, let us talk of the mill and something this-worldlike—other worldliness is none of our business yet."

"Very well, Rashleigh. I suppose it is the fire makes me remember such things. The fire is full of dreams. Or perhaps it is the pattering outside, or those dismal church-bells, or that last verse of the woman's voice, singing love-songs in the storm, the while she is starving for a crust of bread. Open the window and give her a shilling. Poor soul! If you want something this-worldlike, I am sure she will do."

The squire obeyed his wife's wish and then sat down with a sigh.

"Francesca is clear out at sea now," he said, "but she will return in six months, eh, Clara?"

"In six months she will return cured of the Leigh fever—or at least convalescent—or she will come back a light-o'-love. She is not the girl to mast carry her to pastures new for new lovers."

"And in the second, what then, Clara?"

"There is a choice of Atherton Mill and the Dower House—or of Garth Mill and the old Leigh home. Is there not a choice?"

"Not yet, not yet, Clara. Whatever is the use of handicapping fate by foresp eaking it? I'm very tired. Thy good day is quite enough. Let us say months alone. That is what I say, eh, Clara?"

"You are right, Rashleigh. A day and the comfortable night to round each day with a blessed sleep."

CHAPTER XVI.

Far out at sea! The squire had remembered the fact with a quick, sick terror of the heart; and at the same moment Francesca was beginning to realize the full importance of the voyage she had undertaken. She sat in her solitary state-room like a child cast adrift from home and love, and she knew already that the dark ship and the moaning winds and the breaking of the waves against her temporary shelter. The water was so close to her—only a plank between her and eternity!

At that hour she was too much depressed and too much terrified to remember how much in love she was. Her father and her dear home, and the orderly, calm life to which she was returning, were the supreme craving of her heart. Some days of silent misery followed, and then the worst was over; a brilliant sunshine, an atmosphere charged with oxygen and ozone soon made life not only endurable but also full of anticipated delights.

And after the infinite monotony of nine days at sea, how charming, how wonderful was the first glimpse of that great city rising, as it were from the sea! The happy month between Thanksgiving and Christmas, and New York was wearing its most brilliant decorations, and displaying all her beauty and all her wealth.

They had never been the least supposition that Lancelot had drifted so far north as New York, yet Francesca felt herself to be ever on the watch. The corners and gores in the hotel, the gay company in the theatres, the loitering crowd on the fashionable streets, were under her constant inspection. It was impossible to say in what place Lancelot might be found. Therefore she would seek him wherever her footsteps led her, and surely love would bring them in some happy hour together.

But New York had nothing to tell her and nothing to give her, and as far as Lancelot was concerned Washington and New Orleans were equally void of hope and comfort. However, as Dick said: "No one had the least expectation of either meeting or hearing of Lancelot in the United States. The young man has gone to Mexico, he had been heard of in Mexico, and it was his opinion he would be found in some such interior village of that country."

And Francesca answered: "To be sure. She did not expect anything until Mexico was reached."

Nevertheless, her effort to smile, knowing that her heart was heavy and anxious, and that homesickness were striving hard within it.

At length they were in Vera Cruz, that melancholy city of unfinished and decaying grandeur. Dick was now quite at home. Francesca was delighted to see him so important, so full of pleasant authority, so very much Senor Alderson. He addressed again a semi-Mexican costume; he spoke the language with a fluency and a force that astonished Francesca's ladies. Indeed, Loida timidly suggested "she believed Dick was really swearing at the servants; she hoped he was not, but it sounded very like it."

Dick only smiled at a still more pointed inquiry on this subject, though he was rather inclined to volunteer information of all kinds to his companions. And as it was not the

CONTRACTED CHRONIC DIARRHOEA WHILE IN THE PHILIPPINES.

"While with the U. S. Army in the Philippines I contracted chronic diarrhoea. I suffered severely from this terrible disease for over three years, and tried the skill of numerous physicians, but found nothing that did me any good until I tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, two small bottles of which entirely cured me and I have since had no return of the disease."—Herman Stein, 212 N. EARN A Comfortable Living WITH A Chatham Incubator

Poultry raising with a Chatham Incubator is a very profitable and easily managed occupation. Unless you want to go into it extensively it need take but very little of your time. Great Britain is always clamoring for more. That means a steady, market and good prices for chickens.

You cannot raise chickens successfully with a setting hen. She is wasteful time setting when she should be laying. While she is hatching and brooding a few chickens she could be laying five or six dozen eggs. The percentage of chickens she hatches is much less than that produced by the Chatham Incubator.

It will pay you to own a Chatham Incubator.

Chatham Incubators contain every improvement of importance in Incubator construction that has been produced. They are made of thoroughly seasoned wood, with two walls, case within case. Between these walls mineral wool is packed (not dust) the very best insulation. Each piece of the case is mortised and grooved and screwed, making the whole as solid as a rock. Chatham Incubators are equipped with scientifically perfect regulators which are an infallible means of regulating the temperature.

No cash to pay until October, 1905.

We will start you raising poultry for profit with a Chatham Incubator without one cent of money from you until next Fall. That means that you can take off seven or eight hatches and make considerable money out of the Incubator before the first payment becomes due.

I would make this offer if we were not certain that if you accept it you will get complete satisfaction, if we were not positive that the Chatham Incubator will pay you a handsome yearly income.

This is a straightforward offer. We make it to show our supreme confidence in the Chatham Incubator. We want you to accept this offer as we are sure of the satisfaction our Incubator will give. Every purchaser we have put out so far has made other orders in the same neighborhood.

Buy the 1905 one a Chatham Incubator at once, freight prepaid by us without any cost. Cash from you. You make your first payment in October, 1906, or if a Cash Buyer may get it cheaper. Could any offer be fairer or more generous?

Write us to-day for full particulars of our offer and mention this paper. Don't put it aside for another time as a good proposition may be without any time.

IT NEVER HAPPENED BEFORE.

Toronto, Jan. 4th.—"I tell you that in all my experience in the trials of liquor cases in Ontario, this was the first time that evidence has been taken after a plea of guilty was entered."

So said James Baverson, P.C., yesterday, and his experience as counsel for the license holders of the province, is greater than that of any other man in Ontario.

"In my 12 years or more of dealing with these matters I have had to deal with hundreds of cases and the action of the magistrate at Napanee is unprecedented.

Delineator for February at Hardy's.

The Delineator for February, with a beautiful art cover and a varied table of contents, is a most attractive number. As a frontispiece Mr. Alfred Stephenson gives an account of Grandi Ogden on its travels, a paper that is full of humor as well as of genuine interest and is actually illustrated. The romance of Chopin and the beautiful Countess Delphine Potocka is delightfully related by Gustav Kobbe in the first chapter of Mr. Kobbe's interesting paper Allan Sutherland tells something of the early romance of that matchless hymn of Henry Francis Lyte's, Abide With Me. There are also good stories by Mary Stewart Cutting, Annie Gritagon and Owen Oliver, in addition to the children's corner, which includes one of L. Frank Baum's "animal Fairy Tales" and a "Bob White Rabbit" story by Clara Morris Cook Stowe. Some of the early Spring styles are shown, and of further interest to women is the article on "The Making of a Housewife," containing a world of suggestions. The department "Good Looks," which discusses the forehead, and Mrs. Theodore W. Birney's contribution on "The Mistakes of Mothers" are other items especially helpful.

AN UNPRECEDENTED CASE.

Toronto January 11.—"I dont remember and other case where an hotelkeeper was prosecuted for serving legitimate guests at their rooms," said Police Magistrate Denison this afternoon at the recent developments at Napanee.

The case was dismissed outright as the evidence adduced in the case of a young man for an offence alleged to have been committed in the King Edward Hotel. One of the employes of the hotel said that he ask a guest about 3 a. m. one morning if he could serve anything to drink before the bars closed.

"Before the bars closed !" exclaimed the Magistrate, "and this was at 3 a. m. !"

Crown Attorney Curry rose to tell his Worship that the bars were closed to the public at the legal hour, 1 a.p. m., but open to orders from bona fide lodgers.

Mr. Curry pointed out that some years ago a similar case had been brought before the Magistrate, but withdrawn by the License Inspector before a decision was given.

"I would not advise a prosecution in such cases," said the Magistrate.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY, THIS HERE'S

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Cora Walker, of Porterville, California. There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventive of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other. The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale at Post Cross Drug Store. 10

1905...

At the beginning of the New Year we wish to thank our many customers and friends for their liberal patronage during the year 1904.

The year that has just closed has been a most gratifying one to this store. It brought to us many new customers, and we feel very few of our old ones were able to take excellent care of all who favored us with their business, and they were not backward about expressing their satisfaction.

Our aim is to make this a better store in 1905 than in 1904.

We realize that we will have to work hard and earnestly in order to accomplish this end, but we are prepared to do it.

We ask a continuance of your patronage, and believe that you will find abundant reason for keeping your name on our list of patrons this year.

WHO OWNS THE COUNTRY?

Toronto News.

"Do we mean to say that, because man is a Conservative, he shall not be a bailiff, or a Division Court clerk; or a registrar, or a County Court Clerk, or a County Crown attorney, or Crown Counsel at an assize, or a member of the civil service, or a Minister of the Crown in Canada? Has it been determined by some divine order that Liberals are the favored children of Providence, they only may handle the public revenues and live upon the public revenues, that they only may enact legislation and guard the 'heritage,' that with the defeat of John Sandfield Macdonald thirty-three years ago perished the last hope of Conservative partnership in the Government of this Province, and that it is the will of God that this condition of affairs shall be maintained by fraud, bribery, personation, ballot-box stuffing and subornation of perjury? The spectre of the Family Compact rises to confound the huge conceit, the intolerable monopoly and the unconscionable greed of office in which the whole notion is rooted.

"If the record of Conservative Administration were as satisfactory as Liberals contend, would that afford justification for West Elgin and South Oxford, for the three Norths, and the purchase of Gamey, for the Small rascalities, for the disfranchisement of North Renfrew, for the unconstitutional summoning of the Assembly in order to retain a majority which the courts have proved was obtained by corruption? Let us look at things in their true relations and sweep aside the cant and hunting of unrealities which our Parliamentary speakers," who ask the people of Ontario to declare that they have to do only with the administrative acts of the Government, and that flagrant violation of the spirit and letter of the constitution and deliberate and systematic corruption of the constituencies must pass unchallenged and unrebuked. And we greatly doubt if corrupt methods in the constituencies make for honest methods in the departments."

LOST IN LIFE'S VOYAGE

DAYS CONTINUALLY LOST BY BEING FRITTERED AWAY IN SILENCE.

THE VALUE OF EVERY MINUTE

Day Lost By Solar Reckoning in a Westerly Voyage Around the World Furnishes Preacher With Illustration For Powerful Sermon From the Text: "Whatsoever Thy Hand Findeth to Do, Do It With Thy Might."

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1903, by William Henry Bailey, of Toronto, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 8.—The day lost by solar reckoning in a westerly voyage around the world furnishes the preacher in this sermon with an illustration by which, as he shows, days are continually being lost in the voyage of life; text, Ecclesiastes ix., 10, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

There is a kind of loss of which I want to speak to you to-day. At the beginning of a new year its is impressed upon us with solemn import. Looking backward over the year that is gone, how sad is the thought of our lost days! Days human import, in which we might have done work for God which we have suffered to pass away in idleness. Days which can never be recalled which we have frittered away uselessly.

We all have the old adage that "time is money." We are all ready to grant that this axiom is true. "I as man have no regard for the time of other men," wrote Horace Greley, "why should he have for their money? What is the difference between stealing a man's hour and stealing his $5? Here are many men to whom each hour of the business day is worth more than $5. Although time means money to most of us, time should mean more than that. It is a sacred trust, committed to us, for the right use of which we shall have to give account. I think enough is the portion we can give unto to our Master's service. I we waste it we defraud God.

We waste these days simply by wasting here a minute and there a minute. This thought was brought home to me in my tour around the world. In 1893 my father and I left our homes in the east and started on our journey. We followed the course of the setting sun. We travelled from New York to Pittsburg, from Pittsburg to Chicago, from Chicago to St. Louis, from St. Louis to Denver, and then to San Francisco. We zigzagged up and down, but always kept pushing toward the west. At San Francisco we set sail for the Sandwich Islands. Then we went on to Samoa. Several times we would stop two or three days in a town, sometimes a full week. It took us seven months to encircle the globe. Each day, as a rule, was for us not twenty-four hours, but twenty-four hours and ten or fifteen or even thirty minutes long. Of course you grasp my meaning. We were lengthening our days because we were traveling westward.

How was we to straighten out our calendar? This was the way we did it. One night we went to bed on Wednesday. The next morning when we awoke it was Friday. There, in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, we lost a full day. How did that day disappear?

As I sat that Friday morning, after Thursday had been dropped out of my calendar, I said to myself, "Yes, yes. This is the way many days are lost for Christ in our great journey of life. Here it is a few minutes wasted for Christ in the morning. There it is a few minutes wasted at noon or at evenide or at night. These few minutes do not seem to amount to much at the time, but in the aggregate they make up whole days, weeks, months and perhaps whole years of wasted time that might have been spent in service for the Master."

How many days that might have been given to Christ have we lost? How do we lose them? First, by not starting the work of each day promptly and energetically as we ought to do, by oversleeping in the morning or by dawdling through our dressing, by lingering too long at the breakfast table, by yawning and stretching and idly building air castles in bed after the rising bell has rung, by ignoring the "get up" call, which King Solomon in the sixth chapter of Proverbs pounds upon every bedroom door when he calls: "How long will thou sleep, O sluggard? When will thou arise out of thy sleep? Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep. So shall thy poverty come as one that traveleth and thy want as an armed man." Lord Wilmington once declared that the cause of the failure of the famous English statesman, the Duke of Newcastle, was that he never started the day's work on time. "He loses half an hour every morning and runs after it during the whole day without being able to overtake it." Many men and women are wasting precious days that might be used for Christ by not getting up in time and starting the work of the day on time and systematically and promptly meeting all demands as they come up for settlement.

THE VALUE OF EVERY MINUTE

This warning against the wasted minutes of the early morning is far more necessary than some of us have heretofore supposed. When we waste the early minutes of the morning we waste the very best minutes of the whole day. The old proverb says: "Beauty sleep is always taken before 12 o'clock at night. Every hour of sleep before midnight is worth two taken in bed after that time." Along exactly the same line of thought I say, "Every hour of work done before 9 or 10 o'clock in the morning is worth at least two hours of work after 12 o'clock noon." There is something about the atmosphere of the early morning, something about the exhilaration of the early morning, that arouses us and rouses us and drives us on and clarifies our brains, so that we can accomplish at least double the amount in any hour then than in any half hour of the afternoon or evening. "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise" has just as much truth tacked on to the last alliteration as to the first.

How do we diminish our service for Christ by lost days? By not improving the fragments of time that lie scattered about us during the day's work, by not utilizing those extra few minutes here and there to fit ourselves intelligently by reading and study for the work God has given us to do. Here is another that God will let us interpret the passage. "Ask, and ye shall receive; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened to you," when our lips are dumb, when our feet are palsied and know not enough the right paths to tread, when our hands are helpless in their stupidities? Can the blind run and leap like a fawn? Can the deaf hear? Are they taught to creep and to walk?

We must have intelligence in the direction of our lives, or the all our work will go for naught. What would you think if one summer day I should walk up on the captain's bridge of a steamer and say: "Captain, I would like to take charge of the steamer. Would you please obey my command?" "Where would you take the ship?" "To Australia, I would answer." "Do you know anything about the laws of navigation?" "No." "Then I cannot let you take command." And so I would put the compass. The great surface of the sea is the same everywhere. You have no guideposts as on the mountain sides. The first thing you would do would be to get the ship off its course. It would take you many days or weeks to regain our course, or perhaps we would never be able to do so. We might just as well be a dishonest captain made the pilgrim fathers land on the cold, bleak New England shore when they had set sail for the southern lands. No matter how good a man's purpose may be, if he know not the laws of navigation he cannot guide his boat to the right harbor.

We must have intelligence to fit us for the duties of life, and we do most successful men get that necessary intelligence? I will tell you. It is by improving the fragments, the few stray moments of the day and the evening, which, as scraps and fragments, crowd around them.

Young man, be careful about the few moments which you have been wasting each day. Guard those extra few moments for intelligent study. Look out for that wasted half hour during the midday meal. Look out for the time you have been accustomed to spend every morning and evening in the street car on your way to business looking idly around or trying to pass it away in reading the advertisements or the sporting columns in the daily newspapers. Look out for that half hour which you fool away in your room before you turn in for the night. The domestic work of intellectual growth can be done if only the few wasted moments of each day are gathered up for close application to books. One day Philip of Maxedon, father of Alexander the Great, sent a gift to Dionysius, the son of Dionysius, the great general of Syracuse. He said to the son: "I do not believe your father could have ever written the odes and tragedies attributed to his pen during the days of his youth." "My father," the son replied, "wrote those masterpieces during the time you and I were dawdling away our time in feasting." Young man, better improve your stray moments as did Dionysius the younger, than waste them away as most folks are doing, with their lips pressed against the chalice of pleasure, and their consecrate whole days in life's journey to making yourself better and truer than to drop them into uselessness, as we lost our Thursday in the smooth waters of the Pacific in our journey around the world.

But, though many minutes, which in the aggregate amount to many days, are lost to the service of Christ on account of our negligence, how many are lost to Christ by reason of people who seem to have nothing to do themselves and who seem to be possessed with the idea that we have nothing to do? Alas, how many mornings there have been when we arose with clear minds and hearts anxious for study! There have been when the clock of flying doves, seemed ready to roost on our study desk. Then ideas came not as a thundering scourge, but marshaled in great armies, ready to wheel in line to attack at our command. Then horror seemed to palsy our fingers. The doorbell rang. It came a threatening nomad ready to invade upon our premises for the next two hours. Then the beautiful, the ever comely hapded. He had piled upon his back all the gossip and the "small talk" of the neighborhood. He had great carcasses halted in your front yard, with all the scandals of the city's beautiful reputations of the homes he had been lately pestering. And he talks and he talks until like a driven away all our ideas and all our desire for work and all our ambition, and he leaves in his wake a wrecked day.

How many errands of mercy and pressing duties in the home have been ruined in the busy housewife's life by a prolonged visit of one of these "daughters of iniquity" called the "destroyers of time!" They criticise your husband and your children. They find fault with the arrangements of your home. They find fault with your dressmakers. They try to steal your cooks. They find fault with everything, yet they stay on. They are respectable thieves of the time, who cannot be landed in jail, but they are a bigger nuisance to you than if they stole the bread and cake from your cupboards. Ah, these destroyers of time! How many times our lost moments which in the aggregate have amounted to precious days of work, have been lost for us in the journey of life, with its vital opportunities, through their unwelcome visits! Well wrote Oliver Wendell Holmes in reference to such as these:

Soon such as lounge through afternoons and eves
And on thy dial write, "Beware of thieves."
Felon of minutes, never taught to feel
The worth of treasures which thy fingers steal;
Pick my bet pocket of its silver time;
But spare the right—it holds my golden time.

God says: "Work, work, work! Work for the night cometh when no man can work." That means we must fight against those who would steal from us our precious moments as well as against our own slothful natures, and of all warnings for busy men I think this one of the most important. Where there is one busy man who would voluntarily waste his time there are ten lazy fellows who are ready to waste it for him. Look out that these despised "nomads" may not ruin any more of your days of usefulness.

In heathen mythology there lived a god by the name of Baldur. His mother, Frigga, wanted to make him immortal. She demanded from the stones, the trees, from fire and water and all metals and reptiles and herbs and poisons, an oath that they never would kill him. These all gave a willing oath. Then the gods, believing that Baldur was immortal, began to strike him with swords, spears, battleaxes and darts, but he harmed him not. At last one of the gods picked up a piece of mistletoe. He threw it at Baldur. The little twig pierced the skin and the heart and Baldur dropped a corpse. He had forgotten to get the oaths of the trees of mistletoe. They seem to be harmless. But are they? Like the despised mistletoe of heathen mythology they may be fatal for whole days, whole months and years, that should have been used in service of the Master.

World God we might one and all fight and relentlessly against the destroyers of time. You cannot afford to give away what is not your own. Time belongs not to you, but to another. "Go with me to accept this afternoon, said one salesman to another who was employed in a Boston warehouse. "I cannot this afternoon," was the answer. "My time is not my own, it belongs to another." "To whom?" "To my employer." The following Sabbath afternoon the same salesman said to the clerk, "Come and go riding with me this afternoon." "I cannot," said the other. "My time is not my own, it belongs to another." "To whom?" "To God, who said, 'Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.'" Will you and I waste our precious moments hereafter? Shall we not always feel that in reality time does not belong to us? It belongs, in the higher, nobler and purer sense, to them whom we are sent to serve and to the great God, who will demand at the judgment an accounting for every moment we frittered away.

This thought flashed upon me as I sat upon the deck of the steamship Alameda, trying to figure out how I lost that day. If instead of following the setting sun I had been going toward the east I would not have lost a day, but gained an extra day; if instead of going from New York to San Francisco and New Zealand I had gone through the Suez Canal to Australia, instead of having lost a Thursday, I would have had two Thursday days in one week. It mattered nothing on our voyage which course we took, but in the voyage of life it matters a great deal. They who take the "star in the east" as their guide in the journey of life, who follow Christ, who are led by him, have no lost days. In this life they have infinite delights and in the end eternal life.

In which direction are you sailing? Are you going toward the heaven of peace? Are you and I traveling away from God? Are we following the "setting sun," where we will find our "lost days," or are we leading toward the "star of the east," where we shall have our "found days?" Are we sailing from God at a point where we shall crash upon the rocks of sin, or are we sailing toward the harbor of peace, where we shall meet all our dear ones with Christ?

But perhaps, after all, the caption of my sermon is a misleading one. There is truly no "lost day" in a man's life. There is no such thing as a "found day." All days will be "found days" at the judgment seat of Christ, where they shall receive the eternal salvation or our eternal condemnation. May all our days be days which shall be blessed by consecration to the service of the Master, and may this day be the best of all "found days," for it is here and now decided for or against God, for the golden sunrise of that millennial dawn, where sin and evil days have forever passed away!

He Has First Locomotive.

William T. Huckett, one of the oldest locomotive engineers of the country, died at the Kansas City, Mo., on Christmas Day. Mr. Huckett brought the first locomotive to the Kansas City Previous to his arrival in Kansas City he was a resident of Canada, being the first engineer to run a train into Toronto. The Ontario, Simcoe and Huron Railroad was completed in 1851. Its stockholders were composed mostly Englishmen and Canadians, and he ran the Landy Elgin the first locomotive built in Toronto.

The Flock Master.

It is easier to prevent the diseases of sheep than to cure them, and it is easier to cure them in the first stages than after they are thoroughly established. The flockmaster should be alert and observant, ready for any emergency, quick of thought and prompt of action, making the "stitch in time."—Wool Markets and Sheep.

MATERIAL PROSPERITY AND SPIRITUALITY.

In the February number of The New Idea Woman's Magazine, Esperance Goodlove, who writes in a bright, breezy way on business matters and their interests, discusses "The aim of business women, which are apparently beginning to assume a definite form." She speaks of women who build houses, amuse themselves by the use of money, and indulge in the expensive luxury of traveling as a hobby. Any ambition she regards as a good one, and even material ideals she considers as legitimate and right. "I heard a most inspiring sermon the other day," she says, "from which the preacher, referring to things, said: 'Nothing, my friends, belongs to another.' 'To whom?' 'To God, who said, 'Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.'" Will you and I waste our precious moments hereafter? Shall we not always feel that in reality time does not belong to us? It belongs, in the higher, nobler and purer sense, to them whom we are sent to serve and to the great God, who will demand at the judgment an accounting for every moment we frittered away.

THE WONDERS OF ELECTRICITY

Now Used for Purifying Flour

The New Process Makes Bread and Pastry—Lighter, Sweeter, Whiter and More Wholesome—Womer of Canada Delighted.

What is Electricity?
nobody knows, not even Edison.
What does it do?
everybody knows.
It runs street cars—telephones—automobiles, furnishes light—heat—power
—detects and defeats disease
—enables the doctors to see clear through a man.
Performs all sorts of wonders —not least of which is acting as

Nature's Great Purifier

because when the world's dust, dirt and disease germs have been taken up by the air, and hang over the earth in clouds—electricity shoots lightning through the clouds —flash!—boom!—rumble!
—down comes the rain, the atmosphere is purified and we exclaim
—"how nice and fresh the air is since that thunder storm!"

Electricity in the Flour Mill.

Something like that but minus the thunder and lightning, —silently—swiftly—surely electricity performs its miracle in the "Royal Household" mill—the only mill in the Dominion of Canada where electricity is used for purifying purposes.

When the grinders — separators — sifters—air-lifters, have ground and reground — purified and repurified the flour again and again, all down through the seven floors of the big "Royal Household" mill until it is nearer perfection than flour ever was before—electricity says—

"I can do more than that" and sending its mysterious charge of

through the flour, removes the last, least trace of impurity—gives it new life and greater energy—makes a flour that is pure enough,
sweet enough,
white enough,

to be worthy the name and fame of "Royal Household"—the flour that is more delicious—more healthful—more satisfying than any other flour in the world.

—the flour that makes the bread and pastry used on the tables of Royalty—

the flour that thousands of Canadian women are now using to make better bread—better pastry than they ever made before.

Every day hundreds of testimonials are coming to the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. Ltd., Montreal, from women who are using Royal Household Flour, according to the "Royal Household" recipes and say they are delighted with it.

The recipes will be sent free for the asking

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

"That man has a perfect right to dictate to his wife."
"How so?"
"Oh, she married his stenographer."

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly, subdues the pain and disease.

The Rev. Mr. Fourthly—I hope, brother Hardsely, you are not tinctured with anthropomorphism.
Deacon Hardsely, wondering where he had heard that word before—Well, sometimes I think I am, and then, again, I don't know. I've often wished that the grip good and hard it always leaves a lot of nasty and unpleasant feelings you don't go over for a long time—I know that from experience.

Frequent Disorder.—At the first symptoms of internal disorder, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills should be resorted to immediately. Two doses of these exhilarating pellets, taken before going to bed, followed by one or two more pills for two or three nights in succession, will serve as a powerful antidote of dyspepsia and all the disagreeable train of ills in the train of that foul disorder. The means are simple when the way is known.

Farmer Jones—Well, that's one thing I like about these plaguey automobile jobs, anyway.
Farmer Brown—What is that?
Farmer Jones—They won't mind getting killed themselves any more than they do killing other folk!

Dr. Not Delay.—When, through constipated digestive organs, poison finds its way into the blood, the prime consideration is to get the poison out as rapidly and as thoroughly as possible. Delay may mean disaster. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a most valuable and effective medicine to combat the intruder with. They never fail. They go at once to the seat of the trouble and work a permanent cure.

"You don't mean to say you gave that tramp something to eat?" gasped Mr. Pells.
"Yes, I just couldn't help it," replied his wife. "He reminded me so much of you."
"You mean he looked like me?"
"Oh, no. But, when I asked him to do a little work for me he said he couldn't 'time.'"

Had La Grippe—Mr. A. Nickerson, farmer, Dutton, writes, "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about one year when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the end of which time I was completely cured."

Tommy—Pop, what are the cardinal virtues?
Tommy's Pop—Well, painting the town red isn't one of them, my son.

Murphy—"Father, phwat's this consumption they're talkin' about in the newspapers?"
Father—"Why, it means that you have to volunteer to fight whether ye want to or not."

Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup stands at the head of the list for all diseases of the throat and lungs. It acts like magic in breaking up a cold, a cough is soon subdued, tightness of the chest is relieved, even the worst case of consumption is relieved, while in recent cases it may be said never to fail. It is a medicine prepared from the active principles or virtues of several medicinal herbs, and can be depended upon for all pulmonary complaints.

Jack—I hear Mr. Nokoyne married an old flame of his.
Jessie—Yes; and I hear that the old flame has to light the fire every morning.

In some of the Swiss valleys the inhabitants are all afflicted with a goitre or "thick neck." Instead of regarding this as a deformity they seem to think it a natural feature of physical development. The tourists passing through the valleys are sometimes struck by the gotrous inhabitants, because they are not afflicted with offensive breathing. Thus a form of disease may become so common that it is regarded as a natural and necessary condition of life. It is so, to a very great extent, with what are called diseases of women. Every woman suffers more or less from irregularity, ulceration, debilitating drains, or displacements, and this suffering is so common and so universal, that many women look upon it as a condition natural and necessary to their sex. But it is a condition as unnatural as it is unnecessary. The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription strengthens the delicate womanly organs and regulates the womanly functions, so that woman is practically delivered from the pain and misery which eat up ten years of her life—between the ages of fifteen and forty-five. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong and sick women well.

CURES COLDS IN ONE HOUR.

Many cold cures are dangerous because composed of deadening opiates. But Ingram's healing Cataline cures your colds in one hour and is both harmless and delightful to use. Sneezing, the worst colds, sneezing, sniffling colds with running eyes are stopped very quickly when the balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is inhaled. Breathing once acts like a charm on colds, kills them outright, prevents their return a few hours later. For colds, catarrh and throat trouble use only Catarrhozone. ODESSA.

We, the members of Odessa lodge No. 287, A.O.U.W., wish to express our deep sense of sorrow at the seemingly untimely and sudden death of our esteemed brother, William L. Babcock. Words seem inadequate to express our feelings of so great a loss. Our deceased brother has always manifested a deep interest in the well being of our lodge and doing any work necessary to its upbuilding, and this lodge wishes to express our deep sorrow and sympathy for his widow and only daughter, as well as the loss (his lodge sustains and the relatives, friends and associates of our esteemed brother sustain a loss and friend that can never be replaced.

Such a noble life and consistent citizen is missed in every phase of life in this vicinity, but we all realize that our loss is his gain, as our faith leads us to believe that he is in the realms of bliss to forever praise the God of Heaven.

Signed on behalf of the lodge,

On Monday of this week the villagers were shocked to hear that our old resident, Mrs. Geo. Clow, had smothered to death by the escaping from a stove during the night. She had been living with Mrs. Daniel Rose for some time. Mrs. Rose had gone away to spend New Years, leaving the old lady with her boy, Ray Rose. When Mrs. Rose came home Monday she found the old lady dead, and the boy not nearly so. By the untiring efforts of Dr. H. E. Day the boy is doing nicely and will be around in a few days.

On Tuesday of this week as Mr and Mrs. N. F. Snider were leaving the village to visit Mr. Geo. Lang their horse became frightened and ran away. As they ran by the woollen mill the rear sleigh struck a post, breaking the sleigh, smashing the rig and injuring Mr. Snider so that he died from the effects on Wednesday about 3 o'clock.

PALE WEAK GIRLS.

Obtain Bright Eyes, Rosy Cheeks and Perfect Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Miss Jennie Burrows, Rigault, Que., says, "I write to thank you for the wonderful benefit your Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done me. I am now 22 years of age, but from the time I was fifteen I did not enjoy good health. A couple of years ago while attending school I grew worse, and the Sisters feared consumption for me. After treating me for some time, without any improvement, he told me that I must discontinue my studies. When I got home I was sent to Caledonia Springs. The first month I was there it seemed to do me, but, like all the medicine I had taken, the help was only temporary, and I relapsed into my former condition. I grew so pale and wax-like that strangers called me the wax figure. My heart would flutter so violently as to almost drive me wild, and at other times I would grow so dizzy that I could not stand. All this time I was taking treatment, but all the time was getting worse and worse, and I hardly hoped ever to be better again. At this time I read in a newspaper of a somewhat similar case cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I determined to try them. By the time I had used a half dozen boxes I had improved a great deal. From that on, week by week, I gained in health and strength, until by the time I had used eleven boxes I was enjoying better health than I had done for years. I am now well and strong, and thank God for the blessing of good health and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Pink Pills have conferred upon me. I would strongly advise every pale and ailing girl who reads this to lose no time in taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured Miss Burrows because they made the rich red blood necessary to drive disease from the system. Pink Pills go straight down to the root of the matter in the blood and cure that. That is why they cure diseases due to bad blood. Anaemia, palenese, eruptions of the skin, palpitation, headache, kidney troubles, rheumatism, neuralgia, and a host of other troubles, are all due to bad blood, and are speedily routed from the system by the rich, red blood made by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Don't take a substitute; see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is printed on the wrapper around each box. If in doubt you can get the pills by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CLEARED HIS CLIENT.

The Peculiar Way a Lawyer Is Said to Have Won a Case.

They tell a good story at the expense of W. B. Rodgers, the only lawyer at the Allegheny county bar—or in the United States, for that matter—who holds the distinction of having been city attorney of the three cities of one county at various times. He was counsel some time ago for a man charged with a serious offense, and on the day of the trial the defendant was in a condition that would certainly not have improved his chances of acquittal. Attorney Rodgers was worried, but he is a general in addition to being a political diplomat. He locked his client in a room in a downtown hotel and then studied out the knotty problem before him.

One of the most prominent oil operators of Pittsburg and one of his most intimate friends happened to die in office shortly before he was ready to try the case. It was only a social call for a quiet chat, and Mr. Rodgers requested that his friend go into the courtroom with him. The oil operator sat beside Mr. Rodgers at the counsel table, and during the progress of the case he took little note of what was going on. He was not interested. Several times witnesses pointed in his direction, as did Mr. Rodgers, but the oil operator thought nothing of it. Mr. Rodgers tried to be indifferent. None of the witnesses appeared to know the operator—at least they said that they did not—and the prosecutor also stated that he did not know the man seated beside Mr. Rodgers. The jury naturally thought the man was Mr. Rodgers' client, and when the right bower of Bigelow at the conclusion of the testimony got up and said, "That is my case; this is not the man," not many minutes were wasted in bringing in a verdict of acquittal.

The oil operator accompanied Mr. Rodgers out of court, and it was not until they were a safe distance away from the seat of justice that Mr. Rodgers confided to his friend that he had posed as the defendant in the case. The operator was mad all through when he first heard of it, but the ridiculousness of the situation appealed to him, and he took it as a huge joke and as a sample of the diplomacy of one who could pull a brand out of the burning. It is doubtful whether the brilliant city attorney would acknowledge the story, but his friends say it is true.—Pittsburg Gazette.

An Idea In Billboards.

An American or Englishman looks in vain on the streets in Freiburg for any of the huge advertising billboards that disfigure to such a great extent his home cities. Flashing electric signs, that blaze away half the heaven by night and demand in green and red and blue letters that one use "Brown's pure rye" or somebody else's "little liver pills" are also absent. In place of these necessities of nineteenth century commercialism Freiburg has established a system of municipal bulletin boards and columns, where one-half of these display places in the city, situated where they will attract the most attention without injuring in any way the appearance of the street as a whole. A person having something to announce goes to the city hall with his bills, pays his fee, which is 25 cents per square foot for the first day and 10 cents for each succeeding day, with liberal reductions for long periods, and goes out. On his way home he will see the poster already sticking up his notice.—Pilgrim.

The Real as Imitation.

Professor Ray Lankester, the British scientist, has brought to light a curious fact in connection with dealers in osprey plumes. Some time ago the Princess of Wales placed herself at the head of a movement to discourage the use of real osprey plumes in order to save the birds from slaughter. The result was an immediate decline in the sale, since fashion could not fly in the face of the wishes of royalty. Recently facts have come to the notice of Professor Lankester showing that among certain fashionable milliners it has become a practice to sell genuine plumes as imitations.

An Old Fact In History.

It is an old fact in modern history that the tombe of the kings of Sardinia and the cradle of their dynasty, Savoy, are now in the hands of France. Both the Kings Victor Emmanuel II. and Humbert I. are buried in Italy. The rest, from the thirteenth century and numbering twenty-eight, is in the abbey church of Haute-Combe, near Chambery, which the peace of Villafranca in 1860 transferred to France, with the rest of the province, in return for French aid against Austria. By a strange oversight the tombs of the kings were not "extraterritorialised."

Remarkable Operation.

A remarkable operation was recently performed at the St. Antoine hospital, Paris, by the extraction of a large nail from a man's lung. After six preliminary experiments the foreign body was located and seen through the "bronchial scope." The first attempt at extraction failed, but the second was completely successful, the nail being dislodged from an inner ramification of the right lung and removed up the windpipe by means of a magnet, the operation lasting only five minutes.

Slavery's Emblem.

It is lawful to go without a vest. It is permissible to turn off city pavements to carry your coat on your arm, just to show that you have one. You may carry your hat in your hand—same reason. But never, never, under any circumstances, wear a collar, no matter how hot and uncomfortable it makes you. No wonder the collar is an emblem of slavery.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

One Million Dollars

Have Been Spent to Give Liquozone Free to the Sick.

When we purchased the rights to Liquozone, we decided to buy the first bottle and give it free to each sick one we learned of. We published the offer in nearly every newspaper in America, and 1,300,000 people have accepted it. In one year it has cost us over one million dollars to announce and fulfill the offer.

Don't you realize that a product must have wonderful merit to make such an offer possible? We have never asked a soul to buy Liquozone. We have published no testimonials, no physician's endorsement. We have simply asked the sick to try it—try it at our expense. And that is all we ask you, if you need it.

Kills Inside Germs.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 15 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to create fine health. Its effects are far-reaching, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact that gives Liquozone its worth to humanity. And that worth is so great that, after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, we paid $100,000 for the American rights.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these diseases is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

O'Connell's Wonderful Oratory.

Daniel O'Connell, the Irish orator, spoke in the Corn Exchange, London, many years ago, and John Coleman, an old English actor, pictured him as follows: "The audience hung spellbound on the utterance of the great orator. His resonant and magnificent voice, flavored with its rich Hibernian accent, held both soul and sense captive. As for me, my Celtic blood took fire, my heart throbbed with passionate indignation or melted into tears as he dwelt upon the wrongs of my kindred country. Never, surely, was such a born orator! Stern men cried one moment and laughed the next. Strange to say, they never laughed in the wrong place, though once at least he afforded them a unique opportunity. As he approached the end of his oration, carried away by his theme, he threw up his arms (a brown 'jazey'), put it in his hat and mopped his beautiful bald brow with a great flaming crimson bandanna. The action produced the natural and appropriate that no one seemed to think it absurd or even incongruous."

Human Ear a Deformity.

"While the ears of animals," said a naturalist, "are erect and comely, the human ear is pendent, unsightly and flattened. It is man's intelligence that is responsible for this deformity of his ear. Man's brain, you see, has made his head too top heavy. An animal's neck alone furnishes enough support in sleep, but man's neck is too weak to sustain his brain weighed skull, which in consequence must be laid, with the ear underneath, upon a pillow. Man, I have no doubt, had an erect, smooth, shapely ear in the beginning, but his head, with its developing brain, outgrew his neck's power to support it. Thence came the headrest or pillow with its consequent crushing and crumpling of the ear, and thence came the ear of today—a deformity which, being universal, is not deemed a deformity at all."

A Silver Library.

There is in the royal library of Kensington a unique collection, consisting of a collection of twenty books, mostly theological, bound in pure silver and having a rich, symbolical ornamentation partly in gold. The library has been in possession of this treasure since 1611. These books were made by order of Albert, the first duke of Prussia, in the latter half of the fifteenth century. It is supposed that they were made at Nuremberg, where Albert was stationed for three years. Through the efforts of Ostander and afterward Luther, Duke Albert became a friend of the reformation. Copies of the silver library are made accessible to students by taking bellographic copies of the same.

THE COMMERCIAL

THE CHOIR IS ENTERTAINED.

The boys of St. Mary Magdalene's choir, 22 in number, were entertained by Mrs. J. C. Pringle, at her residence on Dundas st., on Tuesday evening last. Dainty refreshments by the lady and from the apple green by the boys they enjoyed themselves immensely. There was an abundance of good things to eat and drink, and he say that the boys did themselves justice in a most way of expressing the fact. The programme, which consisted of vocal and instrumental music, sleight of hand, and Ledergermain, was furnished by the Anson Family, and were heartily applauded by the boys. After singing God Save the King, the boys gave three cheers for their hostess, and went home highly pleased with this their first entertainment.

LAID AT REST.

Most of our citizens were surprised to learn of the death of Mrs. Carrie Ruttan, relict of the late Allan Ruttan M.D., Saturday afternoon last. Deceased had enjoyed excellent health until a few days before her death, and but few were aware of her illness, which terminated so suddenly. Deceased was in her seventy-sixth year, her husband having died some years ago. The by, and Mrs. Ruttan came to Napanee in 1864, and were continuous residents of our town until called to join the countless throng "who rest from their labors." Mrs. Ruttan was during her long life jealously devoted to her husband and family, and was highly esteemed by a large circle of friends, who long since learned its worth. She is survived by three sons, Prof. Fulford Ruttan, of McGill University, Montreal, Mr. G. F. Ruttan, of Napanee, and Dr. A. M. Ruttan, of Lloydminster, N.W.T. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon, service being held at St. Mary Magdalene Church, of which deceased was a valued member.

NOT WORTH WHILE TO GET ANGRY.

Anger is one of the great enemies to domestic comfort. If a woman has a bad temper and lets it "fly" at every provocation, her home will soon become a perfect bedlam. A woman who always kept her temper placid was one day asked how she managed to always appear so unruffled.

"Ah," she replied, "there are very few things in this world worth being angry about, so when I feel annoyance rising within me I ask myself quite judicially, 'Is this worth being angry over?' and in 999 cases out of a thousand my answer is 'No.'"

GOOD SHOOTING AT SEA.

Toronto News.

A shooting performance by one of the big ships of the Mediterranean fleet shows the efficiency of some vessels in the British navy. The practice was carried on under conditions somewhat like those of actual fighting. The ships steamed 14 knots—more than 16 miles—an hour. The range was unknown when the order to fire was given. It varied during the three minutes for which the firing lasted from 4,500 to 5,000 yards. The target was the actual size of the midship portion of a battleship. In the three minutes allowed the Alcaid, a ship of armored cruiser recently built, fired sixty rounds from one broadside, and of these forty-four were direct hits. The other large ships did nearly as well. An enemy which received forty-four hits within three minutes from shells weighing one hundred pounds and upwards would be likely to have enough of it.

HOW HICCOUGHS WERE CURED.

Louisville Courier-Journal.

A young man, pale and weak, entered a physician's office.

"Doctor," he said, "I have had—he—I have had the hiccoughs for six hours. They are exhausting me."

"Let me see your tongue," said the physician. "Out with it. Oh farther out. Out as far as you can put it. That is it. Now hold it still there until I go to the back office and get a depressor."

"By jove, he's long," the young man thought. "I wonder what can be keeping him?"

"Just a minute," the physician called from the next room. "Keep your tongue out. I'll be there in a minute."

But it must have been five minutes before he returned. He was smiling. "Did you keep your tongue out all the time?" he said.

"Yes," the young man answered.

"And you didn't hiccough, did you?"

"No."

"Then," said the physician, "you are cured."

The young man, as a matter of fact, was cured. The protracted fear in his tongue had cured him. The physician said that this treatment rarely, if ever, failed to wash away the most obstinate attack of hiccoughs.

The trial of the corrupationists at the "Soo," which began on Monday, was full of sensations. Lack Kennedy told how he had been invited into the conspiracy by C. B. A little girl named Lydia Mair, of Regina, sustained injuries by burning, from which she died. The child, accompanied by a sister, had retired to her room, and there began playing with a celluloid comb and a lamp, in some way she allowed the comb to catch fire from the lamp, and the flames quickly caught on her hair, with fatal results.

It has been proposed to dam Port Arthur harbor at the entrance and pump out the water, preparatory to raising the Russian war vessels. Mrs. Adam Lloyd, of Moneymore, ten miles from Tweed, was found dead to death about 8 o'clock Monday morning. No explanation can be given for the unfortunate occurrence. Deceased was sixty-eight years old.

She put the church door behind her, and was unable to open the porch door, which was locked by a spring lock. In an account he rendered at the time of his exoneration he claimed damages to the amount of over $200,000, mainly for losses he suffered in Australian gold shares, Norwegian copper property and a patent, all of which he could not properly look after while in prison.

Carscallen's Majority 65

The campaign, though a hot one in Lennox, was conducted with the best of feeling by the opposing parties, each claiming they were sure of victory. Disagreeable features of the fight were the attempt to make political capital out of the fact that Mr. Whitney ordered a drink to be sent to his room at the close of the meeting in the Opera House, and the puerile and vulgar slurs and doggerel which appeared in our contemporary, all of which injured Mr. Madole's cause materially.

The surprise of the campaign was the majority given for Mr. Madole in Napanee, 43, a gain of 39 over the election in 1902. This caused considerable uneasiness in the Conservative ranks early in the evening, and a corresponding inflation of the local Liberals. It was however, of short duration, the returns announced from the various polls throughout the riding later showing the probable election of Mr. Carscallen by a small majority. Outside of Napanee Mr. Carscallen made gains over the vote at the last Provincial election as follows:—Addphustown 15, Bath 16, Ernesttown 25, South Fredericksburgh 30, North Fredericksburgh 22, Amherst Island and Richmond remained as they were before.

About ten o'clock the band made its appearance on the scene and serenaded those in the Conservative committee rooms. Mr. Carscallen made a short address, thanking those present for their successful efforts in his behalf, after which he and Mr. U. M. Wilson were carried to a sleigh and dragged home in triumphal procession by about a hundred ardent supporters.

The day was one of the wildest of the season, and in the country the roads were next to impassable. Ardent supporters of the different parties waded several miles through the snow to exercise their franchise. There were many disappointed voters who were unable to reach the polls, owing to the state of the roads.

A special of the B. Q. R. from the north, with about a score of voters, arrived at Napanee about 4.30 in the afternoon, but steam went down on the locomotive before they reached the Driving Park, and they were unable to get through to Desoronto in time to vote.

The defeated party take the result quite philosophically, and the utmost good feeling exists.

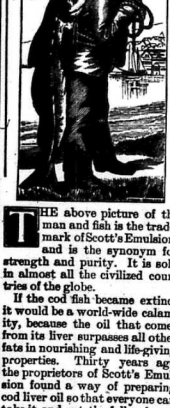
HOW TO CATCH A TIGER.

When staring at a tiger or a rhino or what not in a menagerie, did you ever wonder how it got there? Who first suggested to him, in his native jungle or swamp, that he should go into a cage and take a long sea journey for your edification?

A. W. Keller, in the February Mc-Clure's, tells of the wholesale ways of "Wild Animal Trapping"—a tale of daring ingenuity and exciting sport. If a full-grown tiger is made to be himself up in a knot; how charging rhino mother is hamstrung, that her calf may be captured; how a mighty herd of wild elephants is "silooed" for miles through the forests, with horns and tom-toms, like so many chickens; this and much more is well described. There are also dashing drawings by George Varian.



THE above picture of the man and fish is the trade-mark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

DAIRY INSTRUCTION.

The Results of this Work are Apparent.

It is gratifying to the Dairymen's Associations and the Department of Agriculture to know that the work of Instruction carried on for the benefit of Dairy farmers, owners of creameries and factories, and makers, has been productive of such marked results. The quality of cheese throughout the season has been above the average, especially during the latter part of the season, and the perceptible gain in the factories receiving instruction has been far smaller than from those not receiving instruction. The balance in favor of the farmer is about 1 to 3. Cheese of inferior samples of milk among those tested by Instructors during the past summer was about 40 per cent. less than last year, and the number of samples tested was much larger than ever before. Another important fact showing the past summer expended at least $125,000 in improvements, fully $40,000 more than will be expending year. The expenditure of such a large amount of money in a season of low prices shows that progress have faith in the future of the industry, and are willing to do what they can to insure the production of a first class article.

It is the intention of the Department to pursue the system of instruction more vigorously during the coming season, and with the co-operation of the farmers, the factorymen, and Instructors, we may rest assured that the high standard of cheese will not only be maintained, but that another step in advance will be made.

HORRIBLE MASSACRE.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 22.—The sacrifice has been made. Thousands have fallen to-day, willing martyrs in the cause of human liberty, in the belief that their blood will seal the doom of Russian tyranny and oppression. Not since the massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day has a civilized community witnessed such a massacre as stains the latest page of Russian history. Its victims cannot yet be numbered. The official estimate puts the number dead at 2,000 and the wounded at 5,000.

The last act of the bloody drama was the deliberate slaughter of hundreds of onlookers in the centre of the city. After all the organized attempts of the insurrectionists to march to the Winter Palace had failed, a large body of Cossacks was turned loose by the authorities against fifty thousand people standing in the streets, with orders to kill without mercy.

THE STORY OF THE BLOODY DAY

It is necessary to tell the story of this bloody day in a briefer fashion than its intense interest and importance demand, for the pressure on the telegraph wires already is great, and a breakdown is feared. The late winter dawn was brilliant and cold. The city swarmed with troops, for the regular garrison had been reinforced by 50,000 troops from the Imperial palace in the country and from other districts. These were massed near the Winter Palace on the bank of the Neva in the centre of the city.

Meanwhile a decisive stroke was being prepared three miles away to the south-west of the Neva Gate, a lofty wide granite arch, the outlines of which resemble those of the Arch de Triomphe in Paris. The Chasseur Regiment was posted here across a wide, gradual slope, on the further side of the arch, looking along the road towards the Putiloff Iron Works, a mile beyond. Near these works the men who began the present revolt assembled in the early morning around their leader, Father Gopon. No attempt was made by the authorities to prevent the carrying out of their announced purpose of marching to the city. The deliberate policy of the Government to allow them to seek their own destruction is now clear. All last night the strikers, in bodies of 800 each filed through the assembly hall, taking a solemn oath to seek to first gain the ear of the Czar, and if they failed, to try to gain their demands by other means.

The procession was formed at 10 o'clock in the morning. Father Gopon led it, accompanied by a volunteer guard of 500 men. About 12,000 of all ages followed. Many of Father Gopon's guard had revolvers. The general crowd carried ice picks and other crude weapons, but the majority were unarmed. The march began quietly and the first 500 men, keeping in military formation, the masses following without an attempt at order. Troops were drawn up before them in full sight as they moved slowly forward over the intervening mile. As the head of the procession approached, they faced a thousand leveled rifles, sergeants standing at intervals along the front line, directing the aim of the soldiers. When within easy speaking distance, Father Gopon stopped the procession, by order of the columns. Holding in one hand an ikon and in the other the petition, the priest said in a loud voice, "We are going to present a petition to the Czar."

The colonel replied, "The road is barred."

Following the almost certain death in the leveled rifles before him, the brave priest gave the order to march instantly. There was an order to fire, but it was a blank volley, and the whole column pressed on. Although here was no obstacle their path. Quickly came the second order to fire, and this time a hail of lead poured into the people's ranks. In that instant they changed from petitioners to assassins. With a shout of rage the insurrectionists rushed forward to almost certain death. They tried to use their only weapons. Many revolver shots fell among the troops. The reply came in a volley which swept down a majority of Father Gopon's guard. Even then the crowd would not abandon their hopeless attack. Again the troops were mercilessly poured into them and the road became a shambles. The dead lay in heaps. The leader following the crowd began to break, but many women from the rear rushed forward with heartbreaking cries, seeking their own among the dead. The fighting here came to an end, and a few minutes later the movement which did the execution was withdrawn and another was substituted.

The police collected the dead, and the wounded were taken to the improvised hospital at the Putiloff Iron Works. This was soon surrounded by men and women, who carried their children in their misery. They were forbidden to make enquiries concerning the victims. They stood in crowds, wringing their hands and crying, "We were only going to the Czar with Father Gopon to ask for happiness. Why will the Government not let us?" They shoot and kill us for nothing."

ANOTHER MASSACRE, MORE VICTIMS.

Another massacre, under similar circumstances, with a still greater list of victims, took place a little later at the Moscovski level crossing, where the road from Kolpinow leads to St. Petersburg. Here there was a sort of pitched battle between the vast crowd and the troops. The desperate revolters, even with their rude weapons, succeeded in coming to close quarters and inflicting some damage upon the troops. Then came a terrible cost, however, for no less than a thousand were killed and fifteen hundred wounded.

According to the police reports, some 7,000 survivors, in desperation, turned towards Tsarskoe Selo, where the Czar had taken refuge. They declared that it was their purpose to march to the palace and see the Emperor. Their fate is unknown at this hour. There were no more conflicts at three or four more points before 2 o'clock. In one case only, as far as known, did the troops and the revolutionists that the troops would cease to fire upon them proves well founded. This was when a crowd of many thousands advanced to the Nicholas bridge; they were stopped by two regiments of cavalry and infantry. "Don't fire, don't fire on foreigners! Throw down your arms!" cried the crowd. About 200 of the soldiers threw their guns

The Young Wife and the Honest Grocer.

A young wife decided to go to housekeeping and do her own marketing.

"Now I want to save all the money I can," she told the grocer.

"I am going to buy just as economically as I can, and I am going to do my own cooking and bake my own bread."

She saw some eggs.

"How much are eggs?"

"Well, we have them at various prices. The best are thirty cents a dozen."

"My, how expensive! Haven't you some for twenty?"

"Yes m'am, but I can't recommend them.

"But we are trying to save money."

"True, but you can't afford to save money on eggs, butter and flour."

"Those are three things you want good and you can't have them too good.

You can save in lots of ways but don't do it on the necessities."

"What is your best flour?"

"Royal Household."

"How much does it cost?"

He told her.

"Have you cheaper flour."

"Yes, cheaper in price but really not as cheap in the end. You see in Royal Household Flour you get the largest amount of flour value for your money."

"What do you mean by 'flour value'?"

"The largest amount of wheat nutriment—of pure flour.

"The cheaper the flour the less nutriment it has in it and the more bran.

"The bran is in all flour till its taken out.

"It is all taken out of Royal Household Flour, and that means the best machinery and the best milling.

"And another thing, madam, perhaps you haven't heard of the new process used in making Royal Household Flour.

It is purified by Electricity and that seems to add all the difference in the world in flour.

"Everybody wants "Royal Household" now—they seem to think it is healthier, and I guess it is."

Suddenly she looked suspicious at the earnestness of his arguments.

"Don't you make more money on Royal Household Flour?

"No m'am—not as much as we make on cheaper priced flour."

"Then why do you recommend it?"

"Because when a customer once tries 'Royal Household' our trouble is all over. It sells itself after that and we never have any complaints. If you send to The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited, Montreal, they will send you the Royal Household Recipes."

"Well, send me a barrel of 'Royal Household' then; and I'll have some of those 30c. eggs too."

Whistler's Refined Revenges.

In "Whistler as I Knew Him," Mortimer Menpes, the author, has a good deal to say about Whistler the fighter and his quickness in resenting an affront. He is careful to add that Whistler was always refined in his methods:

Still, he was not actually brutal. He never treated his enemy in a common way. Any man who had offended him Whistler would rap sharply over the shoulders with his cane, and then, by the time the sufferer had recovered, the master would be in the next room explaining to every one how he had just felled his enemy. Once he caught a man, with whom he was for the moment enraged, washing his face. Without a moment's hesitation Whistler dashed the unfortunate head straight into the basin of water, and while the foe was endeavoring to clear the soap from his eyes to see the cause of this sudden immersion Whistler was in the smoking room setting the men there in a roar with the account of his adventures. Then I first met Whistler he was in the act of searching for a man who had dared to critisise his Venetian etchings. "If you want to see some fun, Menpes," he said, "come with me." Fortunately the man had been warned, and was nowhere to be found.

There never was and never will be universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and different acute diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill, in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine, when obtainable in a sound unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use, the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on Nature's own processes. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a morbid state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life has become a disease, and by tranquilizing the nerves disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being vitalized, courses healthfully in the veins, strengthening the healthy animal activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs, naturally creating an increased substance—result, improved functions of the system, bringing back appetite. Northrop & Lyman, of Toronto, have to the public their superior Quinine Wine at the usual rates fixed by the opinion of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists sell it.

Lord Minto's Daughters.

The English papers, to hand by mail, bring particulars of the last Court for the season, which was held by the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace on June 22. The interest of Canadians naturally centered in the presentation of the eldest daughter of the Governor-General and Lady Minto, and it will come as a surprise to most Canadians to learn that Lady Ruby was also presented. It will also be surprising to notice that in the official account of the Court, published in The Times, the only mention of the presentation of the daughters of the Viceroy of British India's greatest colony was "Ladies Elliott (2)." The Standard, however, had this description which will interest the many Canadian friends of their Excellencies' daughters: "Among the debutantes were the two elder daughters of the Earl and Countess of Minto, the Ladies Eileen and Ruby Elliott-Murray-Kynynmound, who were dressed alike in white satin mousseline, trimmed with cream chiffon roses and touches of paleish green. The trains of mousseline de soie, embroidered in silver, were trimmed with horseshoes of chiffon roses mixed with pale green."

No Uncertainty at All.

"She is a girl of uncertain age, I believe?"

"No, she's been the same age for the last ten years."

Robbins—I didn't think you had any idea of marrying the widow.

Newly-wed—I hadn't; it was an idea of hers, and she did it.

OTHER WORLDS.

Our sole knowledge of the people on other worlds and how far the people there differ from our inhabitants is largely guesswork by comparison with animal nature on this small sphere of ours. More important to us is a knowledge of ourselves. "KNOW THYSELF" was an old Greek thought. How to take care of one's own body is not so simple a some things the human mechanism is a wonderful thing and requires watching.

One man who has done more to teach the American people how to care for their bodies than almost any other, is Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., the Author of the "Common Sense Medical Adviser." He says: "It is not the quantity of the food eaten which produces strength and health (for some people can keep strong on a very meagre diet), but it is how much food is absorbed and assimilated by the blood and carried to nourish every organ of the body. It is, therefore, vitally necessary for the body that the stomach be in a healthy state. If diseased of the stomach, or what is called "stomach trouble," prevents proper nutrition then the heart, liver, lungs, and kidneys do not get proper food—they are not fed on rich red blood, and in consequence, begin to show signs of distress. Outwardly these signs may be pimples and eruptions on skin, face, sleepless nights, tired, languid feelings, or, by reason of the nerves not being fed on pure blood, they become starved, and we receive a warning in the pain we call neuralgia, Rheumatism, too, is a blood disease. For years of practice and study Dr. Pierce found that an alcoholic extract, which he named "Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," made from the extracts of several plants, invariably produced a tonic effect upon the system. It helped the process of absorption of the healthy elements in the food and increased the red corpuscles of the blood, as well as eliminated the poisons from the system.

Business is business. No time for headaches. Constipation causes them. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure them by curing the cause. Laxative and mild.

CHAPTER I.

SHE did not put the sacramental phrase on her cards, as no invitations were sent out. These were delivered verbally by boarders desirous of seeing their friends present on Friday evening.

It was really a scratch party of notables, and they assembled as usual in the drawing room on this especial evening to play and not to work. Mrs. Taine laid aside her eternal knitting; Miss Bull dispensed with the vague occupation of "patience;" Mr. Granger sang his one song of the early Victorian epoch—sometimes twice when singers were scarce—and Mr. Harmer wore his antiquated dress suit. In her black silk gown, her lace cap and "the diamonds" Mrs. Jersey looked so they assured her—quite the lady.

Was she a lady? No one ever asked that leading question, as it would have provoked an untruth or a most unpleasant reply. She admitted in expansive moments to having seen "better days," but what her social past had been—and from her looks she had one—none ever discovered.

Few friends presented themselves on this peculiar Friday evening, for it was extremely foggy, and none of them could afford a cab. Even those who patronised the nearest bus line had some distance to walk before they knocked at the Jersey door, and thus ran a chance of losing their way. Either in fog or in the usual rain it was hard to find, for it occupied the corner of a particularly private square far removed from the Oxford street traffic.

It was quite an asylum for old age. None of the guests was under fifty, save a newcomer who had arrived the previous week, and the curious wondered why he came among them. He was young, though plain looking, and he was fashionably dressed, though stout. This was the first time he had been present at madame's reception, and he was explaining his reasons for coming to Bloomsbury. Mrs. Jersey introduced him as "Leonard Train, the distinguished novelist," although he had published only one book at his own cost, and even that production was unknown to the boarders.

"Fashionable novelists," said he in a still, small voice which contrasted curiously with his fierce appearance, "have overdone the business of society and epigrams. We must revert to the Dickens style. I have therefore taken up my residence here for a brief period to study old world types." Here he looked around with a beaming smile. "I am glad to find so rich a field to glean."

This doubtful compliment provoked weak smiles. The boarders did not wish to be rude, but they felt it was impossible to approve of the young man. Not being sufficiently modern to court notoriety, one and all disliked the idea of being "put in a book." Mrs. Taine, conscious of her weak grammar, looked uneasily at Miss Bull, who smiled grimly and then glared at Train. Granger drew himself up and pulled his gray mustache—he was the buck of the establishment—and Harmer nodded, saying, "Well, well!" his usual remark, when he did not understand what was going on around him. Mrs. Jersey spoke. Train had taken a sitting room as well as a bedroom, therefore he must be rich, and as he had not lingered over terms it was proved that he should be flattered. Mrs. Jersey saw a chance of making money out of him. "How delightful!" she said in her most motherly manner. "I hope you will say nice things about us, Mr. Train."

"I shall tell the truth, madame. The truth does not flatter."

Mrs. Jersey became still more motherly and paid a compliment. "That depends, Mr. Train. If the truth were spoken about you, for instance."

It was really a very nice compliment, but Miss Bull, with malice aforethought, spoiled it in the utterance by laughing pointedly. Train, who had already set his face for a smile, grew red, and madame darted a look at Miss Bull quite out of keeping with her motherly manner. More than this, she spoke her mind. "I hope, Mr. Train, that you will speak the whole truth of some of us."

Miss Bull shrugged her thin shoulders and in direct contradiction to the traditions of the evening produced her pack of cards. To abstain on Friday evenings always annoyed her, and since madame had been rude Miss Bull seized the opportunity to show her indifference and enjoy by doing so her favorite pastime. She was a small, thin, dry old maid, with a pallid face and bright black eyes. Her mouth was hard and smiled treacherously. No one liked her save Margery, the niece of Mrs. Jersey. But Margery was supposed to be queer, so her approval of Miss Bull mattered little.

"Perhaps Mr. Granger will oblige us with a song," suggested madame, smoothing her face, but still inwardly furious.

Mr. Granger, who had been waiting for this moment, was only too happy. He knew but one song and had sung it dozens of times in that very room. It was natural to suppose that he knew it by heart. All the same he produced his music and read the words as he sang. Margery played his accompaniment without looking at the notes. She was as familiar with them as she was with the moment when Mr. Granger's voice would crack. This night he cracked as usual, apologized as usual, and his hearers accepted the apology as usual, so it was all very pleasant.

"If Mrs. Taine will play us the 'Canary Bird Quadrilles,'" Mrs. Jersey hastily intervened, "how pleased we shall be."

Mrs. Taine obliged, and madame, under cover of the music, talked with Train.

"You mustn't mind the guests," she said; "they are old and require to be humored."

"It's most amusing, madame. I shall stop here three weeks to pick up types."

"Oh, you must stay longer than that," said madame, smiling and patting his hand, still in a motherly way. "Now that you have found me out, you cannot lose you. By the way"—here Mrs. Jersey's eyes became very searching—"how did you find us out?"

"It was a friend of mine, madame. He knew that I wanted to get into the Dickens world and suggested this house."

"Do I know the gentleman?" asked madame, who seemed anxious.

"I don't think so. But he is coming to see me to-night."

"You must ask him in here and introduce him. I should like to thank him for having recommended my house."

"We were going to have a conversation in my room," said Train dubiously. "He's such a shy fellow that I don't think he'll come in."

"Oh, but he must. I love young people. Will your friend remain overnight?"

"He will if he comes at all," replied Leonard, looking at his watch; "but if the fog is very thick I don't know if he'll turn up. It is now 9 o'clock."

"We will expect to see him," said madame, "but on this night I must break up at 10, as I have"—she hesitated—"a little supper to do."

"I won't trouble you, madame," said Train. "My friend and I can have supper in my room."

"That's just it" said madame, and her voice became rather hard. "I beg, Mr. Train, that you and your friend will not sit up late."

"Why not? We both wish to smoke and talk."

"You can do that in the daytime, Mr. Train. But my house is most respectable, and I hope you will be in bed before 11."

Leonard would have protested, as he objected to this sort of maternal government, but Mrs. Jersey rustled away and he was left to make the best of it. Before he could collect his wits a message came that he was wanted. "By Jove, the George," he said and hurried out of the room. Mrs. Jersey overheard the name.

"I suppose his friend is called George," she thought, and frowned. Her recollections of that name were not pleasant. However, she thought no more about the matter, but sailed across to Miss Bull. "The music doesn't please you, Miss Bull," she said in rather an acid tone.

"It's very nice," replied the old maid, dealing the cards, "but I have heard it before."

"You may not have the chance of hearing it again," said madame.

"It's a world of change," replied Miss Bull in her sharp voice. "Margery, was that a heart?"

Margery pointed a fat finger to the card in question, and Miss Bull mut-

"My name is Brendon," he said, rather unnecessarily, and Mrs. Jersey nodded in her most gracious manner.

"I told you welcome, sir." Any friend of Mr. Train's is also my friend. If there is anything to amuse you here?" She waved her hand. "We are simple people, fortune telling. A little music and the company of my guests. Mrs. Taine, Mr. Harmer?" She introduced them, but every now and then her eyes were on the yellow holly. Brendon remarked it.

"You are noticing my flower, Mrs. Jersey," he said. "It is rather rare."

"Most extraordinary," replied Mrs. Jersey coolly. "I have seen holly with red berries before, but this yellow"—

"There was a great bush of it in my father's garden," said Mr. Harmer, "but I have not seen any for years."

"Perhaps you would like it, Mrs. Jersey," said Brendon, taking it from his coat.

She hastily waved her hand. "No, no! I am very old for flowers. Keep it, Mr. Brendon. It suits better with your youth," she looked at his face keenly. "I have seen a face like yours before."

Brendon laughed. "I am of a commonplace type, I fear," he said.

"No; not so very common. Fair hair and dark eyes do not usually go together. Perhaps I have met your father?"

"Perhaps," replied George phlegmatically.

"Or your mother?" persisted Mrs. Jersey.

"I dare say." Then he turned the conversation. "What a delightful old house you have here!"

Mrs. Jersey bit her lip on finding her inquiries thus baffled, but, taking her cue, expanded on the subject of the house. "It was a fashionable mansion in the time of the Georges," she said. "Some of the ceilings are wonderfully painted, and there are all kinds of queer rooms and cupboards and corners in it. Will you have some negus, dear wine negus, Mr. Brendon?"

She was evidently talking at random, and offered him a glass of negus with a trembling hand. Brendon, evidently more and more astonished at her manner, drank off the wine. He made few remarks, being a man who spoke little in general company. Train had long ago found out Miss Bull to tell fortunes, and from the laughter it was evident that his future was being unpolished.

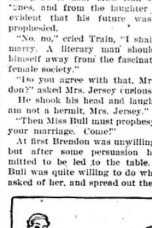
"No, no," cried Train, "I shall never marry. A literary man should keep himself away from the fascinations of female society."

"Do you agree with that, Mr. Brendon?" asked Mrs. Jersey curiously.

He shook his head and laughed. "I am not a hermit, Mrs. Jersey."

"Then Miss Bull must prophesy about your marriage. Come!"

At first Brendon was unwilling to go, but after some persuasion he submitted to be led to the table. Miss Bull was quite willing to do what was asked of her, and spread out the cards



"You will meet with a violent death."

Brendon waited beside Mrs. Jersey with a most indifferent air. She was far more anxious to hear the fortune than he was.

"You are in trouble," announced Miss Bull in a sepulchral tone, "and the trouble will grow worse. But in the end all will be well. She will aid you to get free and will bestow her hand on you."

"She?" asked Brendon, looking puzzled.

Miss Bull did not raise her eyes. "The lady you are thinking of."

Brendon was rather taken aback, but seeing Mrs. Jersey's curious look, he crushed down his emotion. "At my age we are always thinking of ladies," he said, laughing.

Train touched his arm. "It is"—he began, but Brendon frowned, and Leonard was quick enough to take the hint. Miss Bull went on telling the fortune. There were the usual dark and fair people, the voyage, the journey, the money and all the rest of the general events and happenings which are usually foretold. But there was always trouble, trouble, and again trouble. "But you will come out right in the end," said Miss Bull. "Keep a brave heart."

"I am sure Mr. Brendon will do that," said madame graciously.

While George bowed to the compliment Miss Bull again shuffled the cards and fastened her keen black eyes on madame. "Will you have your fortune told?" she asked coldly.

"Oh, certainly," said Mrs. Jersey in a most gushing manner; "anything to amuse. But my fortune has been told so often and has never come true—never." And she sighed in an effective manner.

Miss Bull continued her mystic counting. She told madame a lot of things about the house which were known to most present. Mrs. Jersey laughed and sneered. Suddenly Miss Bull turned up a black card. "You will meet with a violent death," she said, and every one shuddered.

CHAPTER II.

IF Miss Bull wished to make madame uncomfortable she certainly succeeded. From being voluble, Mrs. Jersey became silent, the fresh color died out of her face and her lips moved nervously. Twice did she make an effort to overcome her emotion, but each time failed. Afterward she took a seat by the fire and stared into the flames with an anxious look, as though she saw therein a fulfillment of the dismal prophecy. Her depression communicated itself to the rest of the company, and shortly before 10 the friends took their departure. The idea of being alone seemed to glower Mrs. Jersey, and she accompanied her departing guests to the front door.

It was comparatively thick fog, yet not so bad but that the visitors might hope to reach their homes. For some time Mrs. Jersey stood in the doorway at the top of the steps and shook hands with those who were going. The boarders, who were old and chilly, were too wise to venture outside on such a dreary night, so Mrs. Jersey had the doorstep all to herself. "If you lose your way," she called out to the departing Train, "look for the sitting room, which was on the first floor. The windows loomed out on to a black garden, wherein grew a few scrubby trees, so that the prospect was not cheering. But on this night the faded crimson curtains were drawn, the fire was lighted and round table in the middle of the apartment was spread for supper. On one side a door led to Leonard's bedroom; on the other side was the room wherein George was to sleep. As the firelight played on the old fashioned furniture and on the mellow colors of curtains and carpet Leonard rubbed his hands. "It is rather quaint," he said cheerfully, and lighted the lamp.

"Not such a palace as your diggings in Duke street," said Brendon, stretching his long legs on the chintz covered sofa.

"One must suffer in the cause of art," said Train, putting the shade on the lamp. "I am picking up excellent types here. What do you think?"

"There's plenty of material," growled Brendon, getting out his pipe.

"Don't smoke yet, George," interposed Train, glancing at the clock. "We must have supper first. After that we can smoke till 11 and then we must go to bed."

"You keep early hours here, Leonard."

"I don't. Mrs. Jersey asked me particularly to be in bed at 11."

"Why?" Brendon started and looked hard at his friend.

"I don't know, but she did."

"Is it an understood thing that you retire at that hour?"

Train shook his head and drew in his chair. "By no means. I have sat up till 2 before now. But on this night Mrs. Jersey wants the house to be considered respectable and therefore asked me to retire early. Perhaps it's on account of you, old man." Here he smiled in an elegant manner. "She hopes to get you as a boarder."

"I wouldn't come here for the world," retorted Brendon with quite unnecessary violence.

"Why not? Have some tongue?"

"Thanks," responded George, passing his plate. "Because I don't like the house, and I don't care for Mrs. Jersey."

"Why did you advise me to come here, then?" asked Train, pouring out a glass of claret.

"Well, you wanted something in the style of Dickens, and this was the only place I knew."

"How did you know about it?"

George deliberated for a moment and then fastened his eyes on his plate. "I lived here once," he said in a low voice.

"But you didn't like Mrs. Jersey."

"She was not here then."

"Who was there?"

"My grandfather on the mother's side. That's fifteen years ago."

Leonard looked at the handsome, florid face of his friend musingly. "I never knew you had a grandfather," he said at last.

"Do you know anything at all about me?" asked Brendon.

"No; not if you come to think of it, I don't. I met you three years ago at Mrs. Ward's house, and we have been friends ever since."

"Acquaintances, rather. Men are not friends until they become confidential with one another. Well, Train"—George pushed his plate away and wiped his mouth—"tonight I intend to turn you from a mere acquaintance into a friend."

"I will be delighted," said Train, rather bewildered. "Won't you have more supper?"

Brendon shook his head, lighted his pipe and again stretched himself on the sofa. Train, being curious to know what he had to say, was on the point of joining him, but he was yet hungry, so could not bring himself to leave the table.

"Train's parents were dead and had left him an income of £5,000 a year. Not being very strong-minded, and being more than a trifle conceited as to his literary abilities, his money speedily attracted round him a number of friendly hangers on, who flattered him to the top of his bent.

Poor Leonard thought that all women were angels and all men good fellows with a harmless tendency to borrow. He was called a fool by those he fed, but none could call him a rogue.

It was with quiet delight which inspired Brendon with a pitying friendship, and Brendon had done much to save him from the harpies who preyed on his innocent. In several cases he had opened Train's eyes at the cost of quarreling with those who lost by the opening, but George was well able to hold his own, and none could say that he benefited pecuniarily by the trust and confidence which Leonard reposed in him. To avert all suspicion of this sort he had refused to become Train's secretary and companion at an excellent salary.

Now that Train came to think of it, Brendon was rather a mysterious person. He lived by writing articles for the papers, and was always well dressed. His rooms were in Kensington, and he seemed to know many people whom he did not cultivate. Train would have given his ears to enter the houses at which Brendon was a welcome guest, but for the most part George preferred to live alone with his pipe and his books. He was writing a novel and hoped to make a successful career as a literary man, but as he has barely thirty years of age and had been settled only five years in London his scheme of life was rather in embryo. He appeared to have some secret trouble, but what it was Train, never knew, as Brendon was a particularly reticent man. Why he should propose to be frank on this especial night Leonard could not understand. After supper he put the cigars to him.

"You can depend upon me, George. Anything you tell me will never be repeated."

Brendon nodded his thanks. "Also," he continued, "I wish you to lend me £800."

"A thousand if you will."

"Three hundred will be sufficient. I'll repay you when I come into my property."

Train opened his eyes. "Are you coming into money?" he asked.

"That I can't say. It all depends. Do you know why I suggested this house to you, Leonard?" he asked suddenly.

"To help me in my literary work."

"Not exactly. For a reason, certain, but I had another and more selfish one, connected"—George sat up to finish the sentence—"connected with Mrs. Jersey," he said quietly.

This remark was so unexpected that Leonard did not know what to say for a moment. "I thought you did not know her," he gasped out.

"Nor do I."

"Does she know you?"

"Not as George Brendon, or as I am now."

"What do you mean?" Train was more puzzled than ever.

"It is a long story. I don't know that I can tell you the whole."

Train looked annoyed. "Trust me"—

"All in all or not at all," finished Brendon. Quietly he passed and drew hard at his pipe. "Since I want money I must trust you."

"It is only for that reason that you consider me worthy of your confidence?" asked Leonard, much mortified.

George leaned forward and patted him on the knee. "No, old man. I wish you to help me also."

"In what way?"

"With Dorothy Ward," replied George, looking closely at his pipe.

"Was she in your mind tonight when that old maid was telling the cards?" asked Train, sitting up with a look of interest.

Dip the fingers in coal oil and rub the throat, to give relief from sore throat.

Rubbing lemon on feet that have been exposed to unusual cold is said to prevent chilblains.

The gums will be found to be in a much healthier condition if rubbed daily with lemon slice.

A few drops of spirits of turpentine on a cube loaf of sugar will relieve a cough when other remedies have failed.

Oils and cucumber cream softens the hands and face sometimes roughened by winter winds. It dries almost instantly without leaving the skin greasy.

The hands can be cleansed better with warm water than with cold, but they should always be rinsed afterward in cold water, as it kills them in better condition.

SOME CONVERSATIONAL DONTS.

Harper's Weekly.

Don't indulge in personalities. They invariably return worse than they started.

Don't mention family feuds. It embarrasses the listener, and you are sure to regret it.

Don't talk of the cost of things. It gives the rich a chance for boastfulness and may be embarrassing to the poor.

Don't tell your personal interests, occupations, hopes or aspirations. Nobody wants to hear them and you give your dignity a mortal stab.

Don't discuss children. If you have any, the chances are you are boring those who have not. If you have none, you are sure to be mortally wounding those who have.

Don't discuss dress. The lady whose evening gown you are scoring may have come direct from Paris, wearing the newest thing, and the whole subject is a hopeless one anyway.

I saw a novel game played on a grocery store last evening which proved to me that the average American boy is certainly up to snuff. The youngster in question ran into the crowded store and yelled to the proprietor:

"Say, take this will yer?"

"Certainly, my little man."

"Three pounds of your forty-cent candy, four pounds of sugar at 6 cents, five pounds of those twenty-five cent figs, and two dozen of them twenty-five-cent oranges. Got all dat?"

"Well how much does it come to?"

"Yes."

"Just $3.19."

"Panks; that's me arithmetic for to-morrow."

A Juryman who appeared before Sir James Hannen in a London courtroom recently was in deep mourning and claimed exemption from service on the ground that he was interested in a funeral that day at which he desired to be present. "Oh, certainly," said the courteous judge, and the man went red-faced away. "Do you know the man you have exempted?" asked the others. "No," said Sir James. "He is an undertaker," was the reply.

This letter was both interesting and amusing, and after its reading Miss Bell was told to open the box, where she found fourteen parcels, containing beautiful and useful presents from her uncle and cousins. She also received remembrances from her newly-made friends in that city. After an evening of music and amusement, and a general wish to Miss Bell for many returns of the cake, the guests departed. Miss Amelia Bell is spending the winter as his guest. The large parlors and hall tastefully arranged in pillows of red and white carnations and illies, interspersed with greenery. The dining table, where Miss Bell was the presided, was centred with the large and beautiful basket of flowers. After the sumptuous dinner, a large mysterious box was brought to the table and a letter, written by her uncle, was read to all by Miss Bell. This letter was both interesting and amusing, and after its reading Miss Bell was told to open the box, where she found fourteen parcels, containing beautiful and useful presents from her uncle and cousins. She also received remembrances from her newly-made friends in that city. After an evening of music and amusement, and a general wish to Miss Bell for many returns of the cake, the guests departed. BENJAMIN C. LLOYD, a widely known and highly respected resident of Lennox, died quite suddenly on Thursday morning last, at his late residence on Centre st., Alburgh. He had suffered for almost three years, and many times had fatally thought death near, yet his strong constitution carried him through. On Sunday and Monday he was not so well, but no alarming symptoms developed evening, when Dr. Vrooman, the family physician, was called. Everything was done to relieve him, but death was near, and at four o'clock the following morning he passed quietly away.

Mr. Lloyd was born near Lockport, Niagara Co., N.Y., in the year 1820, and lived there with his parents until he was about four years of age, when his father and family returned to Canada, taking up their residence in the Township of Thurlow, north of Belleville, at that time mostly a forest. When about six years old his father, Asa Lloyd, died, leaving a widow, two sons, Charles and Benjamin, and one daughter, Harriet, who afterwards married Daniel Fraser, all now deceased. Mr. Lloyd married Amarilla Sprague, about forty-eight years ago, and lived nearly all his married life on the farm some four miles east of Napanee, near Strathcona, but was compelled through sickness and advancing years to give up active work three years ago, since which time he has resided in Napanee. For many years he represented the Township of Camden, as Reeve, and was elected Warden of the County for one or two terms. In politics deceased was a Conservative, in religion a Methodist. He leaves a widow and one daughter, Mrs. A. W. Caton, to mourn the loss of a devoted husband and father.

DESERONTO.

We are sad to chronicle in this week's columns the death of Mrs. Samuel Booth, who died at the residence of her son, Mr. Percy C. Booth, Brant street, Deseronto, 17th Jan. Although a former resident of Deseronto, she had made it her home in Napanee for the past two years and had made many warm friends who will be sorry to learn of her demise. Although ailing for the past year, her illness was not thought serious, but after she went to Deseronto to reside she sank rapidly. Medical aid was summoned and everything done to alleviate the sufferings of her who had been a faithful wife and mother. She was converted some years ago at the Empey Hill church. Besides her surviving husband and son, she is survived by her sisters, Mrs. Arch. Campbell, Marysville; Mrs. Levi Gound, Lonsdale; Mrs. Simon Sexsmith, Toronto, and Mrs. James Stewart, Hannah, N.D., and her brothers, Mr. James Young, Holyoke, Col., and Mr. Alonzo Young, Deseronto.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY, THE BEST MADE.

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Chas. Walker, of Porterville, California. "There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventive of pneumonia. It is also so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other." The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale at Red Cross Drug Store. 1d

1905...

At the beginning of the New Year we wish to thank our many customers and friends for their liberal patronage during the year 1904.

The year that has just closed has been a most gratifying one to this store. It brought to us many new customers, and we lost very few of our old ones. We were able to take excellent care of all who favored us with their business, and they were not backward about expressing their satisfaction.

Our aim is to make this a better store in 1905 than in 1904.

We realize that we will have to work hard and earnestly in order to accomplish this end, but we are prepared to do it.

We ask a continuance of your patronage, and believe that you will find abundant reason for keeping your name on our list of patrons this year.

THE SCHOOL AGE.
Boston Transcript.

It is perhaps to be regretted that prominent educators at yesterday's meeting of the New England Association of School Superintendents raised the issue of the early admission of children to school. It may be true in theory, as Superintendent Small, of Providence, urged, that there is no reason why an American mother should send an infant under five years to school in order to escape the responsibility of caring for it; but there should in the discussion be some regard for the welfare of the little children, who are usually better off under the supervision of a professional teacher at school than of an amateur mother at home.

FEWER EXHIBITIONS DESIRED.

The leading Agricultural societies of the Province are evincing considerable interest in the suggestion that has been made by Mr. H. B. Cowan, Provincial Superintendent of Agricultural Societies, that the number of exhibitions held annually in Ontario should be materially reduced and that Agricultural Societies should receive their grants in proportion to the amounts they expend for agricultural purposes. Such a change would do away with all distinction between the township and district societies.

The Ontario Fruit Growers' Association has passed a resolution approving of these suggestions and expressing the belief that such a change would result in larger sums of money being expended for agricultural purposes. The Executive of the Dominion Shorthorn Breeders' Association, at its annual meeting in Toronto, on January 16th, also passed a resolution approving of these suggestions and stating its opinion that fewer exhibitions would result in larger attendances, better prizes and better exhibits, as well as a reduction in the undesirable features now so prevalent at many exhibitions.

DAVID'S NATURAL WEAPONS

Suffered to Slay the Giant Philistine—So Will the Experience of Every Man Stand Him in Stead in the Day of Battle and Trial Against Spiritual Foes—Better Than That of Another.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1903, by Frederick Diver, of Toronto, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 22.—A wholesome philosophy, which may well be applied by every one who desires success in the battle of life, is that which the preacher outlines in this sermon, taking his text from 1 Samuel xvii, 39, "I cannot go with these, for I have not proved them."

A weaponless soldier is a defenseless and a helpless soldier. Neither personal strength nor heroic valor can avail him without effective weapons in a conflict against an armed foe. The military chieftain has learned that the issue of a campaign depends as much on the perfection and precision of the weapons as on the vigor and prowess of the soldier. In the Austro-Prussian war it was not so much the valor of the soldiers as the strategy and skill of the generals that gave Prussia the victory as the fact that the Prussian army had the needle gun and the Austrian army offered the old fashioned muzzle loader. Nor can moral qualities take the place of weapons. Courage, though almost sans the dramatist, is inclined with his quarto post but he held that warrior fitly harnessed can have a cause in the champions of it neglect the material appliances of military warfare. It was generally

The great demand for a pleasant, safe and reliable antidote for all affections of the throat and lungs is fully met with in Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It is a purely Vegetable Compound, and acts promptly and magically in subduing all coughs, colds, bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, etc. It is so palatable that a child will not refuse it, and is put at a price that will not exclude the poor from its benefits.

For Nine Years—Mr. Samuel Bryan, Thessalon, writes: For nine years I suffered with severed sores on my leg. I expected one day to have to amputate, and tried every preparation I heard of or saw recommended for such disease, but could get no relief. I at last was recommended to give Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil a trial, which has resulted, after using eight bottles of it internally and externally, in a complete cure. I believe it is the best medicine in the world, and I write this to let others know what it has done for me.

"Alas," murmured the young girl, "I cannot decide whom to accept, Harold has money and would be a success after the two, but Reginald would look so handsome at my afternoon receptions." "My dear," replied her fond mother, "when it comes to a choice between a man who is merely a good match, choose the safely every time."

A Small Pill, but Powerful.—They that judge of the powers of a pill by its size, would consider Parmelee's Vegetable Pills to be lacking. It is a little wonder among pills. What it lacks in size it makes up in power. The remedies which it carries are put up in those small doses, because they are so powerful that only small doses are required. The full strength of the extracts is secured in this form and do their work thoroughly.

Men think it's awfully funny to see a girl trying to comb out the tangles with a three-inch handkerchief.

They Are Carefully Prepared.—Pills which dissipate themselves in the stomach cannot be expected to have much effect upon that intestinal tube to overcome costiveness the medicine administered must influence the action of those canals. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are so made, under the supervision of experts, that the substance is then intended to operate on the intestines as well as the action, till they pass through the stomach to the bowels.

Deacon Jones—I have been losing lots o' sleep during the past two months Friend—Yes, I noticed you hain't been attending church much lately.

Markley—See here! You've owed me $25 for two years now. Don't you think it time you liquidated that debt? Borrough—Sure! I'll buy you a drink, if that's what you mean.

Johnny—Say, pop, what is the rest of that quotation about "People who live in glass houses"? Pop, absently—Should dress in the dark.

Revolution in Russia.

to the ground. Their officers beat the mutineers unmercifully, with the result that the regiment made a bayonet charge, killing and wounding many.

Wherever the Cossacks were engaged the work was of the most horrible description. They fired a volley into the general crowd at the Admiralty Park three hundred yards from the Winter Palace, killing many. Twenty-six children were among the dead at this point.

THE CROWNING INFAMY.

So the work of terror went on, until 4 o'clock, when came the crowning infamy. It was a deed which history will record as Russia's deepest disgrace. All attempts to resist or defy authority had failed. St. Petersburg was counting its dead and summing up the events of the bloodiest day in its history. The streets in the centre of the town were filled with ordinary citizens, women and children, drawn solely by curiosity. Most of the slaughter had taken place at points a considerable distance from the palace and the main avenue of the city. The crowd was naturally greatest at the palace end of this great thoroughfare, which is one of the widest avenues of Europe.

Suddenly, without warning, another order to commit wholesale murder was given to the troops surrounding the palace. They were directed to charge upon the dense crowds at the ends of all the avenues opening on the great semi-circle in front of the palace—The Cossacks and the Hussar Empress' cavalry guards sprang upon the people with drawn swords. It was like the spreading out of a great fan of steel. The populace was so closely packed that they could not flee with any speed, and quickly the murderous horsemen were among them, slashing right and left, and then stabbing and treading down all alike, without mercy to men, women or children. On and on the Cossacks pursued their victims in a perfect carnival of killing. Before half a block was passed their swords were dripping blood and the pavement was crimson. As the circle enlarged finally the soldiers became somewhat separated, and the rage of the populace found some chance of revenge. They fell upon every one wearing a uniform. Darkness was now falling, and harsher orders were given the troops.

2,100 DEAD, 3,800 WOUNDED.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 22d, 10.30 p.m. —By stacked rifles and blazing wood fires on the frozen snow, St. Petersburg's garrison stands at the present hour across every approach to the city. Behind the troops stand intact the palaces and their ruler, before them the inscrutable tenement colonies, with a vast and growing mass of determined men. The day's bloody work is told in the estimates of officials of the police. At the Varva Gate where Father Gapon started with his devoted body guard and the workmen from the Putiloff Iron Works, 300 were killed and 500 wounded. At the Moskowski Gate crossing gate 1,000 were killed and 1,500 wounded; at the Nevski gate, below the Moscow Station, there were killed and 700 wounded. In the Vassali Ostroff District 200 were killed and 500 wounded. In other parts of the city 100 were killed and 700 wounded. Ghastly, indeed, would the Sunday's work of slaughter have been if it had been the result of a sudden outcall of troops to save the city and its people from an overwhelming force of bloodthirsty revolutionists, but more horrible than the massacre itself is the story of how it was brought about. It was not the outcome of mad passion, but a cold, deliberate plan of Russia's rulers. Every man killed today was carefully shepherded in his death. Every one was wondered why during the past few days the strikers were allowed to meet in their meetings for peaceful demands in practical freedom. It might have seemed to be the dawn of more lenient treatment, but it was all in reality the Government's method of collecting its victims, that, its blow might fall more surely and more deadly. The police themselves proved this, for they defined their own position in the following terms.—"We were forbidden to prevent any spread of the strike or development of any movement. Wednesday we were ordered to stand aside, and it was left to grow ripe for the army to reap."

St. Petersburg, January 23d, 5.44 p.m.—Conflicts between the military and the public have been resumed. On the Nevsky Prospect the troops are firing on the crowds.

Industrial sections and suburbs are in the hands of the people. Revolutionists in these sections have thrown up the streets and are building huge barricades of paving stones.

Fighting has been resumed. The Basil Island municipal building in the second district of the Capital has been destroyed by artillery fire. Artillery has been called into service and the guns are sweeping the barricades thrown up by the revolutionists.

Workmen are gathering in the Palace Square and an immense force of horse guards has been drawn up to protect the Palace.

Grand Duke Vladimir and Duke Sergius was assassinated is now denied.

FRAIL LITTLE ONES.

The little ones are frail. Their hold upon life is slight. No system that indicates any of the little ailments of childhood should be allowed to go for a moment without proper attention. The little ailment may soon become a serious one, and that it may be too late to save a precious little life. The Yellow Holly

Brendon nodded. "But I do not wish you to mention her name. That was why"—

"I know. I was foolish. Well, she's a pretty girl, and as good as she is pretty."

"Which is marvelous," said Brendon, "considering the fashionable mother she has."

Train smiled. "Mrs. Ward is certainly a leader of fashion."

"And as heartless as any woman I know," observed Brendon. He glanced affectionately at the yellow holly. "Dorothy gave me this tonight."

"Did you see her before you came here?"

"Yes. I went to afternoon tea. We"—Brendon examined his pipe again—"we understand one another," he said; Leonard sprang to his feet. "My dear chap, I congratulate you."

"Thanks, but it's too early for congratulation as yet. Mrs. Ward wants her daughter to make a good marriage. George Brendon will not be the husband of her choice, but Lord Derrington!"

"Does she want her daughter to marry that old thing?"

"You don't understand, Leonard. I mean that if I became Lord Derrington when the old man dies Mrs. Ward will consent."

Train sat down helplessly and stared. "I don't understand," he said.

"I'll put the thing in a nutshell," explained Brendon. "Lord Derrington is my grandfather."

"Your—but he never lived here?"

"No. The grandfather who lived here and with whom I stayed was my mother's father. He was called Lockwood. Derrington is my father's father. Now do you understand?"

"Not quite! How can you become Lord Derrington when he has a grandson—that young rip Walter Vane?"

"Walter Vane is the son of my father's brother, and my father was the elder and the heir to the title."

"Then, if Lord Derrington dies you become"—

"Exactly. But the difficulty is that I have to establish my birth."

Leonard jumped up and clutched his hair. "Here's a mystery," he said, staring at his friend. "What does it all mean?"

"Sit down and I'll tell you."

Leonard resumed his seat and glanced at the clock. "We have a quarter of an hour," he said, "but I think we'll defy Mrs. Jersey and sit up this night."

"Here's a mystery."

"No," said Brendon hastily, "we may as well do what she wants. I wish to conciliate her. She is the only person who can help to prove my mother's marriage."

"Humph! I thought there was something queer about her. Who was she?"

"My mother's maid. But I had better tell you from the beginning."

Train sat down and produced a cigarette. "Go on," he said. "No, wait! I want to know before you begin why Mrs. Jersey was so struck with that yellow holly?"

"I don't know," said Brendon who looked puzzled. "I can't say, Leonard."

"Do you think she connected it with some disaster?" asked Train.

"From her looks, when she set eyes on it, I should think so."

"Does Miss Ward know Mrs. Jersey?"

"No. She knows nothing about her." "And it was Miss Ward who gave you the yellow holly?"

"Yes. When I was at afternoon tea."

"Then I can't see why Mrs. Jersey should have made such a spectacle of herself," said Leonard, lighting his cigarette. "Tell your story."

"I'll do so as concisely as possible," said Brendon, staring into the fire. "My mother was the daughter of Angus Lockwood, who was a teacher of singing and lived here. She was very beautiful and also became famous as a singer at concerts. The son of Lord Derrington, Percy Vane, saw her and loved her. He subsequently eloped with her. She died in Paris two years later, shortly after I was born."

"And you came to live here?"

"Not immediately. I was but an infant in arms, but my father would not part with me. He kept Mrs. Jersey—who was my mother's maid, because—as my nurse, and we went to Monte Carlo. I am afraid my poor father was a bit of a scamp. He was, at all events, a gambler and lost all his money at the tables. He became poor and his father, Lord Derrington, refused to help him."

"I was angry at the marriage, I suppose."

"That's the point. Was there a marriage? But to make things clear I had better tell you that the father went to San Remo, and from that place he sent me home to my grandfather Lockwood.

"By that time Mrs. Jersey had left. I had another nurse, and it was she who took me to this house. My grandfather was delighted to have me, as he always insisted that there was a marriage. I grew up here and went to school, afterward to college. My grandfather died, but there was just enough money to finish my education. The house was sold, and by a curious coincidence Mrs. Jersey took it as a boarding establishment. Where she got the money I don't know. But I passed out of her life as a mere infant, and I don't suppose she thought anything more about me. Perhaps she recognized me today from my likeness to my father, as she mentioned that she had seen my face before. But I can't say."

"What became of your father?"

"That is the tragic part of the story. He was murdered at a masked ball at San Remo. The assassin was never discovered, but he was supposed to be some passionate Italian lover. My grandfather Lockwood was so angry at the way in which his daughter had been treated that he never stood up for my rights. I would not do so either but that I love Miss Ward. Now, it is my intention to see Mrs. Jersey tomorrow and get the truth out of her."

"What does she know?"

"She knows where the marriage was celebrated and can prove that my birth is legitimate. That is why I came here, Leonard."

"Why did you not speak to her tonight?"

"I think it is better she should be in a quieter frame of mind," said Brendon. "She has never seen me since I was a small child, and my name of Brendon is quite unknown to her."

"Why do you call yourself Brendon?" asked Train.

George began to pace up and down the room.

"Train made me do that," he declared. "When my father was murdered at San Remo, Lord Derrington denied the marriage and refused to do anything for me. My grandfather Lockwood gave me his own name, and I was called George Lockwood for many a long day. At the age of fifteen Mr. Lockwood died, and there a note came to my guardian saying that Lord Derrington proposed to allow me a small income."

"For what reason?"

"I can't say. Perhaps it was remorse."

Train shook his head. "I have met Lord Derrington, and if such an old tartar feels remorse, then there is a chance that pigs may fly."

"That is an elegant illustration, Leonard," observed George, with a smile, "but to continue (as I see it is nearly 11), even as a boy I felt the indignity of being sent an allowance by the permission of my guardian, the offered sum and continued at school. When I left to go to college I changed my name to that Lord Derrington should not have the chance of insulting me further or of knowing who I was. My guardian suggested Brendon, so, as that was as good a name as another, so I took it. Hence Mrs. Jersey can't possibly know me or why I came to see her. Now I'll be wiser in the morning," added Brendon grimly.

"But she evidently saw in you some likeness to your father."

"Evidently. From all I have heard Mrs. Jersey was in love with my father, even though she was only a lady's maid. But I know very little about her. My business here is to learn."

"But why has she kept silent all these years?"

Brendon shrugged his shoulders. "She has had no inducement to speak out," he said. "That is why I wish you to lend me £300, Leonard. She will require a bribe."

"And a larger one than that, George. A woman like Mrs. Jersey would not part with such a secret for so small a sum."

"Well, I can pay her what she demands when in possession of the estates. But at present she will want to see the color of my money."

Train stared into the fire, meditating on this queer story, which was quite a romance. Then he saw an obstacle. "George," he said, "even if you prove that you are the heir, you won't get any money. Lord Derrington is still living."

"Yes, and from all accounts he means to go on living, like the truculent old man he is. But the estates are entailed and must come to me when he dies, and of course the title is mine, too, when he is done with it. If Mrs. Jersey learns these facts she will come to terms on a promise of money when I inherit."

"Then you will speak to her in the morning?"

"Yes. She is the only person who can right me. But I mean to be the husband of Dorothy Ward, and my only chance to get round the mother is to prove my legitimacy."

"I don't think Miss Ward cares much for her mother."

"Who could?" asked Brendon cynically. "She is a worthless little canary bird. But I tell you, Leonard, that frivolous as Mrs. Ward appears to be, she is a most determined woman, with an iron will. She will make her daughter do as she is told and will sell her to the highest bidder. As Lord Derrington's grandson and acknowledged heir I have a good chance. As George Brendon"—he stopped as the clock struck 11—"as George Brendon I am going to bed."

Train rose to light the candles which stood on a side table, yawning as he did so. He was much interested in Brendon's story, but the telling of it had tired him. "I shall sleep like a top tonight."

"Well, get to bed. I'll put out the lamp," said George, and did so.

"No," said Leonard, lighting a candlestick in either hand. "I'll see you to your couch," and he preceded him into the bedroom.

We Will Buy

A 50c. Bottle of Liquozone and Give it to You to Try.

We want you to know about Liquozone, and the product itself can tell you more than we. So we ask you to let us buy you a bottle—a full-size bottle—to try. Let it prove that it does what medicine cannot do. See what a tonic it is. Learn that it does kill germs. Then you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do.

This offer itself should convince you that Liquozone does as we claim. We would certainly not buy a bottle and give it to you if there was any doubt of results. You want those results; you want to be well and to keep well. And you can't do that—nobody can—without Liquozone.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving, in thousands of different cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a Liquid that does what oxygen does. It kills disease and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you.

Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle the an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All such medicine can do for those troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

A THEORY PROVED.

A New Idea Which Means a Great Deal in the Treatment and Cure of Disease.

Dr. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., the foremost physician of the Western States, has put forward a new theory as to the cause of disease. He says:

"There can be no question of the evidence at hand, that the Stomach is and has always been the chief cause of ninety per cent. of all the illness of mankind. The failure of the Stomach to digest the food properly results in fermentation, decomposition and the poisons arising from the foul and rotting mass get into the blood and tissue and nerves and breed diseases of every kind."

Dr. Leonhardt has found a remedy for Indigestion, Biliousness and Constipation. He has tried it in thousands of cases without a single failure.

He calls it Anti-Pill, it is sold at 50c. by all druggists, or The Wilson Fyle Co., Limited, Niagara Falls, Ont. Sole agents for Canada.

BUT TWO LEFT.

Mr. Miles McKim died on Sunday, 15th Jany., at the home of his youngest son, Mr. Arthur Snook, Westbrook, after a lingering illness. Deceased had been quite feeble for the past year, but was able to be up and around. He was confined to his bed for about a week before his death. Deceased was one of five brothers, sons of John McKim, of Switzerville, and Lydia Switzer, his wife, the parents being pioneers of Lennox. The two others have also passed away, but two, Christopher McKim, of Chesterfield Ohio, and Hiram McKim, of Sydenham, all having attained over the allotted span of the Psalmist, three score and ten years. In October, 1897 Beaver published an excellent picture of the five brothers, with a short sketch of each, which was widely copied by the newspapers of Canada and the United States.

ANOTHER SURPRISE.

On Thursday evening, Jan. 19th a small sleigh load of people drove up to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob D. Bell, Morven, and without asking permission stepped in and took possession of the house. The load consisted of J. D. Bell, father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bell, also brothers and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Albert Bell and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. T. Bell and family, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Sexsmith and family, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. W. Gordanier and son, twenty-one in all. After an hour or two was spent in chit-chat the ladies spread the table with all the goodies imaginable, goodies that would even tempt the appetite of the sick. The family then sat down to ease the table of its load, and the way the eatables disappeared was something wonderful even to the little "table pies," as they were called, when dropped into the toothless bugger and with one roll they were out of sight in the twinkling of an eye.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bell's ages are 83 and 78 r.sp ectively, and they are hale and hearty. They raised a family of seven children, and up to the present there has never been a break in the family, and all were present at the surprise except two sisters who are at home with ill. Mrs. J. C. Fraser and Mrs. I. H. Walker. Mr. J. D. Bell, although confined to his bed most of the time, is improving slowly.

The evening was spent in do-as-you-please with music and singing until the wee small hours and then Mr. Samuel Bell had in special prayer for his son's health, after which young J. D. God speed to health, started for home.

BRAKES REFUSED TO WORK.

Quite a smash-up occurred on the R. of Q. Junction line at Napanee, on Wednesday afternoon. The coach was standing at the platform, and while the engine and a couple of cars were backed down to it, the brakes refused to work, and the coach was rushed into, carrying it off the track and against Williams' bus, the side of which was damaged. The force of the concussion must have been considerable, a large oak block more than a foot square and heavy by an iron rail, was snapped off level with the setting in a bed of cement. A large G. T. R. engine was used to separate the wrecks, and it was midnight before everything was cleared away. The passenger coach was badly wrecked.

WEDDING BELLS.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Manly Terwilligan, of West Bloomfield, was the scene of a very pretty event, when their only daughter, Berniece, was united in marriage to Mr. George A. Howe, of Northport. At twelve o'clock noon the happy couple took their place under an arch of evergreens, the bride being given away by her father. Little Miss Vera Bowerman, who acted as flower girl, was handsomely attired in pale blue cashmere, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations, while the bride was exceedingly attired in cream crepe de chene, and carried a bouquet of white carnations. After the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Houck, and the usual congratulations given, the guests, who numbered about forty, were invited to the dining room, where they all enjoyed a most delicious repast prepared for the occasion. The bride, going away gown was of green broadcloth with hat to match. The happy couple left on the afternoon train amid showers of rice, for Ottawa and other eastern points. The presents were both numerous and costly, which evinced the high esteem in which the bride and groom were held.

KILPATRICK—FLEMING.

There was a quiet but pretty wedding at noon on Thursday last, 19th Jany., at the home of Mr. B. Kilpatrick, Amherst Island, when his eldest daughter, Mrs. Jennie, was united in marriage to Mr. J. Fleming, of the same place. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Cumberland, M.A., on the presence of the families of both parties and a few intimate friends. The bride wore a brown cloth suit and white silk blouse, also a handsome gold watch and chain, the gift of the bridegroom. Miss Christina Kilpatrick, who was bridesmaid, was presented by the bridegroom with a gold crescent brooch. Mr. Richard Fleming, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, also has been the efficient organist of St. Paul's Church for some time, was presented by the congregation with a purse and address, expressing good wishes and hearty thanks of all for the very valuable services he has rendered fully given. Many other gifts were also received. After a beautiful lunch had been partaken of the happy pair left for Brantford en route for Buffalo, where they will remain for the winter. A number of young friends accompanied them to the station to wish them bon voyage.

THE NEW ASSESSMENT ACT.

Toronto News.

The assessment of the Province will be made upon an entirely new basis this year, except as it affects real property. The abolition of the personality tax and the substitution of the business tax gives added importance to the fundamental principle of all taxation—the levy on land values. The assessment of the real property now becomes the basis for the assessment of a merchant's personality. For instance, a retail merchant, who is assessed for the premises occupied by his business at $8,000, will have a business assessment of 25 per cent. of the said assessed value, or $2,000, his business tax, therefore, is on this $2,000, which, at 29 mills on the dollar, would be $40. Thus any business man can ascertain for himself with little trouble exactly the amount of taxes chargeable against his business, subject, of course, to any future increase in realty.

Under the Act the merchant is not concerned at the approach of the assessor. He is not called upon to submit a statement of his assets and liabilities. Nor be asked any questions regarding the particulars of his business. The assessor simply enters his name as a retailer, after which his business assessment becomes automatically fixed. The same method applies to the chiffonier, the hawker, the wholesaler, the manufacturer, the professional man, the coal and wood dealer, the publisher, the lawyer, all engaged in business pursuits. They pay, however, varying from 25 per cent. to 150 per cent. But no one actually engaged in business can be assessed for less than $250. It is not compulsory that a return be requisitioned from a basis of wealth. In fact it can be, for the reason that a percentage of the assessed value of the land is taken as the business assessment in lieu of the value of personal property. But here lies the advantage, for its one course, and all contributions must be less to the fund of assessment. Where there are then inequalities between the assessment of land values, which is the only difficult application. Professional men have made no provision for a business assessment, and are not affected by the Act of 1903. Professional men will be assessed for personal income as follows: On income derived from personal earnings, income derived from other sources, and on assessable profits. The act is not satisfactory to everybody, of course, but the assessment experts regard it as an improvement, and to the ordinary citizen it has that appearance.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Lennox and Addington Mutual Fire Insurance Co. was held in the Council Chamber, Napanee, on Saturday, January 28th, at 1 o'clock p.m. The President, Mr. H. A. Baker, occupied the chair, and in his address referred to the steady progress of the Company since he became a Director, complimenting the policy holders on the unique standing of the company at present with no liabilities, and a substantial cash balance on hand. He referred to the successful efforts of the late Treasurer, Mr. S. H. Daly, in assisting the progress of the company, and also lamented the sudden demise of one of our old policy-holders and Directors of the Company, Mr. B. C. Lloyd.

The Auditors, Messrs. C. W. Neville and Ira Wartman, then gave their report. After several days of close scrutiny of the Company's books they found them correct in every particular, and spoke of the progress of the Company, reviewing the past three years, and complimented the Secretary and Treasurer on their method of keeping and the correctness of the Company's books.

The Secretary, in his address, spoke of the very successful year just ended, with an increase of one hundred and eight policies, and $176,000 more insurance than the previous year. The assets of the Company now amount to $45,824.31, with no liabilities.

Messrs. H. A. Baker and R. W. Longmore were re-elected Directors for another term. The addition of them met in the Company's office and elected I. F. Aylesworth, President; Jas. Wills, Vice President, for the ensuing year.

MRS SARAH SHIBLEY.

Truly a mother in Israel has fallen in the person of the late Mrs. Sarah Shibley, who departed this life on Monday morning, Jan. 16th, 1905, at her late residence, Yarker, at the age of sixty. Never did such a gloom rest upon Yarker as when the sad bells, both Anglican and Methodist, tolled the last sad rites were done to be performed over the house which the tenant had left, and indeed the greatest loss ever sustained by the Methodist Church of Yarker.

She was converted to God when but a child and remained faithful till death carried her to her higher sphere of enjoyment, to the mansion she loved so well, which Christ prepared for her by her blessed Saviour. She dearly loved the Methodist church, the church of her father and mother, and so often she was heard to say, "the church of father and mother is good enough for me." She was born in it, she lived in it, and she died in it, and from thence to her great reward.

Her life was fully consecrated to God and she was always ready for every department of church work. Active in the Ladies' Aid, part of the time President, active in W. F. M. S., loving the cause with all her heart, active in the prayer-meeting, not knowing what it was to be away if possible to get there; active in the Sunday School, being superintendent or assistant for Fifty years. She loved her scholars with all her heart and her only regret when dying was in leaving her charge in the Sunday School; active in the church, always in attendance if possible. She was present on the 4th Sabbath last in her usual health, and gave in her testimony clear and bright, desiring to be live that whenever death came she would be ready to meet him. She was associated with the choir for thirty-three years.

Her givings were most liberal. She was always ready whenever any benevolent cause was presented, and the poor especially will greatly miss her. Her home was always open to the minister; in fact, she was always the ministers' friend, loving them for their work's sake. How her almost daily trips to the parsonage will be missed, and also her many gifts which showed her love and sympathy for those who were sent to labor among them. At the age of nineteen she was married to Mr. A. Shibley, who predeceased her six years. After her marriage she took upon herself the work of a mother, having three step-children to care for. In the discharge of the duties that then came to her she showed the greatest wisdom. She trained them for the Lord and in early life they all consecrated themselves to His service, and they grew up to call her blessed.

Her life was a life of perfect trust in God and her end was peace. Just before she died she asked them to sing, "Safe in the arms of Jesus," and when asked by her daughter, "Mother, are you safe in the arms of Jesus?" she immediately replied in the affirmative, and assured them of the fact by a heavenly smile. Blessed indeed are the dead that die in the Lord. She leaves behind to mourn their loss, a sister, Mrs. Joyner, and step-daughters, Mrs. Wartman, Belleville, Mrs. Lauven, of Yarker, and step-son, Dr. Shibley, of California, who have the sympathy of the whole community. May her mantle fall on those who are left.—Com.

For Thin Babies

Fat is of great account to a baby; that is why babies are fat. If your baby is scrawny, Scott's Emulsion is what he wants. The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. They are happy because they are comfortable. The fat surrounds their little nerves and cushions them. When they are scrawny those nerves are hurt at every ungentle touch. They delight in Scott's Emulsion. It is as sweet as wholesome to them.

R., has been appointed assistant general store keeper at the Angus shops—a position of not little responsibility, which was formerly occupied by Mr. J. H. Callahan, who was recently appointed general store keeper at the same point. Mr. Hall commenced his railway experience, after a couple years spent as purser of one of the R. and O. boats running between Toronto and Montreal, in the office of the then chief engineer of the C. P. R., Mr. P. A. Peterson, being subsequently promoted to the office of the second vice-president and general manager. Mr. Hall has already begun upon his new duties. MAN WHO RULES JAPAN

The Emperor of Japan is the sun of all authority. Everything in the Mikado shines by his light. In the Japanese conception of history, he is the living representative of the gods who made Everlasting Great Nippon. Whether it were court nobles of immemorial lineage, heads of military clans mediæval governors appointed in the Mikado's name, or the all-powerful shogun at Kanakura or Yeddo, they did but shine by borrowed light. Even the consultation of 1889, which made government representative and progressive, was a gift in the name of his divine ancestors from the Emperor. The whole theory of Japanese society is that the Son of Heaven is the source of all authority, and that prosperity to the nation comes from his divine ancestors through him. The most serious question which Japanese patriots have to answer, and the most weighty problems they have to solve, centre in this—how to reconcile this ancient theory with the claims of civilization and of Christianity.

Free, to any Woman who bakes her own Bread

Thousands of women are writing in every week for the "Royal Household" Recipes—they explain the new and easier way of making bread. Make a trial with the new Royal Household Flour, which is purified by electricity—you would not believe there could be such a difference in flour—these receipes are certainly worth asking for. Send a postal card to-day.

HERE IS JUST ONE TESTIMONIAL OUT OF MANY THOUSANDS RECEIVED.

CANOAN, TRIPLE MILER CREEK, B.C., November 28th, 1904.

I have been using your flour exclusively ever since I came to Canada, fourteen years ago, and have been using "Royal Household" since its introduction. Before purchasing I never lately could not supply me with it, and had to change to another brand, even temporarily, I sent to Kamloops, nearly five miles away, and had it brought by express, preferring to pay the extra charges rather than use an inferior brand. In fact, I should not get it otherwise, I would ship it direct from the mills. I always rely on using your flour, and I feel I would be willing to add more to keep harmony in a home.

DRUGGING CHILDREN.

The mother who gives her little one "soothing" stuff when it cries surely does not realize that she is simply drugging it into temporary insensibility with a poisonous opiate. But that is just what she is doing. All the so-called "soothing" medicines contain poisonous opiates; they are all narcotic—all of them dangerous, and should never be given to children. Baby's Own Tablets are sold under a positive guarantee that they contain no opiate or harmful drug. The Tablets speedily cure all stomach troubles, constipation, diarrhoea, and simple fevers; they break up colds, prevent croup, ease the pain of teething, and give healthy, natural sleep. When little ones are cross, peevish and ailing, give them Baby's Own Tablets, and you will find there's a smile in every dose. You can get the Tablets from any medicine dealer or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS OF GREAT BRITAIN

One thousand million pounds, or $5,000,000,000, is the estimated amount of money to the credit of the thrifty poor and the working classes in Europe, which invested fund is backed up by the security of the Government of each country. Of this sum is less than two hundred million pounds sterling, or $1,000,000,000, represents the amount invested in the Postoffice Savings Banks of Great Britain and Ireland, and savings banks with almost equally good security.

There are about a half-dozen names associated in English history with the establishment of savings banks. Daniel Defoe is said to have proposed them in 1699, and exactly one hundred years afterward, on May 7th, 1799, a clergyman in Wendlaxer, Buckinghamshire, started the first savings bank in England.

Charles William Sikes, a cashier in the Huddersfield Banking Company, was said to be the originator of the idea of a system of "Savings banks under the control of the Government."

Fortunately for Mr. Sikes, the scheme found a champion in Mr. Geo. Chetwynd, one of the ablest officials in the Money Order Office of the General Postoffice, London, and this gentleman's plan for carrying it out was backed up by the Postmaster-General, Lord Stanley of Alderly, and by Mr. Scudamore, one of the most brilliant official heads at St. Martin's-le-Grand.

The Right Hon. William Ewart Gladstone introduced the Postoffice Savings Bank Bill in the House of Commons on February 9th, 1861.

The Postoffice Savings Bank bill passed the House of Commons in March and the House of Lords on the 17th of May following.

Mr. Charles William Sikes afterward received the honor of knighthood from the Queen for his efforts in the promotion of the great and benevolent scheme.

On September 16th, 1861, four months exactly after Her Majesty gave her assent to the measure, the Postoffice Savings Bank Act came into operation in Great Britain.

Three hundred postoffice savings banks were opened at as many post-office money order offices, and the sum of nearly £1,000 was lodged by 435 poor people on the first day.

Of the half a million depositors in 1865 it was found that 285,000 were females, children under age or trustees of small amounts; that 140,000 were mechanics, artisans, porters, domestic and farm servants, policemen, laborers, boatmen, fishermen and seamen, and that 53,000 were tradesmen, their assistants, farmers and clerks.

A shipbuilder tells of an Irishman who sought employment as a driver in the service of one of the shipbuilding companies.

The first job to which the Irishman was assigned was to be performed in comparatively shallow water. He was provided with a pick and told to use it on a ledge below.

Mike was put into a diver's suit, and, with his pick, was sent down to tackle the ledge. For about fifteen minutes nothing was heard from him. Then came a strong, determined, deliberate pull on the signal rope, indicating that Mike had a very decided wish to come to the top. The assistants hastily pulled him to the raft and removed his helmet.

"Take off the rist of it," said Mike.

"Why, what's the matter?" asked they?

"Take off the rist of it," doggedly reiterated Mike; "I'll wur-ruk no longer on a job where I can't spit on me hands."

Sale of the Spring Samples of J. and W. Campbell's, Glasgow, Scotland.

We were fortunate in securing at a big discount the two sets of Spring Samples sent out to Canada by the great Dry Goods House of J. and W. Campbell's of Glasgow. As the range of samples is very extensive we will from week to week give you due notice in our advertisements of the lines which we will place on sale. In several lines that we will advertise the quantities are so large, that we cannot reasonably expect to sell all in one day. In such case we will not withdraw from sale but continue the line until sold.

The following extract taken from "The Toronto Globe" of a recent date will give our customers an idea of the standing and character of the "J. and W. Campbell" business.

The history of the foundation and progress of the great warehousing firm, Messrs. J. & W. Campbell, of which Henry Campbell Bannerman's father was one of the original partners, and from which Sir Henry himself has drawn a fortune, is an interesting one. The J. and W. Campbell were James and William Campbell, Sir Henry's father and uncle respectively. William Campbell, his uncle, was in the early half of last century a chapman in a wagon, and at that time it was common to have two prices—e.g., an article might be ticketed at 12s 6d, but if some one came in and bargained it might be had for 10s.

In the course of time Dr Chalmers, of Disruption fame, delivered a series of lectures to business men in Glasgow on "Business Morality," in the course of which he condemned this system strongly as savoring of corruption. William Campbell was much impressed, and urged his employer to put a notice in the window, "No second prices in the establishment." His employer refused this idea, but after continued representations, he said to William Campbell, "If you wish to start a place on these lines I will lend you £500 to enable you to make the trial." William accepted this offer, went to the suppliers in England, got credit from them to a similar extent, opened his establishment with his brother James and Henry's father) as partner, and in course of time their success was so great that at the time of the disruption of the Church of Scotland, headed by Dr. Chalmers, William Campbell assisted the Free Church movement with a check for £10,000. The business has now grown to enormous proportions, centred in two gigantic warehouses in Glasgow, with a branch establishment in Leeds, and with a huge trade both at home and abroad.

—On 3rd January a robin appeared on a tree in front of the home of Mr. Henry Bush, Lapums, Ernestown, and has every day since made its appearance in the tree. It flies away about 5 o'clock each evening and re-appears in the morning. It has also been seen by the Misses Hogeboom and other neighbors —The Anson family benefit entertainment which came off at the Town Hall on Friday night last, was a decided success, and the friends who were instrumental in getting up this entertainment are more than delighted with the result. From the applause which greeted this clever family from time to time during the evening, we must admit that the audience were well pleased with their entertainers. Mr. Anson is certainly very clever as a magician, and the audience was treated to something entirely new in this line. Master Vernon is a wonder for one so young, and several encores greeted him from the highly pleased audience. Mrs Anson accompanied her son in his sax aph, and also during the whole entertainment on the piano.

NEWBURGH.

Already the young people are centreing their eyes on the pan-cakes that are to be flopped at the pan-cake social to be held in Strathcona on Feb. 14th, in aid of the Public Library.

The annual meeting of the patrons of Newburgh cheese factory was held here on Wednesday.

Mrs. Dan Hill is ill at her son's, John Dunn, Desmond.

Last Monday was one of the coldest days of the season. Notwithstanding the disagreeable elements of the weather on Wednesday, a large vote was polled: Paul, 63; Keech, 50, being one vote less than the vote at November 3rd. The Liberals received five returns by C. P. R. at the station, while the Conservatives received them in Percy's Hall, by G. N. W. service. The local Conservatives are wearing the broad smile these days, but we think they could hardly believe the news. They say they expected a victory, but not so sweeping. Saturday as people began to move about, they noticed crepe on various Liberals' houses and offices. The people's first inquiry was, who is dead? Gradually, however, the joke leaked out, and the Grits are now anxious to know, not "where did the money come from?" but "where did the crepe come from?"

Probably, it is some of the crepe the Tories had left from November 3rd, when they went into mourning for their Tory landslide. But they perhaps it not. Anyway we would like to know where did the crepe come from?

MORVEN.

Well, Mr Editor, we are sorry to see the weather is so mild, for we like cold, but we are looking for more every day.

Mr. H. Hamm has purchased the Vanhorn homestead for a fancy price and is moving in. We welcome Mr. Hamm and family to Morven and hope they will long reside here.

We are sorry to report Mr. Jake Bell as no better. The prayers and sympathy of the whole community are with Jake and family.

Mr. Jas. Rose is slowly going down, but we hope for a change for the better in the near future.

The home of Mr. A. Mills is visited with pneumonia, the baby being the victim, but hopes are entertained of its recovery.

A shadow has been hanging over the people of Morven during the past week owing to the serious illness of one of our esteemed young ladies, in the person of Miss Opha Funnell. Her sickness has caused much anxiety, but we are praying and the Doctor is working to bring her through safely, we hope he will succeed.

Owing to the bad roads the quarterly meeting last Sunday was not very largely attended, but all present were not sorry for the extra rest it put forth to get there.

The Conservative part of our community wear smiling faces and talk of the good times to come, but the Reformers wear long faces, and if they speak at all they talk of better days gone by.

A number of young people took the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Frink by surprise last Tuesday night, and spent a very enjoyable evening

A number of noisy young men from our quiet village called on Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Miller one night last week, and favored them with choice music and singing.

MARRIAGE BELLS OF HEAVEN

Invite You to Meet As the Bride of Christ

—Your Cry Should Be: "Lead On, Saviour! Lead On;" Even Now We May Hear the Wedding Chimes Ringing For the Nuptials of Heaven.

Entered according to Act of Parliamentof Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Diver, of Toronto, at the Minister of Agriculture.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 29.—From an incidental reference to an ancient Oriental marriage custom the preacher in this sermon draws lessons applicable to modern life. The book is Psalm xiv, 8, "All thy garments smell of myrrh and aloes and cassia out of the ivory palaces."

The marriage bells are chiming. The glorious robes of a kingly bridegroom and of his bride, the daughter of a queen, and the garments of her many bridesmaids are rustling! Royal feasts are flashing. The most skilful of musicians are playing! And as the "wedding march" sounds forth the many processions are approaching the king's throne room over boulevards of gold. The numberless inhabitants of the metropolis of the universe, with its walls of jasper and its gates of pearl and its palaces of sapphire and opal, are making the welkin ring with hallelujahs of never ending joy. The banqueting house of princes and of the wedding supper for the coming guests, for the Divine Bridegroom of my text is bringing. The queen is to take her place at his side, over which hangs the banner that his hands have placed there the day of love. Never on earth nor in heaven has there been and never shall be witnessed a wedding processional like unto this. Gorgeousness, might, wealth and power unlimited, splendor and magnificence passing all understanding, will there be manifested on every hand.

Earth has beheld many wonderful wedding pageants. When the present Emperor William of Germany was married to the beautiful Princess Augusta Victoria the representatives of all the civilized Governments of the earth were there. Among Berlin's guests at that time were the king and Queen of Saxony, the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia, Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria, the Crown Prince of Sweden, the present King of England, the late Duke of Aosta, of Italy and scores of other princes. The young bridegroom came from Potsdam at the head of his gigantic foot guards to meet his bride on the day of the ceremony the hotels and the stores and the public buildings were draped. The nuptial vows were taken the cheers of the people who crowded the streets were heard. The pulses echoed the thirty-six salvos of artillery which thundered the news to the world that Prince William and Princess Augusta Victoria were one.

When Napoleon III. in 1853 rode to the Cathedral of Notre Dame to be united in marriage with Eugenie, the most beautiful woman in Europe, the progress was one continuous ovation. Seated in the wonderful glass coach that had been built for the coronation of his illustrious uncle, the Emperor passed through long lines of his enthusiastic subjects, who rent the air with their vives. When the young Queen of England became the bride of Prince Albert in the Royal Chapel of St. James nothing that the court, the wealth and the love of a nation could do to make the wedding ceremony impressive and joyous was left undone.

Memorable in the annals of the world are such spectacles, in which all that human ingenuity could conceive has been done to render the nuptials of the rulers of nations the most enchanting magnificence. But the culmination is yet to come —not here, but in that glorious realm in which the Lord of Hosts has set his throne. The marriage of the Lamb will be the grandest and most glorious of all unions, when Christ takes to himself his church which he has redeemed with his precious blood, "a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, holy and without blemish."

Human imagination fails to conceive of a spectacle so glorious. Let us instead of dwelling on the marvelous scene take but one detail of its beauty, the wonderful garments with which the Divine Bridegroom is to be robed on that glorious occasion. The psalmist mentions them in the words of my text. They are wedding robes that have the aroma of myrrh and aloes and cassia. Let us try to describe them, and to learn a few practical gospel lessons from them.

The royal robes of the Divine Bridegroom will be the most magnificent of all garments. Costly was the wedding apparel of Louis XIV., which he wore when he was married to Maria Theresa of Spain; of Prince Ferdinand when he stood by the side of his bride, Isabella of Castile; of the dauphin of France who, as Prince Francis, married the beautiful Mary, Queen of Scots; of Emperor Napoleon II., who in 1894 gave his heart and hand in marriage to the beautiful Princess Alix of Hesse; of Napoleon Bonaparte when in 1810 he wedded Marie Louise in the place of the dethroned queen Josephine. But the robes of the Heavenly Bridegroom will surpass all these in their value. How do we know? Our oriental imagery of the text signifies it. Fine and beautiful in texture, they are to be perfumed with myrrh and aloes and cassia out of the ivory palaces.

Now, what gold and silver and precious stones in dress mean to the western mind myrrh and aloes and cassia in a sense mean to the oriental mind. As I would say to you, "Her dress was sparkling with jewels," the oriental, to depict sumptuousness and expensiveness of garments, would say: "His garments were aromatic with myrrh and aloes and cassia." Myrrh was one of the ingredients of the costly incense that men came to bow at the manger, what expensive presents did they bring? Gold and frankincense and myrrh. These oriental sages would not have offered to a king a present of myrrh unless it had a great money value. "The aloes of Cochin-China," wrote Dr. Faussett, "are worth their weight in gold." The value of cassia also was enormous. It was used, as Dr. McClintock informs us, as an ingredient in the anointing ointment. When the psalmist tells us that Christ's wedding garments smell of myrrh and aloes and cassia he means that he means us to understand how precious they will be.

Let us consider what makes them precious. They are the glory of our Lord. He will wear them in joy and gladness. Many and glorious people have made in his cause. They are going to cost all the moneys we give to our churches and to our reformatory institutions. We must give this money for Christ's robes. He bids us give. They are going to cost all the moneys we send to foreign missions. "Go teach all men" is the Bible command. Not only have they cost money, but blood. They are going to cost all the blood of the martyrs which has been shed in the past. Oh, how the expense of the wedding robes is rolling up. If the dead bodily of a common laborer slain by a express train in New York are worth $5,000, how much must have been worth the martyred blood of a Paul, a Peter, a Stephen, a Polycarp, a Justin Martyr, a Savonarola, a Huss, an Ephege, a Gileyn de Muler, a John Rogers, a Rowland Sanders, a John Harper, a Brebound a Lallemand and of the thousands and the tens of thousands that in all women slain by sword and spear and battleax or burned at the stake and tortured with all the engines of many "chambers of horrors?" God alone can know how the value of Christ's wedding garments is increasing.

But the supreme element in the cost of those wedding garments is the blood of Christ himself. It was by his own suffering and death that he won the right to wear them. Do you wonder that Isaiah when in prophetic vision he sees these wedding robes describes them by the crimson color of the bloody sacrifice? "Who is this," cried he, "that cometh from Edom with dyed garments from Bozrah—this that is glorious in his apparel? Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel and thy garments like him that treadeth in the wine vat?" Ah, my friends, I am glad to-day we can talk about the royal crimson and royal purple of Christ's wedding garments. I am glad that even in heaven, when looking upon the glorious face of Jesus, we shall not be allowed for one moment to forget the enormous cost in money and blood of the marriage robes in which Christ will be clad as the bridegroom when he takes his church as his bride for eternal nuptials. Am I going beyond my right in declaring that Christ's wedding garments are to be the most expensive of garments?

But, drawing near to the Divine Bridegroom, I find that Christ's wedding robes have a wonderful curative quality. Their touch is like the cool hand upon the fevered brow. Oh, yes, they are more than that. Their touch gives spiritual and physical healing. It is like the healing power of Christ's earthly robe when the border of it was pressed just an instant by the fevered hand of the woman who had an issue of blood for twelve years. No sooner did her flesh come in contact with it than immediately "the woman was made whole from that hour." We have read how the ancient devotees used to travel many miles to be cured in their physical pains at the tomb of St. Ann de Beaupre, or at the "healing spring" of Lourdes, or by the flowing robes of St. Anthony, St. Patrick or St. Bernard, but never did tomb or fabled water or flowing garments of dead saints have such curative qualities, spiritual or physical, as will have the wedding garments of Jesus Christ.

How do I know this? The symbols of the myrrh and the aloes and the cassia teach it. They were all used medicinally. "The myrrh, as is well known," writes an author, "was celebrated for its use in medicines The ancients prepared a wine of myrrh and also an oil of myrrh. It was found as an ingredient in many of the celebrated compound medicines." "Myrrh is especially of great use," says another author, "along with aloetic medicines and compounds of iron." The medicinal quality of aloes is defined in every dictionary. Cassia was also used as a drug by the ancients. Thus when we come in touch with Christ's wedding garments of the Divine Bridegroom, then I say let me have my pain and heartaches. There is sometimes a joy in suffering. There is sometimes a peace in pain. As Tennyson writes, "It is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all." That wedding ring upon your hand—would you wish never to have had it placed there? It may be many years ago since the hand that put it upon your finger was laid in the grave. Would you like to blot out all the memories you have had with that earthly life? "Oh, no," you answer. "No, no! My joy to-day is in living in the beautiful halls of memory and in thinking over again all the happy days we spent together. I would sooner have had a dear husband as he was and have had him taken away than never to have known what the companionship of such a husband meant to a wife." If you have an incurable physical pain would you have the physician give to you an opiate to deaden your sensibilities and your mind for years to come? "Oh, no," you answer, "then I would be nothing more than a bleating creature or a log or a stone. Better my thinking mind with pain than continual unconsciousness without pain." Well, then, the wedding robes of Christ must do more for us than merely alleviate suffering, else we would want none of them. I would not wish to live a thousand years on earth if to do it I would have to endure the mere animal existence of an Australian aborigine, even though then I might not know physical or mental suffering.

Thus I come to the climax of my subject. The royal robes of Christ give to us a positive assurance that the marriage ceremony of the Divine Bridegroom and of the church, his bride, is to be a beginning of never ending joy, not the mere end of sorrow or pain or suffering or death. Prove this, you say I will. "He, Nicodemus," I cry, "exhibit art thou going? Friend, why is thy countenance so sad? Why dost thou long for the other side that great burden of a hundred pound weight?" At once Nicodemus, the same Nicodemus who went to Jesus by night, looks up, and I see that his eyes are filled with tears and his face drawn down by a great sorrow. "I am going," says he, "with this hundred pound weight of myrrh and aloes to embalm the body of Jesus Christ, who has just been crucified. We are going to bury the Saviour's body in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea. I wish his body to be preserved by these spices as long as possible." But, Nicodemus, will these spices of myrrh and aloes preserve the body of Jesus?" "Yes," answered the ruler of the Jews, "they will. If you will examine the mummies preserved for thousands of years in the Egyptian tombs you will find that these spices were the chief causes of their preservation." Herodotus, the father of history," nearly 500 years before Christ was crucified, records that the Egyptians always preserved the bodies of their dead with these spices. "They then fill the body with pure myrrh and aloes and cassia and other perfumes, except frankincense." Thus we find by these two statements that the wedding garments of Christ not only have a curative, but also a preservative, quality. That means, carrying the figure up to its acme of symbol, "that the wedding garments of Christ will never fade or grow old.

No, they will never become yellow and worn, as are some of the bridal dresses that were worn many years ago. They will never be put aside as old fashioned. The weddings songs that we shall sing at the marriage of the Lamb shall never have an end. The happiness joy with which we greet our dear ones on the other side of the Jordan shall never grow monotonous. The loving kiss which the Divine Bridegroom places upon the lips of his bride shall never become cold and indifferent. The myrrh and the aloes and cassia shall prevent and increase joy, even as the wedding garment of Christ shall halt and cure and kill sorrows. Oh, yes, these wedding robes of Christ are to be perfumed with the symbol of never ending peace. The ever increasing joy of earth shall roll and swell and continue to increase through all the coming ages. "Hosanna, blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord! Hosanna!"

From whence come these airs laden with odor of the myrrh and the aloes and the cassia of the wedding garments? They come from the "ivory palaces of heaven." Mark you well my dear friends, not from earthly palace, but from many. That means that when we as part of the church are to be united to Christ we are going to keep our own individualities. Had my text said, "In the ivory tombs of Christ" I might think I had my doubts about it, but there is no doubt here.

But though here may be many "ivory palaces" in heaven odorous with the myrrh and the aloes and the cassia, I fear that some of you who are invited to be at the wedding ceremony may not be present It is ages since I sent an invitation to the marriage ceremony; it is another to be there. Shall we at this moment say to our Divine Bridegroom: "Jesus, thou Prince, we will not love thee, we will not unite with thee, we will not live with thee in an ivory palace of heaven since we have not lived with thee on earth." Shall it be that all our dear ones who have gone beyond, who are waiting to listen to our nuptial vows to Christ in the ivory palace of heaven, shall have to wait for us in vain?

Supposing you refuse to meet the Divine Bridegroom at the marriage altar of heaven, what will Jesus do? What will Jesus do? Call another wife and mother and father and little child, who have gone beyond—that will they all do? Supposing when you were about to be married, your fiancee had refused to appear. What would you have done? "Oh," you say, "that was impossible. She loved me too much not to have met me there." Can it be, O would be bride of Christ, that you love Jesus any less than your loved one loved you?

"Lead on, Saviour! Lead on! Even now we may hear the wedding chimes ringing for the nuptials in the ivory palaces of heaven.

To Treat a Feverish Horse.

If the horse has been standing in the stable for some time the feverish condition may be due to errors in feeding and lack of exercise." Feed less grain and exercise daily. A mash made of bran, meal and bran is good, the linseed being boiled to a jelly and the bran added while hot. Two parts bran and one of linseed meal, with a little salt.

Vain Work to a Town.

Good country roads are not only the life of the country they traverse, but they are the life and the progress of the town or city into which they centre. The poorest man in such a town is as much in the road question as the richest, and is interested in the good condition of the roads leading into it.

Sleep not only rests, but builds up the body. Lack of sleep means poor sleep, and you cut down health in the same proportion. Nervousness decreases, nerves go to smash, you grow tired, weak and wretched.

To restore sleep you must get more bodily strength, more nutritious blood, healthier nerves. Ferrozone solves the whole problem, makes you sleep soundly, gives endurance, vim, ambition. No more morning weakness—instead the fire of youth will run in your veins, supplying abundance of energy and vigor. Witchery expresses the instant effect of Ferrozone; try it.

LA GRIPPE'S RAVAGES.

The Victims Left Weak, Nerveless and a Prey to Deadly Diseases.

La grippe, or influenza, which sweeps over Canada every winter, is a deadly foe to the most treacherous disease known to medical science. The attack may last only a few days, but the deadly poison in the blood remains. You are left with hardly strength enough to walk. Your head, your chest, your heart and nerves are permanently weakened, and you fall a victim to deadly pneumonia, bronchitis, consumption, rheumatism, or racking kidney troubles. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills never fail to cure the disastrous after effects of la grippe because they purify the blood and sweep away its poisonous germs. Every dose makes new, warm, rich blood which brings health and healing to every part of the body. This is proved in the case of Mme. Dorsina Langlois, of St. Jerome, Que., who says, "I had a severe attack of la grippe, the after effects of which left me racked with pains in my body and my body. My appetite completely failed me; I had severe headaches, was subject to colds with the head heavy, and grew so weak that I was unable to work at my trade as dressmaker. I tried several medicines but without success until a drug clerk advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I acted upon his excellent advice and the pills rapidly and completely cured me. My appetite returned, the headaches and cough disappeared, and I am again enjoying my old-time health. I consider that half suffering from la grippe will use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills they will speedily prevent the after effects of la grippe which makes the lives of so many people a burden."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure all the common ailments due to weak and watery blood, such as anæmia, headaches, indigestion, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, nervousness, general weakness and the special troubles that prostrate growing girls and women do not like to talk about even to their doctors. But only genuine pills can do this, and you should see that the full name "Dr. William's Pink Pills for Pale People" is printed on the wrapper around each box. If you cannot get the genuine pills from your druggist send direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and they will be mailed 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

FEBRUARY CANADIAN MAGAZINE

The Valentine month comes. The Canadian Magazine is to publish a valentine story and a valentine poem in its February issue. The illustrated features are also timely. Just when the future of the Northwest is promptly being discussed the public, an illustrated article on "The Northland of Canada," and another entitled "How to Settle on Government Lands" are seasonable. The former is accompanied by some good photographs of the Eskimo portion of our population. With plans and pictures of their igloos of snow-houses. "The Architecture of Dongala," the only Canadian Marchioness in the peerage, is the subject of a paper by Mr. Percy E. Nobbs, illustrations. "Is Great Britain Preparing for War?" is one of the more serious articles on the subject of several. Elliott Stock's paper on "Roberts and the Influences of His Time," is another. "The Surrey Hills and Their Built" is an important contribution to Canadian history. There is an instalment of the new novel, "The Builders," a story of the War of 1812.

What does it profit a woman if she gain the whole world if nobody cares to lose her own health? Young ladies, and school teachers, eager, ambitious, and full of energy, very often neglect their health in the struggle for higher education. They eat hasty, ill-cooked food, and at irregular hours, they allow irregularity of the womanly functions to be established, and the result is that headache, chronic invalids with all their exhaustion practically overtakes them. Their whole plan tends to health for such as these, marked by perfect boundaries. It is the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which purifies the stomach and digestive and nutritive organs, and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for diseases of the delicate organs of women. A cure so certainly follows the use of these remedies that out of hundreds of thousands who have used them, not ninety-eight in every hundred have been perfectly and permanently cured. Constipation, and its calamitous consequences, which is a common complaint of students, can be entirely cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

WHAT IT IS.

The Mucous Membrane and the Important Part it Plays in the Health or Sickness of the Body.

The Mucous Membrane is the inside lining of the body, and of all its vessels and cells that communicate with the outside. When the mucous membrane becomes out of condition, even so little disease, follows swiftly, in some form or other, in ninety-nine cases in a hundred disease has its beginning in some derangement of this Mucous Membrane.

It is very delicate and extremely sensitive, and consequently very liable to disease.

If you are not feeling well you may be sure that the Mucous Membrane of some organ is sick and requires immediate treatment.

There is one medicine that is intended to act, and does act, directly and curatively on the Mucous Membrane. It is Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, and Constipation disappear as soon as Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill has restored the Mucous Membrane to its natural healthy condition. 50 cents a bottle, at all Druggists, or The Wilson-Pyle Co., Limited, Niagara Falls, Ont. Sole agents for Canada. 110

SELL YOUR COLD FOR $1.00?

You surely won't stop at a dollar bill to cure that horrid, suffering cold? Go to any druggist and get "Catarrhozone" and your cold will be a thing of the past. There is almost sixteen times in the small 25c. package as in the dollar outfit. But when you consider the penetrating, healing and antiseptic qualities of Catarrhozone perhaps it is not so wonderful. Certainly there is no remedy half so prompt for colds and catarrh as Catarrhozone. Refuse a substitute and insist on having only "Catarrhozone."

AN INTERESTING COW CENSUS.

Figures from Canadian Herds. Some Striking Contrasts.

At the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Convention Mr. C. F. Whitley of the Dairy Commissioner's Branch, Ottawa, gave a very interesting account of a cow census which he conducted in the vicinity of Cowansville, Que., during the summer of 1904. Under supervision seventy-two farmers kept daily milk records of their cows and three times a month took samples of the milk from the milk of each individual cow in their dairies. In this way reasonably accurate figures were obtained.

For the month of June the general average of all the herds tested was 662 lbs. of milk, yielding 25 lbs. of fat. In one case twenty-two cows had a yield for the month of 17,845 lbs. of milk and 726.3 lbs. of fat, an average per cow of 811 lbs. of milk and 33.24 lbs. of fat. In another herd of eleven cows, every animal was below the general average, the range being as low as 280 lbs. to 605 lbs. of milk per cow, and this herd consisted of Jersey, Guernsey, Ayrshire and Holstein grades and natives. In contrast to this, another herd of twelve cows of similar breeding yielded from 830 to 1115 lbs. per cow, so that every cow in the herd was above the average. This shows that the flow of milk depends upon the individuality of the cows even more than upon their breeding.

In the month of July a herd of twenty-seven cows, Jersey, Ayrshire, Holstein and Shorthorn grades, gave 13,760 lbs. of milk and 473.7 lbs. of fat, an average of 509 lbs. of milk and 17.5 lbs. of fat per cow. This was typical of several herds consisting of mixed grades. The average record of the best cow not quite below the average of the whole 1120 cows for July. The best showing was made by a Holstein grade, whose record is more than double that of the poorest cow. This dairy had five more cows than that first mentioned, and yet produced 4,000 lbs. less milk in the month. Another July record showed that one herd of six cows gave 2515 lbs. of milk, while another dairy of twelve cows gave 8,026 lbs.; twice as many cows gave over three times as much milk in exactly one lot of twenty-three cows gave 8,120 lbs. of milk, and another lot of twenty-three yielded 2,990 lbs. These records emphasize the need for knowing definitely the production of each individual cow.

The average production per cow must be improved by weeding out the poor ones. Figuring goes well with farming. With forethought and figures, the production of butter in the average farm herd can be increased at least 40 lbs. per year in five years. It has been done scores of times. It is safe to say that almost every farmer milking twenty cows has three on which he loses money. Until he keeps records he cannot tell which they are. It will pay him to find out.

The wide variation in the total yields of butter by individual animals in the same herd is even more appalling. Here are the records of seven cows in this herd exceeded the general average, ranging from 117 to 251 lbs. These figures are encouraging. This man's record can be, and should be, equalled on a thousand farms in the next few years. Such results are obtained by using the scales and Babcock tester to detect the robber cow and get rid of her. Then, by the use of a good dairy-bred sire, and aiming at a standard of 6,000 lbs. of milk and 250 lbs. of butter per cow annually, a good herd can speedily be grad ed up. There are thousands of dairy farmers who have thus raised a butter production of their herds in a few years from 150 or 175 lbs. to 300 lbs. per annum.

CANNING FACTORY PROPOSAL.

Monday evening a special meeting of the council was called to discuss with Mr. W. J. Carson, of Belleville, the terms for building a canning factory in Napanee.

All the members of the council were present, Mayor Lowry presiding.

Mr. Carson was asked to open the meeting by giving the council such information as would give them an idea of what would be considered sufficient inducement to induce him to establish a canning factory at Napanee. He said he wished to hear what inducements it would be offered, and wanted to get an idea as to what the council would be willing to do.

Then Symington was present, and when asked for an opinion said it was certainly to the interest of the farmers around Napanee would be without a canning factory for some time. There would be no trouble in getting the factory when once it been started. Assistance would undoubtedly have to be given the question is how much and what extent. The assistance is given it should be given to men who the people have confidence in, men who have experience and men who will put their own money in it and make it a success. Outside towns are offering bonuses, and while he did not favor bonuses, if other towns did it we would have to do likewise. There are many disadvantages in starting a canning factory here. The surrounding farming community would have to be educated to it, to grow those things which a canning factory would need and take all round the starting of a canning factory would be partially an experiment. He was informed that the location for the proposed factory would be near the railway track just south of the diamond. This would necessitate certain improvements, one of the main things being the the matter of drainage. Sooner or later the street leading to this location would have to be graded and put in good shape, especially so if the Grand Trunk moved their station west as has been talked about. When the factory was being rebuilt, a sewer could be put in. This would be an inducement as it would provide the owners of the factory with wave and means of drainage which they must have. Then the town could also exempt them for taxes for ten years, except the school tax. He also suggested that the town loan the promoters $5,000, for ten years, and take a mortgage on the property. Then at the end of the said ten years if the company had paid out its wages a certain amount, fixed in an agreement between the town and the company, their mortgage would become null and void. These were only suggestions, the main question now was are we going to assist to the establishing of a canning factory.

Coun. Meag was agreeable to exemption for ten years and quite in favor of the drainage question, but as to bonus he thought it would have to be submitted to the people before any money could be granted. He would be in favor of giving them a portion of their bonds for ten years.

Coun. Graham thought Mr. Symington's idea a very fair proposition. Napanee is very much in need of a canning factory. He felt satisfied the people would approve of any reasonable proposition. Now that the surrounding country would be benefitted, but the lab ring class would also be benefitted, as it means a means of employment. He thought it was only a question of getting the concern started, and everybody would be pleased.

Coun. Williams said he was quite willing to do his share and assist in every way in having of a canning factory. He thought Mr. Carson should state what he would expect in the way of assistance then the council would know how to act. There was no better place in Ontario for the establishment of an industry of the kind. Farmers from the surrounding neighborhoods have a good idea of what to raise, and what produce to grow before they go to the expense of putting in a crop. The citizens and council would do anything to assist. He thought if the council knew what was wanted it or would know how to act.

Coun. Simpson's ideas were similar to Coun. Williams. There were no two opinions as to the need of a canning factory on an extensive basis, with an output capacity equal to any in the district. Nevertheless he would like to have an idea as to what assistance would be acceptable.

Mayor Lowry thought Mr. Symington's suggestions very fair. If the Grand Trunk moved their station west, the street leading to it would undoubtedly have to be repaired and the sewer could be put in at the same time. Anything in reason he thought he would be accepted by the people.

Mr. Carson said at the outset there would be an expenditure of twenty or twenty-five thousand dollars for buildings, machinery, cans, etc. Then when the working season arrived there would be another outlay of fifteen or twenty thousand dollars before any returns would be received. He had applications from several localities. There were two requirements, among them being Deseronto, Godwich, and Uxbridge. They were all good towns and looked favorably on. He adapted for an industry of this nature. He thought Mr. Symington's idea might be worked out to advantage. The factory which would be enacted would be modern in every particular. The size of the main building would be about 60 x 80, and then there would be other buildings added as required, boiler house, boiler room, etc. There would be no trouble in disposing of the output, as the world-wide reputation of Napanee as a desirable market for all that could be furnished. Two factories at Picton, also one at Belleville had been established, and enjoyed exemption from taxes, he could not say to what extent. If an understanding could be arrived at the factory would be erected and in working order this season. The council would consider their proposition, which would mean that about twenty men would receive employment during the canning season. The general idea of the whole council was that Mr. Carson should make a clear proposition to the council and then they would be in position to act.

Moved by Coun. Meag, seconded by Coun. Kimmerly, that Mayor Lowry, together with the town solicitor meet Mr. Carson and draft some definite proposal to be presented to the council Tuesday evening, at 7.30 pmp. Carried.

Council adjourned.

TUESDAY EVENING.

As per adjournment from Monday evening the council met at 7.30 o'clock Tuesday evening. All the members present, Mayor Lowry presiding.

The Mayor explained the nature of the meeting held on Monday evening, after it had a proposition to present to the Council.

Mr. Carson presented the following:

To the Mayor and members of the Municipal Council, of the Town of Napanee.

GENTLEMEN,—I beg leave to submit to you the following proposition. I propose to establish in your town, a canning factory, for the purpose of canning all kinds of fruits and vegetables. I propose to expend for the necessary buildings and plant at least $10,000.00, and probably considerably more and expect to pay for wages in operating the factory and carrying on the business in excess of $10,000.00 per year. The amount will be largely increased if the proper supplies can be had from the farmers in this section of the country.

What I ask from the municipality is the exemption from taxes, except school taxes, for a period of ten years, and that the assessment of the property for taxation for local purposes shall be fixed at a nominal sum for ten years. Free use of a sufficient supply of water from the water works and a two inch water main laid to the factory to furnish such water, and adequate sewerage to carry off the waste water, 42 Inch Trunk sewer to be laid on Centre St.

We Offer $1,000

For a Disease Germ That Liquozone Can't Kill.

On every bottle of Liquozone we offer $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. We do this to assure you that Liquozone does kill germs.

And it is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless when any germ disease. It is this fact which gives Liquozone its worth to humanity; a worth so great that, after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, we paid $100,000 for the American rights. And we have spent over one million dollars, in one year, to buy the first bottle and give it free to each sick one who would try it.

Acts Like Oxygen.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor by mere any alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a tonic, because it helps blood—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. It is an absolutely certain germicide. The reason is that germs are vegetables, and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is ready to vegetal matter.

Liquozone goes into the stomach, into the bowels and into the blood, to go wherever the blood goes. No germ can escape it and none can resist it. The results are inevitable, for a germ disease must end when the germs are killed. Then Liquozone, through its wonderful tonic, quickly restores a condition of perfect health. Diseases which have resisted medicine for years yield at once to Liquozone, and it cures diseases which medicine never cures. Half the people you meet—however you are—can tell you of cures that were made by it.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS SICK?

Let your morning urine stand for 24 hours in a glass or vessel, and if a sediment is milky or cloudy, or contains a reddish brick-dust sediment, or if particles or germs float about in it, your kidneys are diseased. If the kidneys are well they filter just so much blood, but if they are sick or weak from any cause, they leave the poison in the blood, and this poison affects the entire system.

It is natural to pass urine three times a day, but many people regard themselves as healthy who are obliged to pass water six to ten times daily and are obliged to get up frequently during the night. They have sick kidneys and bladder and don't know it. Smith's Buchu Lithia Pills cure Rheumatism and all Kidney, Bladder and Blood troubles and make new, rich blood.

We will send you a generous sample post paid Free, together with our large book on the above mentioned diseases. Address, W. H. Smith & Son, 185 St. James Street, Montreal, Canada.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

On Saturday afternoon last our citizens were shocked when the news was spread broadcast that a man had been almost instantly killed at the Grand bridge in the east end of the town. Investigation revealed the fact that the report was only too true, the unfortunate gentleman being Mr. Alexander Breckenridge, a well known and highly respected resident of North Fredericksburgh. While driving down Dundas street, on his return home, deceased lost control of the team he was driving and they started to run away. The stone piers supporting the G.T.R. bridge lay directly in their path, and one of the infuriated animals hit the abutment. The tongue of the sleigh also struck, and precipitated Mr. Breckenridge, head first into the road. His head and face were severely smashed and cut, the unfortunate man only living about two hours after the accident. Deceased was about 55 years of age and unmarried. Besides his father, who is 93 years of age and very poorly, two brothers, David and James, and one sister, Annie, at home, and John, in the Yukon, are left to mourn the loss. The funeral took place on Monday last, and was largely attended. Rev. J. R. Cox conducting the services.

HITCHINS—SCOTT.

On Wednesday evening, 25th Jany., Miss Edith Lilian Scott was united in marriage to Mr. Allen Nelson Hitchins, at the home of the bride's mother. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Cumberland, M.A., in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dainty white gown with collarette of lace insertion and embroidered medallions which was extremely becoming. She also wore a Jewelled brooch, the gift of the bridegroom. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room where ample justice was done to the good things provided. After a pleasant evening the newly married couple left for their future home near Emerald, amid the congratulations and hearty good wishes of all. The bride was the recipient of many handsome and useful presents, testifying to the esteem in which she is justly held by a large circle of friends.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The annual meeting of the congregation was held on Wednesday evening, and proved most gratifying to all interested. The reports of the various departments, Board of Managers, Ladies Aid, W.F.M.S., Sunday School, Mission Band, etc., all showed a faithful year's work, with balances on the right side of the ledger. The following is the abstract of the moneys raised during the past year:

Willing Workers, Mission Band	$ 16 45
Woman's Foreign Missionary Society	79 26
Sabbath School	132 38
Schemes of the Church	277 57
Ladies Aid Society	222 65
General Fund, Managers	1604 29
	$2393 01

The Ladies Aid reduced the debt during the year $200, also paying the interest, $30. The debt is now only $400. Four retiring managers were re-elected, W. J. Campbell, U. J. Flach, Dr. Sills and John English, and Mr J. A. L. Robinson added to the board.

A CANNING FACTORY IN SIGHT

At a special meeting of the Town Council, held last Monday night, to consider the proposition Mr. Carson, of Belleville, to build a canning factory in Napanee, Mr. Carson proposed to put in a $15,000 plant and pay at least $10,000 each year in wages, if the town will give him five acres of land to be used for a canning factory, free from taxes, except school taxes, for ten years, and free water. The proposition met with approval and steps will be taken to carry out the wishes of Mr. Carson, and, as all probability the canning factory will be built. Another meeting was held on Tuesday night, at which Mr. Carson gave further particulars. The report will be found on page 2, and we hope will receive attention to it. The farmers of the Townships of Richmond, North and South Fredericksburgh and Adolphustown will be greatly benefitted should the factory be built, and these municipalities will be asked to assist in the expense of purchasing the site, etc., should the scheme go through.

OBITUARY.

GEORGE GOODSON THOMPSON, died quite suddenly at his residence, near Shannonville, on Wednesday, Jan. 18th, aged fifty-six years. Deceased had been a great sufferer all his life from asthma, and here his sufferings with true Christian courage. In religion he was a Methodist, in politics a staunch Conservative. Mr. Thompson was the son of the late Wm. Thompson and Agnes Lochhead, and was born near Centreville. He married Miss Margaret Rogers, who with six sons and one daughter, are left to mourn a kind husband and father. A sister, Mrs. David Weese, and brother, Mr. John L. Thompson, reside near Selby.

JOHN PATTERSON.

Another landmark is the person of John Patterson, of Moscow, passed away, January 28th, at a ripe old age, being in his 94th year. He was of a robust constitution and his remarkable faculties were unimpaired, being able to discuss any subject up to the time of his last illness which was of short duration, only lasting a day, sleeping peacefully away. The deceased was born in the County Tyrone, Ireland, in the year 1812, came to Canada in 1831, settling for a short time in South Fredericksburgh. In the year 1838 he was united in marriage by Rev. Conrad Vanduzen to Agnes Boyd, who predeceased him by two years. In 1842 they removed to Camden, where he has since resided. He was a member of the Methodist church over seventy-five years; was a local preacher in the Wesleyan Methodist church up to the time of the union of the two Methodist bodies, and was a great worker in the church of his choice. He frequently heard to say he did not fear death and was ready to go when the Lord called him. In politics he was a staunch Conservative. The family consists of seven children, five sons and five daughters, all surviving to mourn the loss of a loving father, S. A. Patterson, Centreville; Mrs. Agnes Parker; Mrs. J. W. Switzer, Kenils; Mrs. W. J. Patterson, at the old home, Moscow; Mrs. Murray Parks, Hawleyville; Miss Patterson at home, and Miss Annie, in New York City. The funeral took place on Tuesday, January 31st, in the Moscow church. The services were conducted by Rev. W. H. Buckler, a former pastor, assisted by Rev. J. Farquharson. The text chosen was from 2 Timothy, 4th chapter, 7th and 8th verses, which read: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing." The remains were placed in the vault for final interment.

"Servant of God well done,
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last.

NEWBURGH.

Quarterly meeting was held in the Methodist church on Sunday morning. At the official board meeting held on Saturday a unanimous invitation was extended to the pastor, Rev. J. F. Kitchen, to remain a third year.

At the regular meeting of the Village Council on Monday evening, a petition was presented signed by thirty-one electors, in regard to the Council taking over the Public Library. Mr. Mallon, for Camden East, and Mr. Harvey Warner, of the village, each moved and offered $200 each. Another gentleman also offered $50, making $450 in all. These offers are conditional upon security being furnished that the public library be maintained, and it was with this object in view that the board considered the library to be taken over by the village. The petition was presented by Rev. J. H. Chant, who spoke briefly on the question. Mr. M. W. Simkins asked many questions and in the end he argued against many of the things that were provoking to some present. Consequently things were lively for a few minutes. Mr. G. W. Ellis also spoke on the subject, and many electors raised various questions. It is surprising that so many in the village are opposed to the library. It is an institution to be proud of, and its value is great, its influence far-reaching. After discussion, the petition was left over to be considered at the next meeting, to be called by the Reeve, the auditors' report was presented by P. G. Millar, B.A.

WARDEN'S SUPPER

The Warden, W. A. Martin, Esq., who was unanimously elected to the highest position in the gift of his fellow Councillors, kept the time-honored custom of the Warden's supper at the Campbell House on Friday evening last and the guests were the members of the County Council, county officials and other friends to the number of nearly forty. Mr. Harry Taylor, the popular proprietor of the Campbell House, outdid himself credit on the occasion, the tables being beautifully decorated and the menu being another excellent assortment that tempted the inner man.

Col. Thos. Close made a very acceptable chairman, while W. S. Herrington, K.C., at the opposite end of the table did a creditable assistant in his usual affable manner.

After all had thoroughly enjoyed the "inner man" the toast list was called for, King" was responded to by Sheriff Hawley, and he had the honor of proposing both in the same year as the Napoleon, and briefly referred to the visit of the Prince of Wales, also King Edward, M.P., in Canada and said it was pleasant of seeing him at Kingston. Mr. Hawley, in glowing terms of the host of the evening, and congratulated him on his success.

"The Army and Navy" was responded to by Col. Clyde, who said the Canadian youth possess the three great essentials of a soldier. He is a good marksman, fit to bring, and he can endure hardships and fatigue. The armed Canadian had already given a good account of himself, and if the need should arise, he will do it again.

"Our Legislatures" was briefly taken up by Messrs. T. J. Grange and M. A. Maude, followed by Mr. Herchimer Mowry, Deseronto Road, who rendered a solo in his usual good voice.

Messrs. H. A. Baker and M. C. Bogart responded to the toast, "The Council, Council," and delivered interesting addresses.

"Our Host," was ably handled by Mr. Martin. He said he had now attained his ambition in the County Council, having succeeded from the attendance and kind words.

Messrs. Burgess, I.P.S., and Geo. Aitcheson addressed the toast, "Our Educational Institutions," the latter saying, in part, as follows: That we are favored with institutions besides schools. It has been said that to provide properly to educate a man, you must begin with his grandmother. The right of any citizen to comprise those of us to labor was commendable, and he was glad to see it summoned. When a man has gone through the election campaign he must be very apt to have learned several things that he didn't even suspect before. Actual life is any and all of the activities in itself the best University. And yet when a man of good race and good family has gone through all the schools, from kindergarten to that of society and through public service, has attained experience and wisdom—what then? Why, just then, or shortly after—he dies! It seems unfeelingly like, but Victor Hugo, after contemplating the theory of evolution, threw out in Gaelic exuberance with "I am a reptile—or am arranged to be."

Mr. H. Aylesworth favored those present with a song, after which the remaining toasts were responded to by Messrs. Edwards, W. G. Wilson and T. B. Germain.

Those present besides the host were Mr. Sheriff Hawley, Messrs. W. S. Herrington, Thos. Close, M. S. Madole, Arlie Benn, C. A. Aylesworth, T. J. Shannon, G. H. Pinkle, Albert B. Root, T. Grange, Jr., Geo. Madole, John English, John Allison, W. A. Baker, A. A. Vanduzen, Irvine Parks, Geo. Woodcock, Wesley Huffman, Wesley Loughridge, Dennis Lucier, E. W. Hall, F. P. Johnston, F. B. German, D. B. Miller, C. H. Edwards, W. G. Wilson, A. A. Baker, H. Aylesworth, M. N. Empey, J. Farquharson, W. Grange, Edgerton VanLuven, G. D. Hawley, Edgerton VanLuven, G. D. Hawley, E. J. Hyland, Thos. Clyde.

The picture at the top of this column is an excellent photo of the worthy host, Mr. W. A. Martin, Reeve of Ernestown and Warden of Lennox and Addington, who was born in the township of Richmond in 1860. He is a son of the late Wm. Martin, who also represented them in the Legislature 1890 to 1894, when he was defeated by Mr. Bell, the present member. Mr. Martin was actively identified with local politics since 1892, when he was elected Deputy-Reeve of the township of Camden, and has represented that township for the continuously ever since, either as Reeve or Deputy-Reeve, throughout the amalgamation of the new County Councils Act. In 1900 Mr. Martin was the Liberal candidate to represent the riding in the Dominion Parliament, but was defeated by J. W. Bell. The Warden is a Mason of high standing, a genial, good speaker, and well up in parliamentary procedure. He has earned the honor which has been conferred upon him, and which he is amply qualified to fill.

RULED BY THE MOON

ODD BELIEFS BY DUTCH FARMERS OF NORTH CAROLINA.

They Kill Hogs, Plant and Build According to the Tilt of the Moon. How to Keep a Dog and What One Must Do to Make a Good Dog.

The Dutch farmers of Rowan county are among North Carolina's most prosperous and most interesting people. They live well, save money and improve in every way. Thrift is a virtue with them. They are great believers in signs and old sayings. They do things by the moon.

Before building a worm fence the Dutch always watch the moon, says the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer. It must be right or the fence will sink into the ground. The bottom rail must be put down when the little moon is turned up, so that it will not sink into the ground. To prove that this is the right sort of doctrine let a person make an experiment with two bricks. Put down one while the little moon is up and the other while it is down, and it will be noticed that the one laid when the moon was down will go into the ground and that the other will remain as left.

If one would cover his house well he must make the boards when the little moon is turned down. That is easy. The boards will keep their shape if dried then. But, on the other hand, if made while the little moon is turned up the boards will cup up at the ends when exposed to the weather. I have seen many a board turn up at the end, but never knew what did it till now.

The moon must be right when a Dutchman kills his hogs. If the hogs are killed when the little moon is on the decrease the meat will shrink, but if killed when the little moon is on the increase it will swell.

To have good turnips one must plant on Israel's day—that is, in August. If corn is planted when the little moon points up the ears will grow too near the top. The ear gets more nourishment near the bottom.

No work is done on Ascension day. It is a day of rest and pleasure. If the first visitor on a home that day in a man all the eggs that are setting will hatch roosters; if a woman, pullets will prevail. Therefore a man is an unwelcome guest early in the morning on Ascension day.

It is not right to carry out the ashes between Christmas and New Year's day. That brings bad luck.

If a farmer puts out manure or fertilizer when the little moon points up it will stay, but if the little moon points down it will sink out of sight.

There are a thousand and one of these signs and sayings if they could be collected. Many of them are met in other than Dutch communities.

Lived there a country boy in Mecklenburg who did not know how to treat his old hound for rheumatic aches? If when you get a new dog he will not stay with you cut the hair tip off his tail and bury it under the front door steps, and he will stay with you forever. Nobody can take him from you. If you would have the dog love you better than he could anyone else sweat a little under the left heel of your shoe a day and then give it to the dog to eat. It is strange doctrine, but true, for I have tried it. Some folks find it better to measure a dog with a stick and bury it under the steps than to nick the tail. Either way will do.

It so happens now and then that a fine dog refuses to bark at the tree. That sort of hunting is unsatisfactory, for most of the hunter's time is wasted in hunting for the silent dog. That defect, however, is easily got rid of. The hunter goes to the woods and listens for the squeaking noise that is made by the rubbing together of two trees, gathers the bark from the point of friction, makes a soup of it and gives it to the dog. If anything will help him after he is grown that will. But if the puppy is taken in time there will be no silent dog at the tree. A mouse as the puppy is large enough to stand the blow the hunter should burst a green gourd over his head. That will make tree dogs—barking dogs. But I cannot refrain from giving a word of warning here. I hit one of my puppies too hard once and broke his head instead of the gourd.

In certain sections of the south there is a saying that if you will rub a teething baby's gums with warm rabbit brains the teeth will come through the skin without difficulty. It was my good fortune once to see the trick tried. One day I was traveling in the lower part of Mecklenburg county when I saw two small boys running, carrying something. The youngsters were red in the face and hot. They could see made they were bent on purpose. The larger of the two, a red topped boy, was in the lead. He held in his hand something that he seemed to be jealous of and was trying to protect.

"What have you there, boy?" I shouted.

"Rabbit brains—hot rabbit brains," was the quick reply.

"What are you going to do with them?"

"We's going to rub sister's gums, so she kin cut teeth."

I followed the boys and watched the operation. It was all right, and I have learned since that teething may be made easier by the act. The boys had chased that rabbit and killed him far afield.

But all that trouble could have been avoided had the child been supplied with a bag of moles' feet. If the mother will take the feet of a ground mole, have them dried, tack about them around the baby's neck all will be well. I do not know why this is so, but it is. The baby must chew the rag.

FOOLISH TALK OF YELLOW PERIL

Baltimore Sun

The "yellow peril" cry is raised from time to time to excite the sympathetic fears of the west, but a moment's reflection shows how absurd it is. The yellow peril is supposed to exist in the fact that our success in this war Japan may form a combination with China against the west. The fact is, said, protected by the 400,000,000 of China, might close the east to foreign trade and reached its interior with vast hordes. But what, it may be asked, would the great powers, including the United States, be doing all the while? The United States, England France, Germany, Austria, Italy and Russia would be united against a hostile Chinese-Japanese combine, and their navies could speedily smash the Japanese navy. With the Jap fleets destroyed and the Jap ports invaded, the combine would speedily collapse. The Japanese would soon be sue to beg for peace, while China would still be helpless against allied armies.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Peter attended a party on Friday evening at Dr. Mayhew's, Odessa.

The Misses L. and I. Snider were at home on Saturday evening to Mr. and Mrs. H. Rose and Lilian Bell.

DISUSE OF WHIPPING POST.

Notwithstanding the advocacy now and then of the rehabilitation of the whipping-post, that form of punishment is rapidly falling into disuse in grounds in civilized countries. It is now inflicted in England and Ireland only for the Continental country in Europe. In the United States it is used only in Delaware and Maryland. And in Canada it still obtains to some extent in Australia. The punishment is not inflicted upon women in England, Delaware, or Maryland.

In England there is an increasing reluctance on the part of the judges to inflict the punishment.

It is here interesting to find that this form of punishment was ordered only in sixteen cases in 1903. Seven of these beatings were ordered at the Central Criminal Court, five by Judge Rentoul and two by the Common Serjeant of London, and one each by Mr. Justice Wills, Mr. Justice Lawrence and Mr. Justice Darling are the only three High Court judges who ordered the use of the "cat." Flogging has been practically discarded in English convict prisons as a means of prison discipline, and a few years ago a bill to extend the whipping-post to a number of offences not punishable at that manner was refused a second reading by the decisive vote of 195 to 72.

BRITAIN'S POPULAR SAILOR.

The recent Dagger Bank incident, and the meeting of the present North Sea Commission, now sitting in Paris, have again brought to public attention the popular, popular, and picturesque personage in the British navy, Admiral Lord Charles William de la Poer, or, as he is known the world over, "Charlie" Beresford, is the second son of the late Marquis of Waterford. He is now approaching his "sixties," but he is still the fighter he has always been, and, when he recently "cleared the decks" of his flagship, the Caesar, for action, he was ready for business had he received the word from the British Admiralty.

In appearance the future "Admiral of the Fleet" is a broad-shouldered strongly built man, with a face deeply bronzed by the air and tropical suns. He is a disciplinarian on board ship, but, possibly recalling his own "middy" days, he is kind to the youngsters of his squadron. He takes the keenest interest in the men under him, and whether it be a "nigger minstrel" show on board, a boat race in the harbor, or athletic games ashore, the sailors of the Channel fleet can always count on the presence of "the Chief." Sometimes he referees their sports, sometimes he gives away the prizes, but he is always a generous giver to whatever is going on.

THE SPRING FASHIONS.

As individualism in matters of dress becomes more pronounced, the boundaries of fashion grow more and more vague, says The Delineator for March. And continuing, in the article "Fashions in New York": There are many unusually attractive designs for Spring, and chic is among them is the shirt-waist dress. Both plain and fancy effects will be worn, the style depending largely upon the hour of morning when the silky mohairs in either plain or plaid effects are newest and at the same time most practical. The plain skirt is made full at the back with a touch of elaboration there are pretty silks, with taffet a in the lead. There is nothing like a trim, becoming tailor-made for all around use. There is infinite variety in the Spring coat. It ranges from the jaunty, although loose Eton to the graceful redingote. Drape effects characterize the most popular shirt waists as well as the dressy gowns.

The last cry in things fashionable is shaded lisse, especially in the form of bolero and stocks finished with buckles of hammered copper or silver.

A Wandering Minstrel—"A musician out of work, are you?" said the house keeper. "Well, you'll find a few cords in the woodshed. Suppose you favor me with an obligato."

"Pardon the pronunciation, madam," replied the bright tramp, "but Chopin is not popular with me."

Change is written on the tide.
On the forest's leafy pride
On the streamlet gleaming bright
In the jewelled crown of night
All where'er the eye can rest
Show it legibly impressed.
—Robert Browning.

Mr. Editor, I do not wish to be sentimental, but the thought of so many changes in this neighborhood in the near future, makes me feel rather lonely, to say nothing of the ill-effect impressions left by the recent snow storms.

Mr. Miles Evans has purchased the residence of Mr. Cyrus Edgar, Camden East, and intends moving there in the near future. We are very sorry to lose Mr. Evans, as he is one of the oldest, most successful and most respected farmers in the vicinity.

We are also very sorry to lose one of our most respected young men in the person of Mr. Meredith Perry, who has left for Wendie, Man., where he has secured a lucrative position. He will be missed in both the social and sporting circles. His many friends unite in wishing him success.

Our school is progressing favorably under the management of our new school teacher, Miss McCall.

Mr. Elgin McWilliams, another of our most popular young men, intends moving to Tamworth in the near future.

Mrs. Samuel Galbraith has returned from a four months' visit with friends in New York State.

A number of our farmers attended the cheese meeting held in Camden East on Thursday, Jan. 26th. There seems to be some difficulty between the patrons and the manufacturer, Mr. Geo. Clark. We do not know where our milk is going this year.

Mr. Clayton Cranston passed through here on Saturday on his way to Hamilton.

Mr. Marshall Hinch, another of our popular young men, intends going to Syracuse in the near future.

The many friends of Mr. Chas. Quinn, who is in training at Stanley Barracks, Toronto, will be sorry to learn that he has been confined to the Hospital from a severe attack of inflammation. We believe, however, that he is gaining rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Galbraith have been visiting friends at Arden, for the past week.

Mr. John W. Galbraith at Moscow on Sunday.

Miss Pearl Osborne, Centreville, and Miss Rombough, Enterprise, at the home of Mr. Miles Evans.

Mr. and Mrs. James Doyle were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. Quinn, on Friday.

Mr. Ed. Hamilton, of New Ontario, is visiting friends in this neighborhood Welcome back, Eddie.

THE MYSTERY OF LIFE

GOD'S PURPOSE IN PERMITTING SORROW AND TROUBLE.

DEFINITION OF WHAT IS GOD

Westminster Shorter Catechism the Nearest to Truth Yet Promulgated By Man of a Fact Beyond Human Recollection to Comprehend—A Few Scathing Commandment—The Blessedness of Sickness—An Easy Task.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Dixon, of Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 5.—That God has a purpose and a design in permitting trouble and sorrow to continue in this world is claimed by the preacher in this sermon on the mysteries of life, text, Genesis xxiii, 14, "Is anything too hard for the Lord?"

"God is a spirit, infinite, eternal and unchangeable in his being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth." This is the definition of God found in the Westminster Shorter Catechism. No man or body of men could give a complete definition of all that God is. His nature transcends all human conception. Into the effort to find the attempt to describe his infinite perfection Strive as we may, we realize that we are far beyond all that we can think or imagine. Probably no one has framed an utterance that comes near the truth as has one of the Westminster divines and, though it is commonly inadequate it is the best embodiment in the words of the mortal tongue.

It is a curious fact that it is left to the clergy, the conservators of the Westminster divines was drawing to its close. But the work is being done daily. It will, they hold, be a meeting almost daily in the tabernacle. Here the people bring their problems and they had organized in the church a "directory of public worship," and had issued a book bearing the larger and the shorter catechisms. Their work was practically finished in 1648, when they presented "O God, thou who art a spirit, infinite, eternal and unchangeable in thy being and wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth, teach us what thou art!" "With that," so says tradition, "all the members of the Westminster convocation leaped to their feet crying: 'That is our definition of what is God. It is an inspiration from his throne.'" So it was inserted in the catechism as the best thing to teach children that could be made of thy Being whose attributes are beyond human knowledge."

Many profess to believe that God is omnipotent, omnipresent and omniscient, yet it is awfully hard for us in truth to comprehend this. We say, "He can do all things." But when some one begins to pin our faith down to a practical illustration of "Can God do this?" we say, "Like Nicodemus, 'How can these things be?'" We need constantly to remember that there are no limitations to the divine power and that all that He has promised He is abundantly able to perform. When we see some gigantic evil that needs to be corrected, when we think of some benefit that seems necessary for the world, our hearts often sink in despair as we regard it as impossible. Then saw courage and new hope ought to fill our minds as we reflect on the omnipotence of the God in whom we trust and to say with the angel who talked with Abraham's wife, "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" A great flood of inspiration will now fills your soul. You answer: "No, no; nothing is impossible for God. God is a spirit, Infinite, eternal and unchangeable in His being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth."

God is almighty. He is present and all seeing. You grant it. Then I would invite you to consider the natural influences that surround us. Ask ourselves why a God of unlimited power does not remove some of the evils that cause so much misery in the world. We know not. But I would urge you to trust His wisdom and love as well as His power. Not ours is the fatalism that declares whatever is is right, but let ours be the faith that trusts God to work out in His own time the true development of the world.

Easy would it be if God wished to take all poverty out of the world. With a mere word he could create the earth over again so much richer

He—Well, not exactly, but I've taken it apart to see how it didn't work.

Encyclopedian.—When the nerves are shattered and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and mental foreboddings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the sufferer could sleep, there would be oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

"What was the hardest money you ever earned?" asked the interviewer of the self-made magnate.

"An honest penny," replied that individual proudly.

Visitor—Dennis, an' phat are yez eather doin now?

Dennis—It's meself as had bought a hurdy an' the whole family are on the tramp. Oi'ave bin winding it up for over an hour, and not a throw of music can Oi get out of it at all, at all!

Miss Plainly—Reggie says I grow prettier every time he sees me. Miss Roasten—You ought to have him call oftener.

Deacon Jones—What did our minister say when you asked him his opinion about Sunday golf?

Deacon Brown—He said he thought it could not be denied that it was a holey game.

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. Nervousness is from exhaustive causes. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare power, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flagging energies.

A Wandering Minstrel—"A musician, out of work, are you?" said the house keeper. "Well, you'll find a few coins in the woodshed. Suppose you favor me with an obligato."

"Pardon the pronunciation, madam," replied the bright tramp, "but Chopin is not popular with me."

"Paddy," said a tourist at Killarney, "I'll give you sixpence if you'll tell me the best joke you ever told in your life."

"Begorra, your honor's a gentleman! Give me the sixpence."

Parson—Well, Johnnie, are you going to be a lawyer like your father?

Johnnie—No, sir; mother says she wants me to be a good man when I grow up.

Willie—Pa, what do they make talking machines of?

Pa—Mother—The first one was made out of a rib, my son.

The class was told to write an essay on honesty. This was Jimmy Greene's essay:

"Some boys is honester than others; an' there's no way to tell them apart unless you say you've left your knife some way and watch them jump for it. The one that jumps last is the honestest one."

DIED IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Last Friday a telegram was received from Nicomen, B.C., announcing the death of Lendrick Saul. The message said he died suddenly after quitting his day's work. R. for the past four or five years. His wife and daughter, Miss Lizzie, spent three months last summer and early fall visiting their father and other friends in the west. The remains will be brought to Napanee for interment. The bereaved wife and daughter have the sincere sympathy of a very large circle of friends.

A GOOD LECTURE.

The ladies of the Eastern Methodist church are singularly fortunate in having secured the services of the Rev. G. H. Raley, of Kingston, B.C., to deliver an address on the evening of Friday the 24th. Mr. Raley holds an important and startegic point in the development of the Pacific slopes. He has been at once Judge, Doctor, Postmaster and Editor of the "Nanaimo. His story is one of most thrilling recital and is weirdly fascinating. Our citizens will do well to reserve the date.

SOLDIERS ELECTED

The annual meeting of the Napanee Base Ball Association was held in the Hotel Richmond evening. Mr. S. Gibson, Vice-President, occupying the chair. The annual report for 1904 was read and confirmed by the shareholders. The following officers were elected:

President—W. S. Fidler.

Vice-Pres.—S. Gibson.

Sec.-Treas.—F. L. Bowes.

Directors—G. H. Williams, F. F. Miller, W. N. Fidler, S. Gibson, F. L. Bowes, Judge Madden, S. Madden and W. F. Hall.

It is the intention of the directors of the Association to hold a demonstration this year if sufficient encouragement is given by our citizens.

AGRACEFUL COURTESY.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co'y., Limited, certainly do things in the right way. Since their advertisements of Royal Household Flour have appeared in the newspapers, they have received thousands of testimonials from women all over Canada who have used Royal Household in their home baking. These kind expressions of the superiority of this Flour have been entirely voluntary on the part of the senders. In order to show their appreciation of this courtesy, the Ogilvie Company have had a very fine painting reproduced in all the original colors and copies suitable for framing are being mailed to each one who has sent in a testimonial. It was a graceful way of saying "thank you," and cannot fail to keep Royal Household Flour in pleasant remembrance.

CRACKERS VS. BREAD.

Everyone thinks of bread as a food, but no one person in a hundred properly appreciates the wholesome nutritiousness of Soda Biscuits. Experiments by Pure Food Athorities show that soda biscuits contain food elements in better proportion than any other article of diet. These biscuits also contain more strength and flesh forming material than does bread. Meat, vegetables bread and milk are dilute nutriment. Soda biscuits are concentrated nourishment. They are practically all food, contain little water and are rich in the elements that go to build up "the house we live in."

This is the one reason why Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas have been adopted in so many homes. Upon their first appearance people realize the difference between "Mooney's" and the "Ordinary kind." The combination of deliciousness and nutriment in one wholesome, inviting biscuit has made Mooney's Perfection Sodas famous all over Canada. Mooney's biscuits are packed in air tight, moisture packages and tins, and are always fresh and crisp, whether bought in Halifax or Vancouver. Leading grocers report that the demand for Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas is steadily increasing, more and more it is found out what superior biscuits they are.

THE AWAKENING OF MR. PIPP.

Charley Grapewin, who comes to the Grand Opera House, Kingston, on Saturday afternoon and evening in "The Awakening of Mr. Pipp," is the most unctuous comedian on the stage today. His humor bubbles forth at all times. Never does he convey the impression that he is trying to be funny. And he isn't! He just can't help it. His play, "The Awakening of Mr. Pipp," which has won great favor wherever it has been presented, gives Mr. Grapewin excellent opportunities to be seen at his best and every one knows that Grapewin at his best is unapproachable. The story of the p'ay in brief is that Mr. Pipp, having married a very exacting wife, forswears the use of intoxicants entirely for one year, and the play opens on the night of the expiration of the pledge he has taken, and in celebration of which he has tried to drink up all the champagne in sight, and returns home in an awful condition, and does not realize anything until the awakening the next day, when the situations, comical actions, and in fact all true to real life keep the audience in constant roars of laughter at his explanation and excuses for his conduct the night before.

The Company is a large and clever one, and the chorus is composed of beautiful girls with lovely forms and gorgeous costumes.

PETERS—BONGARD.

A very pleasing event took place on Wednesday, Feb. 1st, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bongard, Adolphustown, when their eldest daughter, Mary Helen, was united in marriage to Mr. T. N. Peters, of Ormsby, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Roberts, at the rectory, Adolphustown. The bride wore a blue and white cloth skirt and a white silk blouse, also a beautiful gold pin, the gift of the groom. Miss Ettie Bristow, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Geo. Bongard, brother of the bride, performed similar duties for the groom. After a sumptuous repast the happy couple left for Picton, en route for the groom's home at Ormsby. The bride received many beautiful and costly presents and the best wishes of her friends, about forty of whom were present.—Picton Times, please copy.

WARDEN SPROULE.

Whig.—Thomas Sproule, the newly-elected warden of Frontenac, was born in King, ston township in 1840, within a mile and a half of where he now lives, outside the village of Westbrook. His parents came from Ireland in the thirties. Mr. Sproule has followed agricultural pursuits all his life, and has lived in Kingston township since his birth, with the exception of nine years spent in Ernestown, the township adjoining. He married Eliza Jane Sproule, whose surname was the same as his own. He has one son. Warden Sproule has been in municipal life since 1892, when he was elected a township councillor, serving as such for two years. In 1894 and 1897 he was reeve of Kingston township. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., a Methodist and a conservative. The new warden has served four years in the county council, and is well posted on all county matters. He has proved himself to be a good debater, and has served the people faithfully. As warden he should render good service to the county.

WHAT THE GIRLS WILL WEAR.

According to Marian Kent, who writes on fashions for young girls, in the March New Idea Magazine, the dainty dresses for this spring and summer are to be made of silk, fine linen, lansdowne, batiste and organdie, besides the soft silks and the sheer fabrics. Hand-work in its charming simplicity still supersedes elaborate trimming, and very many dainty frocks are made entirely of the material, utterly devoid of trimming and depending a lely for decoration on the exquisite workmanship in the form of hand-run tucks, shirring, tagoting, piping, etc. Yokes, cut round or square, are to be used a great deal, and the "drop yoke," as well as berthas and epaulets, will keep the beach-bound belle effect still prominent. The skirts are to be still full, and mingle with the prevalent "high" ideas in cloth etc. Everything that can be done to draw sleeves still be in fashion, and puffs, shirring and ruffles will hinder the very rapid arrival of the lazy motion, which is again coming to view.

WANT THE CANNING FACTORY

Camden-Neabagh, Feb. 8th, 1905.

Mr. Editor:—The matter of securing interest for a canning factory at Napanee, and that they will ask the adjoining townships to aid in securing the site. I think that I am under no right to help, and that they will if they are asked for. There are a lot of fruit growers around here who lost very heavily the last two years. Some of them sold for a cent a box and others paid for themselves. I have also lost heavily and would do anything in reason to help. If our council would aid them they would obtain the fruit growers and take up a subscription. I will head the list with five dollars, and will add more if necessary. We want the factory, and should have had one for the last fifteen years. It is a great loss to this part of the country. Mr. Editor, I hope that it will be a success. I remain

Yours Truly,

THE COUNTRY IN WINTER.

Oh, the weather severe,
When winter is here,
In the country!
It makes every dweller
Think of his cellar,
In the country.

King Frost, how he nips
Even huge finger-tips,
In the country;
He never comes nigh
But all give a sigh,
In the country.

And snow piled high,
(Not reaching the sky),
In the country;
And the men shovel away,
The whole of the day,
In the country.

Other work standing still,
Can't even get to the mill,
In the country;
And flour consumed,
And appetites doomed,
In the country.

Week in and week out,
And no travelling about,
In the country!
And the men in a stew,
When the mails can't get through,
In the country.

There's not much delight
In mountains of white,
In the country;
The people all long
For spring's cheery song,
In the country.

WOULD PROVE A HINDRANCE TO FARM IMPROVEMENT.

If the use of oil as a fuel is successful, its introduction would spell ruin to a very large class of the community. A monument is on top of almost every few acres, which in a number of years have assembled into a considerable city tree, put on the outside of the farm. The grove would be affected are galvanized iron or steel 8, 10, 12 and 14 in. Practically none of these are made in Canada, and only a minimum quantities are used each year in replacing the primitive rail fence destroyed by prairie fires. Should the injury that a duty will impose upon the rural community could not be readily estimated.

Since the admission of wire duty free Canadians have enjoyed the benefits of cheap fencing of a very substantial kind. This has not only vastly improved the appearance and value of hundreds of farm houses, but it has contributed immensely to the comforts of winter travelling over roads which formerly very often impassible on account of snow blockades. To put a check upon this sort of improvement is a thing that could not be justified even by the rural population without benefit to any other class of the people would be indeed a serious matter. Besides working an industry that is doing so much for the farmer, the fence-manufacturing industry is to be demolished. To increase the cost of wire, both fence production and its consumption would be disastrous to farmers everywhere throughout Canada. They should be hindered in making improvements upon their farms.

The English "Society for the Prevention of Consumption" presided over by the Prince of Wales, was recently addressed by Sir William Broadbent, who stated that it was definitely known that every cause of consumption began with a germ communicated from some other case. There is no such thing as inherited consumption. There may be local weakness which invites consumption, but the germ has absolutely to be planted in it that weak spot before consumption can ensue. This ought to comfort thousands of people who have "weak chests" or "weak lungs." They are not doomed victims of this dread disease. All that is needed to be absolute defiance to this deadly scourge, is to be able to strengthen the lungs, build up a strong body. The answer to this need is found in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It so purifies the blood that it increases the blood supply, that disease is thrown off, and the lungs become nourished into perfect health, which defies germs of every kind. People, given up by doctors, emaciated, bloodless at the lungs, with obstinate, lingering coughs, are being cured every day by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery." It is a strictly temperance medicine containing no alcohol, whiskey or other intoxicant.

FAMOUS PEOPLE

BY FANNIE M LOTHROP

FANNIE M. LOTHROP
The Author of Our "Famous People" Series

We take pleasure in announcing to our readers that with this issue we begin a series of remarkable, illustrated, biographic sketches of famous people—men and women who are making the history of the times. This series is by Fannie M. Lothrop, the well-known author and the tblest writer in this line in America today. For several years she has been a writer and critic on the leading publications of New York and Philadelphia.

For this work Mrs. Lothrop has a double fitness, from the literary side her knowledge of the great people of the day, her personal way of putting things, and from the artistic side, her close acquaintance with the worlds famous people has her preeminently to select the best possible views of her subjects. Her collection of photographs is the largest and most complete collection of portraits in the world, one numbering over a thousand, a treasury of portraiture unapproached by that of any museum or library in existence. In filling out this series of articles Mrs. Lothrop will give special attention to detail expended in arranging such a collection is remarkable.

"Mrs. Lothrop," says a famous critic, "has unusual ability in presenting the vital details of a character in a few words. She has the rare combination, the dates and details, that from her pen we get in a few lines living biographies and show the real man, his qualities and his life more effectively than in books of other pretensions. Some articles are given more in a thumbnail sketch than others can present in a panoramic painting."

Mrs. Lothrop passed her girlhood years in Wisconsin, her native State. Her father, F. P. Mack, a New England gentleman of that class we fondly term "the old school," was a lawyer, educator and thinker of rare power and singular clearness of mind. He founded the public schools of Rochester, and was for many years a leader in the Democratic party in his residence there, removing thence to Wisconsin, where he became prominent and wealthy by reason of his legal talent. Mrs. Lothrop's mother is a cousin of John Pierpont, the American poet, who was the grandfather of J. Pierpont Morgan.

For two years Mrs. Lothrop was a student of Oberlin College, standing highest in her class, and a graduate of the Normal College of Chicago, where for many years she was a teacher of English literature. She is brilliant in conversation and well informed on all topics of the day, though not a "new woman" in any sense of the word. In the library of her home in New York, filled with the best works of the best thinkers, she does all her literary work.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year one thousand nine hundred and five, by Fannie M. Lothrop, at the Department of Agriculture.

NEWBURGH

The recent snow storms have delayed the G. T. R. mail and express trains. Monday, an engine, plough, baggage car and caboose left Napanee and returned in the afternoon, being unable from the drifts to get further west mails arrived.

It was probably learned when the Board of Education meets, the question concerning pupils taking their dinner to school, will come up. At present those living in the village are not allowed to take their dinner to school. It does seem unreasonable that when the children living outside live within the limits of the village should not be allowed to use their home.

The remains of the late Mrs. Coburn, Hinch, were placed in the vault here on Sunday.

Mr. Henry Paul, assessor, will likely start on his rounds this week.

A meeting was held in Finkle's hall on Tuesday evening for the purpose of electing the proposed Public Library by-law. The chair was occupied by Mr. F. D. Shorey. Mr. G. Ayles, worth, gave an interesting address, explaining the benefits of the library. It seems that a great deal of uncertainty exists as to the liability for taking over of the public library, would put on the village. It is very evident that a large number of citizens are opposed to it. The library board should remember that the electors are in the dark as to the details of the a'fair, and should take steps to inform them.

Miss Hope Aylesworth entertained her friend Miss Turnbull, Napanee, from four to seven o'clock.

Mr. Alex. Romboug has returned to New York, after a week's stay with his father.

Mrs. C. H. Garrison spent last week visiting friends in Belleville.

Last week Mrs. G. Pot and Mrs. W. Sweet made a trip to Moscow to see their brother, who was hurt by a falling tree in a lumber shanty.

We are pleased to learn that Miss Opha Funnell is slowly recovering, after her very severe illness of la grippe.

The surprise party given at Mrs. W. Frazell's, on Wednesday evening last, was largely attended. There were about sixty-two guests present. Dancing and games were the amusements of the evening. All returned home in the morning regretting the best parts of the new year.

Some of our young ladies and gentlemen attended the party at W. Donegan's.

Mr. Willie McKeown is now attending the Belleville Business College.

Mr. Sam Wilson is also attending Toronto Business College.

Mr. Anson McKeown is now home for the winter. Welcome back, Anson.

Miss Mabel Jackson is the guest of her sister, Mrs. M. King.

Miss Jessie Clancy spent the past week at Miss Edna McKeown's.

Mr. Charlie Bath was at Mr. E. Galbraith's.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Shier wear a smile; a bouncing baby boy.

Mrs. E. Noulin presented Mr. Noulin with a charming girl.

Mr. Stanley McKeown spent last Sunday, renewing old acquaintance at Enterprise.

Misses Estella and Millie South at Miss Galbraith's.

Mr. Walter Vansteline and Miss M. Wagar, of Napanee, at Mr. M. Williams'.

Mr. Fraser Quinn, of Napanee, the guest of Miss May Hall on Sunday.

Mrs. A. Close is home from Toronto for a few days.

Miss Lucy Campbell is visiting her sister, Mrs. E. Bradshaw, Ingle.

The home of Mr. M. King was placed in very much trouble two days ago, a girl baby death cast a deep gloom over it. The little one was only ill about two days old. The little girl lived but three weeks and a half.

Mr. Claude Teskey talks of leaving us in the spring.

"A short time ago," says a schoolteacher, "I was giving a lesson on the use of the hyphen. Having written a number of examples on the blackboard, the first of which was bird-cage, I asked the boys to give a reason for putting the hyphen between 'bird' and 'cage.' After a short silence, one boy, who is among the dunces, held up his hand, and said, 'It is for the bird to perch on, sir.'"

MORVEN.

We have plenty of snow for good sleighing now. It keeps the farmers busy drawing on top of the banks.

Rev. Hoyce made a flying trip to Toronto last week and on making a call round, he found happy, did justice to a large plate of turkey.

Owing to the storm on Sunday the Rev. Mr. Hoyce did not preach at Morven.

Mr. Will. Sobell, of Kingston Business College, spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

We are pleased to state that Miss Pearle Smith is recovering after an attack of tonsolitis.

Miss Carrie Sills is spending a few weeks the guest of W. H. Funnell and family.

Mr. Alex. Rombough has returned to New York, after a week's stay with his father.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather and bad roads, Miss Hall has had a small attendance at school the last three weeks.

Mrs. R. Scott has not been able to teach at Orchard Hill the past week, as she has been under the care of Dr. Benson, with a severe attack of la grippe.

There Was One Who Did Not Laugh.

Mark Twain once expressed the following sentiments to a young woman who had not smiled at a thing that he had said during an impromptu oration in his honor at Bryn Mawr college, to which his daughter had invited him. "All the others, to be sure, were in a state of great glee during the humorist's address; all but one had laughed heartily at every witty remark. Just as Twain finished he turned to the young woman who had not laughed and said in an undertone: "You are the only sensible one here. I have not said a single thing worth hearing. If it were not for the conspicuousness of it I would like to press your hand."—Success.

LOST COINS IN THE MAIL.

They Cause Much Trouble and Worry to Postal Clerks.

Ordinarily no man is rich enough to experience that certain sense of elation which comes from picking up a nickel on a sidewalk, but when a railway postal clerk finds such a coin in a mail pouch where it has worked out from insufficient wrappings not only does he miss this elation, but it may provoke profanity.

For a nickel lost in a pouch of mail in transit becomes a matter for national concern. It comes to view perhaps just as a pouch of mail is emptied upon a sorting table, and when it has broken away from the bunch of letters, and cards and circulars, rolled to the open space on the table and there settled down, heads or tails, with a noisy spinning dance, the clerk who first sees it is "it."

A necromancer could have no more idea than the man in the moon as to what particular package it rolled out of, and if he had and should tell the postal clerk the clerk wouldn't dare try to restore the coin to the original package. That would be too easy altogether.

No, it is a lost nickel from the moment the clerk has to see it spinning there before his eyes, and according to the tender governmental conscience the clerk has to get ready for the inauguration of about $18.43 worth of fuss over it.

Put himself he doesn't dare to go to bed for a short nap until he has got rid of his 5 cents' worth of responsibility to the government for the acts of the fool person from whom the nickel was parted. He digs up the printed form for such occasions printed and provided and at once fills out a long blank, describing the coin, stating the circumstances of its being found and whether it landed heads or tails on the table, naming the pouch from which it was emptied, the number of the train carrying it, the date and a few other details.

This report, with the nickel, goes to the headquarters of the postal through in which the car was operated, and from these bonded officials, by the same general red tape route, the small coin finds its way to the seat of national government and to the fund representing the great constituency of the postoffice department, which permits in sending money in envelopes through the unregistered mails of the service.

THE OUTLOOK FOR SEED CORN.

The difficulty of getting reliable seed corn of desirable types and varieties during the last two years and the expensive lessons learned by many corn growers who used seed of unknown vitality make the question of reliable seed for 1905 of more than ordinary interest. A survey of the available supply of northern grown seed of this important fodder crop indicates that the difficulties of getting good seed will be even greater this year than during the two previous years. The best varieties for silage or ensilage purposes, along the northern limit of the corn belt in Canada, are undoubtedly of the "Flint" type. In the latitude of Ottawa only a few of the varieties of the "Dent" varieties give good results for ensilage in the average year. The remarkable progress in corn raising in Canada our supplies of seed have been drawn largely from the country to the south and the keeping of types and varieties that required a longer season to mature than is suitable for most of our dairy districts, where the corn crop is most needed and most valuable. We have a number of very good men who are making a specialty of growing corn for the purpose of seed along Lake Erie, and who have a limited quantity of good seed for sale this year. The Canadian Seed Growers' Association has taken up a business-like way the matter of creating a supply of reliable seed corn, and it may be said that the future promises for a permanent basis of supply of a high-class article and of varieties that are exceptionally well suited for ensilage and fodder purposes in all parts of Canada where corn can be grown with success

The severe frost during the early part of last autumn rendered the bulk of the corn crop in Ontario absolutely useless for the purpose of seed. A belt about a mile in width along the Northern shore of Lake Erie was affected only slightly, and from some sections in this district there is a supply of very good seed.

The cost of the small quantity of seed corn that is required to plant an acre, in comparison with the cost for labor in cultivating and handling and the ultimate value per acre of a good crop, would seem to make it clear that the best available seed of the most satisfactory type and variety should be obtained at any reasonable cost. It would be much better for Canadian farmers if they were able to obtain their supplies of seed corn in the ear; they would then have a fair idea of what they were getting. Seed corn in the ear, the danger of injury to the vitality of the seed from damp and its after effects is reduced to a minimum. Corn that is shelled by a machine and left in sacks for six weeks or more will seldom germinate more than 75 per cent., unless the conditions for storage have been exceptionally good The average vitality of seed corn, tested in the Seed Laboratory last year here, for germination in the field was 91.99 per cent., and for shelled corn 68 per cent.

It is useless to be recommended then that, wherever possible, farmers obtain their supplies of seed corn in the ear only. To meet the demand for seed corn in this condition growers would do well to adopt the style of shipping crate that is used for this purpose in the states of Iowa and Illinois. This crate, is two feet nine inches long, one foot wide, and one foot deep, and is made of half, inch lumber three inches in width. Its capacity is one bushel, or between one hundred and one-hundred and twenty ears. If the corn can be planted in hills this crate will hold sufficient seed for five acres. While it is true that there may be some additional risk in the germination of the seed of weight of the cob and of the crate, and that extra work is required in shelling, the risks in these become insignificant when the difference in value between an acre of good matured corn and an acre of unsatisfactory crop is considered.

SEED TESTING ON THE FARM.

To find out whether seeds are capable of producing plants requires neither expert knowledge nor special apparatus. Satisfactory material is to be found in every farm home, for making germination tests of practically any kind of seed used on the farm. The simplest and most convenient way to test seed of corn and other cereal grains and most of the root crops and larger vegetable seeds is to place a number of them, say one hundred, between pieces of moistened blotting paper, Canton flannel or cloth; set them in an ordinary dinner plate and invert another plate to cover them. The seed should be kept moist but not wet. The temperature of the average farm house living room will be quite suitable, but some care should be taken to guard against excessive heat or cold. All kinds of corn, cereal grains, clovers or timothy, thus treated, will have germinated at the end of five days. The small seeds of the finer grasses, of some of the garden vegetables and of beets or mangels may be tested to better advantage by scattering them in a saucer, belonging to a flower pot, that has been soaked in water, and set on a cloth that should be kept damp, or in a pan containing not more than one-eighth of an inch of water, the object being to keep the sand moist, but not wet. If such a saucer can not be available, a brick will answer the purpose as well. In germinating seeds in an earthern saucer they should be placed to the light, but not to the direct rays of the sun.

If the house plants or the palms are sickly without apparent cause put them in the hospital for a week or ten days. The bath-room is the hospital. Every time the bath is used the plants get a good steaming, which is as good as the warm, damp air of a conservatory. It is very hard for plants to live at all in the dry air of the average steam-heated city house.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To Editor Napanee Beaver

Dear Sir,—After storms come calm and blebs. The late political struggle for supremacy from various points clearly to the fact that no one man, no one government, a vital necessity to any people. The our populi is the government, not cliques and gangs, and when they cease to be so, so do it. Let us help that Mr. Whitney and his government will steer clear of the reefs and sandbars that wrecked Ross, for the same power behind the scenes, can decide him or any other man.

Observations by NANCY HANKS.

"Flourfax" Fables.

The Honest Flour Barrel and the Farmer's Wife.

Once upon a time an honest flour barrel was sent out in a grocery-man's cart to a farmer's house, full of flour. The wife looked the barrel over carefully and then said to her husband:

"I don't think this is the flour I wanted—I don't see 'Royal Household' on it."

"No; it aint' 'Royal Household,' said the farmer,

—but it is just as good —for the grocer said so.

—"When I asked for 'Royal Household' he recommended this kind saying it was just as good, but didn't cost as much, so I said I'd try it."

"I wish you had done as I said—I don't think much of these 'just as good" grocers any way—I want the flour that is purified by electricity for I believe it is healthier." However, since we have got this, I suppose we might as well use it," and she had the barrel rolled into the pantry and opened up.

"Looks pretty good," she said to herself.

"Madam," spoke up the Honest Flour Barrel "even flour experts can't tell about flour just by looking at it. Any flour, if there is no other flour to compare it with, looks white and nice—but if you bake it into bread and then bake "Royal Household" into bread you can see the difference.

"Now, the truth about this flour is, it is made of cheap wheat, in a cheap mill by a cheap process 'flour' that is not highly purified contains a lot of stuff that isn't flour and the process of making it is dirty and expensive—that's why pure flour costs more.

"Pure flour is worth all it costs and more too. If you knew the whole truth about flour, you'd send me back and get 'Royal Household.'

And the Honest Flour Barrel having said its say subsided, but after the first baking, hurried the barrel to the grocer and "Royal Household". Flour was sent in its stead —now the Farmer's Wife uses "Royal Household" and nothing else —and the grocer don't sell the "just as good" flour any more.

The Yellow Holly

BY FERGUS HUME.

Ireland hesitated and wiped his mouth in quite an unnecessary manner with a red silk handkerchief. "Your father always declared that Miss Lockwood was his lawful wife, and treated her with every respect."

"Did my father ever state where the marriage was celebrated?"

"No; he never asked, nor did your grandfather Lockwood. It was not till after your mother's death that Lord Derrington denied the marriage. Then Mr. Vane was in Italy and never troubled much in the matter."

"He should have done so for my sake," said George indignantly.

"Certainly, and I urged him to do so," said Mr. Ireland heavily. "I was in Italy at the time, and you were only an infant in arms."

"Who was my nurse then?"

"Jane Fraser, the Scotch nurse who afterward brought you to your grandfather Lockwood when Mr. Vane was murdered."

"Do you remember the other nurse, the first one I had?"

Mr. Ireland grew indignant and puffed loudly at his cigar. "I do, indeed," he said wrathfully, "a vulgar, forward hussy. She was not bad looking either and set up for being a lady." Here he began to laugh. "Would you believe it, George, my boy, she was in love with your father and showed it so plainly that he was obliged to get rid of her?"

"What was her name?"

"Eliza Stokes. And she was handsome in a boisterous way."

"What became of her?"

"I can't tell you," said Ireland, with sudden reserve.

"Did you see her after she was dismissed?"

Ireland turned his cigar slowly and did not look at George when he replied. "Yes, I did. When and where it does not matter."

"But it does matter—to me!" cried Brendon anxiously. "It is to know about her that I come here to see you today."

"I thought you came about your birth," said Ireland sharply.

"That among other things."

The old man looked down again and appeared to be in deep thought. He was turning over in his own mind how much or how little he should tell George. And the young man looked at him anxiously. Much depended upon the answer Mr. Ireland. At last the silence was broken, and by a most unexpected remark. "I loved your mother," said Ireland.

"I quite believe that," said Brendon softly, for he saw that the man was moved at the recollection of some early romance.

"I never spoke of it before," was the reply; and Ireland laid down his cigar to speak more freely. "Yes, I loved Rosina Lockwood with all my heart and soul. I was not bad looking in those days, George, and I had a good figure, but she preferred your father."

"I am sorry to be obliged to ask you for a story of the past," said Brendon apologetically, "but it means so much to me."

"I'll tell you all I can," said Ireland, taking no notice of the apology. He paused for a moment to collect his thoughts and thus began abruptly. "I first met your mother at her father's house in Amelia square, where I went to take lessons in singing. Lockwood was famous for his method in those days, and his fame increased by the appearance of your mother, Rosina, at many concerts. She was a most beautiful creature and was as much admired for her voice as for her voice. Ah, what a voice! It was like the thrill of a lark, flexible and silvery, and with a fine compass and range. She was quite the rage for a season and was called the English Jenny Lind. Many offers were made to her for the operatic stage, but she would have accepted in the end had she not met with Percy Vane, and he"—Ireland's hand clinched.

Brendon saw that this recital was painful to him, and but that he was so anxious to get at the proofs of his birth would have cut it short to desist.

"Percy Vane was a handsome man and rich. I warned Lockwood that he was in love with Rosina, but the old man would not heed. He was flattered by the attention Rosina received. All through that season Vane was in attendance on Rosina. At the end of it he eloped with her, and I was left out side St. James' hall and they eloped."

"Where did they go to?" asked Brendon eagerly.

"That I cannot say. Rosina wrote three weeks afterward from Paris, signing herself Vane and stating that she was the wife of Percy."

"Was my grandfather angry?"

"Yes and no. He was angry that he should have lost her, for she was of use to him as an advertisement of his method of singing and also earned a great deal of money. The house in Amelia square was large and required a good deal to keep it up. Besides, Anthony Lockwood was extravagant. That was why you were left so badly off."

Brendon shrugged his shoulders. "It was good of my grandfather to leave me anything," he said, "but in what way was my—Mr. Lockwood pleased? You hinted that he was not quite angry."

"Well," said Ireland, "he was flattered that his daughter should have married into the aristocracy."

"Then there was no question of the marriage?"

"No. Lord Derrington said nothing till your mother was dead, and even then he said very little. It was when Vane was murdered at San Remo that he first decisively asserted that no marriage had taken place. He did so because Lockwood insisted that Derrington should acknowledge you as the heir. He refused to do so and said that his second son was the heir."

"That is Walter Vane's father?"

"Exactly. And now the father is dead Walter Vane stands in your shoes. I wish you could prove the marriage, my boy," said Ireland, shaking his head, "but it will be a difficult task."

"I don't care how difficult it is," replied Brendon resolutely, "I am determined to learn the truth."

"Who is the lady?" asked Ireland.

"Miss Dorothy Ward. You don't know anything of her."

Ireland shook his head; "I left the adoration of the aristocracy to Lockwood," he said, with a curling lip, "a sneer, but that's neither here nor there, my boy. To make a long story short, I met your mother in Paris, and shortly afterward she died, giving birth to you. Eliza Stokes was with her when she died, and you were given into the charge of Jane Fraser. Your mother was buried in Pere la Chaise. Vane put up a stone to her—oh, he behaved very well, I don't deny that," added Ireland, but with a dark face, "He was really fond of her, and I suppose there was a marriage."

"Did my mother ever say anything about it?"

"Never. You asked me that before. It was an accepted fact. After the death of Rosina her husband went to Italy. I was there, too, and it was at Milan that the episode occurred which led to the dismissal of Miss Stokes."

"What was that?"

"Why, there was a young English waiter, quite a boy he was, who fell in love with Eliza when she was taking charge of you at the Hotel de Ville. She refused to marry him and hinted that she loved your father. Vane heard of this and taxed her with impertinence. The end of it was that Eliza said too much and was dismissed. And Jane Fraser was sent from England by Vane's mother to nurse you. That looks as though Lady Derrington believed in the marriage."

"It does," admitted Brendon hopefully. "She would not have sent a nurse else, knowing how grown. On the other hand, if she had been quite certain about the marriage she might have offered to take charge of me."

"She did, I believe, but your father was so fond of you—for your mother's sake—that he could scarcely bear you out of his sight. However, Eliza went and Jane came, and then your father went to San Remo. You were then two years of age."

"Did not my father live to England during all that time?"

"No. When he left England with your mother he never returned. She died in Paris, and, with you in charge of a nurse, Vane wandered about the continent. I was twice in Italy and saw him—the second time it was at San Remo."

"If you disliked my father so much why did you seek him out?"

"To see you, George. You were her child, and I loved Rosina so dearly," Ireland stopped, gulped down his emotion, and proceeded more calmly, "Yes, it was at San Remo when your father was murdered."

"You never told me that before," said Brendon.

"I never told you anything before," replied Ireland dryly. "And I should not tell you now but that my health is getting so bad that I may not live long. I have an incurable disease, which will sooner or later carry me off. So—so, I don't want sympathy. Let me finish the story and then we need not refer to it again. I had intended to leave a written statement behind me for you, George, but this is better, as you can ask me questions about what you do not understand."

"I understand all so far," said George thoughtfully. "But about this murder, Mr. Ireland? Who killed my father?"

"That was never discovered. He went to a masked ball and was seen leaving the room in the company of a blue domino. His body was found on the stone steps of the house early next morning. He had been stabbed to the heart."

"Who was the lady—the blue domino?"

"No one ever learned. She was cloaked and masked. The whole thing is a mystery. Your father's body was taken to England, and as Lord Derrington refused to acknowledge the marriage Lockwood took charge of you."

"I remember, and Jane Fraser was my nurse for many years. She was at San Remo when the murder took place?"

"Yes, and so was Eliza Stokes."

"What was she doing there?"

"Well, that is—by the way, his name was George also, although you were called after Lockwood's father—well, George Bates, seeing that Eliza was dismissed, got a situation at the hotel in San Remo. He came there also during the season, and I believe the two married. But Eliza Stokes never came near your father."

"What became of her afterward?"

Ireland hesitated. "I can't say," he said.

"But I can," observed George coolly. "She was murdered the other day at the Amelia square house as Mrs. Jersey."

"I heard of that crime. But how do you identify Eliza Stokes with Mrs. Jersey?"

"My old nurse, Jane Fraser, told me. When I began these inquiries I looked up Jane, who now lives in a little Essex village. She told me all she could, which was not much. But she stated that when here one day on a visit to you she had met Eliza Stokes, and in spite of her age and gray hairs she had recognized her. Eliza told her that she was called Mrs. Jersey and had taken a boarding house in Amelia square. I then determined to speak to Mrs. Jersey, who I thought might have been present at the marriage or at all events might know where it had been celebrated."

"It is probable she did," said Ireland, "as she was with your mother as maid when the elopement took place. Did you see Mrs. Jersey, or Eliza Stokes, as I still regard her?"

"I saw her, but she was murdered before I could speak to her to her on the subject. Did you know"—

"I know that Eliza Stokes had changed her name to Mrs. Jersey and was in Amelia square," said Ireland, "but I only learned this the other day."

"Who told you?"

"A woman called Miss Bull," said Ireland.

"Miss Bull," repeated George. "I remember. That was the boarder who foretold a murder in the house, Jane Fraser. But you read about that in the papers."

Ireland nodded. "I did," he said. "And I also saw that you were in the house when Mrs. Jersey was murdered. You were a witness."

"I can tell you about that. I"—

"There is no need to tell me. I have not the time," Ireland looked at his watch. "In ten minutes I leave for my walk."

George remonstrated. "But this is so important."

"Not so important as my health. I can give you only ten minutes, George. This Miss Bull called to ask me about the lease of the house to Mrs. Jersey. I knew nothing about that. When Lockwood died I sold the house to Lord Derrington."

"What, to my grandfather?"

"Yes. But had I known he was the purchaser I should not have let him have it. He bought it through an agent. Since then I heard nothing more about the house. I did not even know it was a boarding establishment until it appeared as such in the papers the other day. I wondered what you were doing at the Inquest"—

"I can explain."

Ireland held up his hand. "I need no explanation. I know that Mrs. Jersey was really Eliza Stokes. I gathered that from the description given by Miss Bull in the course of our conversation. My suspicions were aroused by the fact that Lord Derrington had leased the Amelia square house to Mrs. Jersey."

"Why did he do that?" George spoke more to himself than to Ireland.

"Well," said the old man, rising, "it is my belief that Lord Derrington knows there was a marriage and assisted Mrs. Jersey so that she should hold her tongue. Now there is no more time. I must go out." And Ireland walked to the door.

"One moment," said George on the doorstep. "This blue domino connected with my father's murder—was she never arrested?"

"No. There was no means of tracing her. Except that she wore a piece of holly she carried no distinguishing mark."

"Holly?" cried George, astounded. "Yellow holly?"

"Yes. I don't know how you come to mention it, but the holly worn by the blue domino with whom your father went away had yellow berries."

CHAPTER VII.

AS Brendon was in the neighborhood of Amelia square he paid a visit to the boarding house. Having learned from Ireland that Miss Bull had informed him how Lord Derrington was connected with the late Mrs. Jersey, George thought it just as well that she should be questioned. Certainly Miss Bull, who appeared to be a dour and secretive sort of person, might not speak. On the other hand, if he could induce her to be frank he might learn from her—the interest she knew—the reason why Lord Derrington had leased the Amelia square house to Mrs. Jersey.

On his way Brendon meditated on Ireland's remarks about the holly. He remembered the agitation of Mrs. Jersey when she saw the sprig in his coat. She had been at San Remo when his father was stabbed, and Ireland had mentioned that the woman with whom the deceased man had left the ballroom wore a sprig of yellow holly. Had the berries been red George might not have thought so much of the matter, but yellow holly is comparatively rare, and evidently Mrs. Jersey's alarm had been caused by her recollection of the murder. The sight of the holly had revived her memory, but whether it had anything to do with the murder," mused George as he turned into Amelia square. "Probably it has nothing to do with the blue domino or with the matter of the crime. From what Ireland says, however, a piece of yellow holly was mentioned in connection with the murder, and Mrs. Jersey, then Eliza Stokes, probably heard of it. That was why she shivered and turned pale when she saw the sprig in my coat."

Having thus decided the question, though not in a very satisfactory way, George rang the bell and was admitted into the sitting room in which the murder had taken place. It was empty, but Jarvey departed immediately to fetch Miss Bull.

George knew the room well. It had been used by his grandfather as a breakfast room, and many a meal had he enjoyed at that very table. As the furniture had been sold to Lord Derrington, together with the house, the chairs and the very article of furniture at which Mrs. Jersey had been stabbed when seated. Brendon looked from the table to the door and wondered if the assassin had entered stealthily with a bared weapon and had stabbed the wretched woman before she had time to turn her head. But on second thoughts he was inclined to think that the assassin had been in friendly conversation with Mrs. Jersey before inflicting the fatal stroke. Even in the street distance between Miss Bull and door Mrs. Jersey would have had time to spring to her feet and give the alarm. "No," thought George as he seated himself; "what I said to Trais is correct. The assassin engaged Mrs. Jersey in friendly conversation and then watched for an opportunity to strike from behind."

He would have continued trying to puzzle out the circumstances of the crime but that Miss Bull entered, accompanied by Margery. The little old maid looked whiter and more haggard than ever, but her eyes gleamed brightly, and she seemed to be in perfect health. Margery, now being the nominal head of the house, appeared more important, but she kept her eyes on Miss Bull's face and in all things took her orders from this superior being.

"How are you, Mr. Brendon?" said Miss Bull, smiling in her prim way, but without offering her hand. "I did not expect to see you again."

"Why not?" asked George quickly.

Miss Bull shrugged up her thin shoulders and fastened her beady eyes on his face. "Many of the boarders left on account of Lindame's murder, so I thought you had done the same."

"I was only a visitor, Miss Bull. Had I been a boarder I should not have left. The murder did not scare me."

"No," replied Miss Bull indifferently; "I don't suppose it did. I only talked for the sake of talking."

Brendon was rather embarrassed how to begin the conversation, especially as Margery was present. Something of this showed itself in his manner, for Miss Bull drew Margery's hand within her own and nodded affably. "Miss Watson is the head of the house," she said. "Do you come to see her or me, Mr. Brendon?"

"I come to see you," said George, hoping she would send the inconvenient third away. But she did nothing of the sort.

"In that case Margery can stop as my friend, Mr. Brendon. Anything you say before her will go no further. She keeps my secrets."

Margery stooped and kissed the old maid's hand. Miss Bull patted her head and turned cheerfully to her visitor. "Yes, Mr. Brendon?" she said in an interrogative manner. Again George felt awkward, but judged it best to plunge into the middle of the matter and get it over as soon as possible. "You called to see a certain Mr. Ireland," he said, "about the lease of this house. I have come to ask you why you did so."

Miss Bull stopped patting Margery's hand and her lips tightened. "I don't see what business that is of yours," she said tartly.

"On the face of it, Miss Bull, I admit that the question sounds impertinent. But I am anxious to learn something about Mrs. Jersey's early life, and since you know something"—

"I know nothing," interrupted Miss Bull quickly, "absolutely nothing. I came here as a boarder many years ago, and, as is my custom, I kept myself to myself. My name and face do not get on well together. She was not a lady."

Evidently it was impossible to learn anything from so secretive a woman. Nevertheless George tried another tack. "Do you know if Mrs. Jersey left any papers behind her?"

He asked this because it struck him that Mrs. Jersey might have been tempted to write out her relations with Sir Vane family.

Miss Bull did not reply to this question herself. "That is not my business," she said. "Miss Watson took possession of her aunt's papers."

"They were in a green box," said Margery artlessly.

"What did they consist of?" asked Brendon.

"You need not answer that question, Margery," said Miss Bull quickly. "I am not in the boarding house business

A small ham may be steamed instead of boiled. Prepare the ham in the usual manner by soaking it in cold water for eighteen hours, and after scrubbing well with a clean pot and brush, put it in the steamer over boiling water and cook, allowing half an hour to each pound of ham. The reason ham is so often indigestible is that it is underdone. In Vienna hospitals very great attention is paid to the dietary, ham boiled and baked until it falls to pieces under the fork, is given patients convalescing from typhoid fever.

PASSED TO LION OF THE PUNJAUB

It remained in possession of the ruling families of the empire until the eruption of the Persian conqueror, Nadir Shah, who saw it glittering in the turban of the vanquished Mohammed Shah, and, proposing an exchange of headdress as a mark of friendship, bore it away with him, and gave it the name by which it is still known. After the massacre of Nadir it passed through the hands of Ahmed Shah of Oabool to Shah Shujah, who paid it as the price of his liberty to his conqueror, Runjeet Singh, the "lion of the Punjaub." In 1813 it was the attention of the Punjaub to the East Indian Company's territory. In 1849 it was stipulated that the Koh-i-noor should be surrendered to the Queen of England, to whom it was accordingly delivered by the company July 3d, 1856. At this period its weight was 186 carats.

THE LARGEST DIAMOND.

Richest Stone Ever Discovered Found Near Pretoria.

The largest diamond ever discovered has been found near Pretoria. The stone weighs 3,032 carats, and is said to be a pure white diamond of good quality. It is locally valued at $8,500,000 to $4,000,000. The famous Koh-i-noor, which is valued at $600,000, weighs 123 carats, though it is said to have weighed 900 before it was cut. There was immense excitement here and at Pretoria as a result of the discovery.

The Koh-i-noor, or "Mountain of Light," is a Crown jewel, and as always on exhibition in the Tower of London. This stone, interesting alike for its historical associations and for its magnificence, was, according to Indian tradition, obtained before the Christian era from one of the mines of Golconda. From the Rajah of Oojein, who seems to have possessed it, at the beginning of the Christian era, it passed to successive Sovereigns of central India, and in the early part of the fourteenth century was added to the treasures of Delhi by the Patan Monarch Aladdin.

AUSTRALIAN TEA DRINKERS.

The tea drinkers of Australia rival those of China and Japan, not, however, in the quality, but in the quantity consumed. The men especially drink tea because it is a quantity drink, and all day long and at a strength which would make the queue of a tea-drinking Chinaman curl. On Sunday morning the tea drinker starts with a clean pot and a clean record. The pot is hung over the fire with a sufficiency of water in it for the day's brew, and when this is boiled he pours into it enough of the fragrant herb to produce a deep coffee-colored liquid.

On Monday, without removing yesterday's tea leaves, he repeats the process; on Tuesday he plays variations on Wednesday and so on through the week. Toward the close of the seven days the pot is filled with an acrid mash of tea leaves, out of which the tea is squeezed by the pressure of a tin cup. By this time the tea is the color of rusty iron, incredibly bitter and disagreeable to the uneducated palate. The natives call it "real good old post and rails," the simile being obviously drawn from a stiff and dangerous jump, and regard it as having been brought to perfection.

WAS THE EYE OF AN IDOL.

The diamond so long in the possession of the Sultan of Matan, of the island of Borneo, is remarkable for its size and purity. It weighs 367 carats, and should be worth at least $2,000,000. It is shaped like a pear, with an indented hollow in the smaller end. It was discovered at Landak, in the Matan district, and was presented to the Empress Catharine II. of Russia, by a French deserter who had stolen the pagoda of this valuable stone. After passing through the hands of various purchasers it came into the possession of a Greek merchant, who resold it for it from the Empress $450,000, an annuity of $20,000 and a title of nobility.

The Austrian diamond is of a beautiful lemon color, and cut in rose; its weight is 139 carats. Its value is less than it would be but for its color and the form in which it is cut, ranking as worth $500,000, instead of $750,000.

PROTECT YOURSELF AGAINST GERMS

People With Weak Stomachs Most Liable To Catch Disease.

When the stomach and digestive organs are weak, the food does not digest, and there is a sour slimy, fermenting mass, making it an ideal spot for the disease germs to multiply. The only way to protect yourself against disease germs is to strengthen the stomach and digestive organs, and Mi-o-na is the only agent, so far as is known, that will accomplish this.

The ordinary medicine that is taken for indigestion and stomach troubles is advertised to act upon the food alone, and hence can give no more than temporary relief. Mi-o-na is a certain cure in all cases of stomach troubles, excepting cancer, because it enables the stomach and digestive organs to act in the way Nature intended they should. Druge cannot digest the food; they simply decompose it.

If you suffer with distress after eating, pain in the head, chest, sides and back, belching of gases and undigested food, bad taste in the mouth, dizziness, or vertigo, heartburn, variable appetite, pale tongue, pimples or blotches on the face, and have a general feeling of despondency, weakness, and debility, you should at once strengthen the stomach and digestive system by the use of Mi-o-na. There is no liquid, no alcohol, no poisonous dose in Mi-o-na. Just one simple tablet out of a fifty cent box before eating, and your stomach will soon become so strong and healthy that you will be germ proof. Ask Wal ace's Red Cross Drug Store to show you the guarantee under which they sell Mi-o-na; costs nothing unless it cures.

NAPANEE, ONT.

We would like to tell you about our New Dress Goods, New Dress Trimmings, New Carpets and New Curtains this week, but want of space crowds them out.

Napanee's Greatest ...Store.

THE Robinson Co.

Use your eyes. Here are new, rich, beautiful, useful goods from maybe twenty different countries. Isn't such a store a school? The fine and mechanical arts are contributors to our every day needs.

Yet it is just a store — and all these goods bear plainly-marked prices, which are their own best guarantee of fairness.

Sixty Per Cent. Off

Women's and Children's Cloth Coats.

Pursuing the cast iron rule of this house "to start every coat season with a new styles," we cut the life out of prices. Hence such unheard-of reductions sixty per cent off coat prices. JUST THINK OF IT!

For one week, commencing to-morrow, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 18th, we will give sixty per cent, off Women's and Girls' Cloth Coats, or in other words for every dollar's worth we give you, keep sixty cents of it and give us only forty cents. It means that those lovely coats that you have been wishing for at $15 now go at $6.

The $12 Coats for $4.80.
The $10 Coats for $4.
The $8 Coats for $3.20.
The $5 Coats for $2.40.

The $5 Coats for $2.
The $4 Coats for $1.60.
The $3.00 Coats for $1.20
The $2 Coats for 80c.

Assortment of sizes is complete from two year size to women's size 44 bust. There are a lot of people to whom this bargain will be interesting. The woman who has been wearing an expensive Fur Coat will soon need a cloth one. Bright hot sun of early spring days does not improve appearance of Furs. Then again there is the woman who has been trying to make the last years coat do. She can't afford to do without at these prices. Then all good sound girls should have a new coat. Particularly when we make it so easy to get one. Now we expect to have a crowd here to-morrow at ten o'clock after the White Steamboom, so we will sell the Coats any time after 8.30 a.m. Be early. Don't hesitate.

Our Silk Business is Humming.

Away back in the Autumn it was clear to us that 1905 would be a BIG SILK YEAR. Without hesitation we placed on order for importation one of the largest orders that this house ever gave for Dress Silks. Two weeks ago the first shipment arrived and the moment they were shown, met with substantial approval of our customers. Sales have been even better than our expectations. The patterns are so different, colorings are so richly shaded, prices are so reasonable that to see them is "to want them."—Yes—we buy them.

CHIFFON LIBERTY gets its name from having that rich sheen to it, such as you get on heavy Silk Chiffon. Patterns are small striped shot effects and checks — Blues, Browns, Greens, Reds, Greys, 50c yard.

CHAMELOON TAFFETAS—Rich, many toned shot effects in the wantable colors such as shades of Rose and White, Lizzard, Navy, Marine, Cinnamon, Green, Claret, Seal, 75c yard.

POINTELLE SHOT TAFFETAS in individual Dress Patterns, Claret, Brown, Grey, Blue, Myrtle, $1.00 yard.

MARCELINE JAP. SILK in 20 inch and 27 inch widths, 25c and 50c yd. Full range of shades and a better quality for same money than last year.

New Arrivals at the Staple Counter.

Ten-cent Grey Cotton for 8c yd. We secured a case of Bengal Grey Cotton, the finest make of grey cotton that Canadian mills produce. The regular price of it is ten cents a yard. If you take a web of it, 8c a yd. The pieces run from 20 to 30 yds. each.

Maidira Cambric extra nice for whitewear. Is a lovely material for making fine white underwear. It comes from 36 to 40 inches wide. Finished like linen with a softness of Nainsook. Ten yards to a box, $2.

Crum's English Calico, 12½c yd. We are now showing 1935 patterns in Crum's English Calico. We pride ourselves upon the nice range of patterns that we have to show you. Small neat patterns prevail. Colorings that will look just the same after they have been tubbed. Crum's English Calicos are easy to sew, easy to wash, easy to iron and wear well. Send for samples.

Ducks, 12 1-2 cts. yd. Indigo Blue Light Aniline Blacks all small neat patterns, the kind that do stand washing.

Silk Finished Sateens, 12 1-2 cts. yd. Lots of Sateens at 12 1-2c yd., but our customers say that ours are heavier, brighter and have a much better mercerized finish than the average. All desirable shades and blacks.

Am-I-Duck Prints, 10c a yd. Am-I-Duck print is the heaviest and strongest print for 10c a yd that we have seen. Patterns are all good.

Art Ticking. Makers of Tickings have produced some entirely new patterns for this season's trade. Artistic combinations of color. They are so attractive that people are buying them for cosy corners, den fixings, fancy pillows, mattresses, best draperies, etc, 25c yd.

What is New at the Small Goods Counter.

Music Bags. Another nice lot of them just in. All students and teachers of music have a use for them. We only sell the made from leather goods. Black, brown, black, $1.00, 1.25, 1.50, 2.00, 2.50 and 3.00.

New Hand Bags. If you want something different to those usually carried, the new shapes will interest you. The four newest arrivals are Dolly Varden, Duplex, the Avenue and Envelope.

Hair Belts. Three sizes, assorted shades, 15c, 20c and 25c.

Safety Sanitary Belts Everyone who has used them is pleased. They are made of strong sateen with elastic stay that cause it to yield to every movement of the body. The patent hook does away with pins. Cannot become unfastened therefore it ensures perfect safety and comfort to the wearer. Made in three sizes, for small, medium and large women. At the corset counter, 25c. By mail post paid, 30c.

Erect Form Shoulder Braces. A simple comfortable brace that all school children who are inclined to stoop should wear. Can be worn with ease. Not bulky like the clumsy harness most of us have tried to wear and couldn't. 35c ea.

Women's Neckwear and Belts. This is the store for women's neckwear and belts, no doubt about that. New ideas for you to look at every time you come. News stocks, new matched setts, new chiffon jabots, new jets, new turnovers, new belts in tinsel gold, cut steel, oxidised, etc.

Hose Supporters. We only keep the best. The kinds that do not tear the hose. A poor hose supporter is dear at any price. They destroy hair pins several times over.

For the Novelty Girl Always something new for her here. New hat pins, new combs, new hair pins, new buckles, new shirt waist setts, new brooches, new belt sets, new skirt supporters, new souvenir pins, new purses, etc.

About Corsets.

We are giving almost double the space to Corsets that we formerly did. The styles for the season are now established and we have endeavored to procure shapes and styles enough in the different qualities to be able to satisfy the most careful dressers. Our corset salesmen will be pleased to show you the new models and demonstrate the desirable improvements that have developed in corset making.

No one maker has the monopoly of correct styles. We have selected the best from each. For instance one make may be strong on Girls' Styles, such as Hygeian Waists, etc., another maker has a specialty of corsets for big women, another makes a better corset with hose supporter attached, another may make an old reliable brand that we simply cannot do without, another makes the best fifty cent and dollar corset in Canada, and of course we have to have them or we could not lead the procession.

Baby Coats and Silk Dresses for Little Girls.

We are showing the cutest styles that ever happened for the little folk. Baby Coats made from Cream Cashmere and cream Bedford Cord's, richly trimmed, 1.90, 2.50 and 3.00.

An Immense Stock of Men's Overalls and Smocks.

We have a special eye to the welfare of the working man. We are often told by customers that they can find no where else such good values in Men's Overalls as The Robinson Co. gives them. We take particular pains to see that they are extra strongly made, and well shaped. Sizes range from Youth's 24 to 32 inches, up to the extra large size, 44 inches Prices, 80c, 75c and $1.00. Colors, blue, brown, butternut, grey, khaki and black.

For the Treatment of

ALCOHOLISM

USED IN CONNECTION WITH THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC PROBATION SYSTEM WITH UNVARYING SUCCESS.

The City Council of Montreal has endorsed this marvellous discovery. The Finance Committee of Montreal recently voted $500 to defray the expense of placing the medicine in each of the city Police stations, as prompt application of the Treatment to bad cases will prevent the fatalities continually occurring in the cells.

No Sanitarium is required. The Treatment can be taken at home. No special diet required. The desire to reform is simply necessary and spirits avoided for a few days.

This medicine is now within the reach of all, the price having been reduced. The wonderful results obtained with the worst class of drunkards coming before the Judges of the Recorders' Courts in Quebec and Montreal warrant the statement that the disease of Drunkenness can be cured—readily and surely—under ordinary circumstances and with the reasonable desire upon the part of an inebriate

This treatment is simply the medicine of the medical profession—the only secret is as to its administration.

Dr. Mackay's discovery is the result of 25 years of practice as a specialist and expert. He is a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the Province of Quebec.

The Government of Quebec through the Judges ordered over 600 boxes of the medicine for the prisoners appearing in the Courts in 1904—Official Reports establish 80 per cent of cures with these cases.

With the public and official endorsation and the record of results published it is unnecessary to waste money experimenting further: All communications private.

He Likes Mothers-in-law.

That a mother-in-law is not always an unwelcome adjunct to the family is proved in a wholesale way in the case of a Monaco fisherman. He lived on a large estate in Monaco. He lost two wives, but in both instances after their death he retained the mothers-in-law, and now he has taken into his third wife No. 3, who comes into his home accompanied by her mother as well as three unmarried sisters. All these good women, who constitute his household, are said to dwell together in peace and harmony.

THE FIGURE OF A RIVER

USED BY PREACHER TO SHOW BENEFITS OF SERVING GOD.

THY PEACE AS A RIVER

Not As a Taunt: "I Told You So," But An Invitation to Return to the Way From Which They Have Wandered—What the River Teaches—The Conditions of Peace—The River of Triumph.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Driver, of Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 12.—Under the figure of a river the preacher sheds his wisdom upon the benefit that accrue to men who serve and obey God. The text is Isaiah xlviii, 18, "Then had thy peace been as a river."

What art thou doing, O prophet of Israel? Art thou taunting thy people with the blessing they had missed through forsaking God and disregarding thy teaching? When trouble swoops upon those of those who say: "I told you so? If you had only taken my advice you would not be in the difficulty you are in today. If you will make your bed out of thorns and thistles instead of roses and lie upon the flames and nettles instead of down, you will have no life he is soon to strangle with the rope? In drawing your enchanting picture of the Hudson river do you not believe a people harassed by powerful foreign enemies and disturbed by internal dissensions give pain to their mocking at their distress, as the moaning of the desert aggravates the thirst and dismays the traveler? Are you saying to your miserable people: "Look at those beautiful hills watered by the river, rich in field and tuneful with singing birds. They would have been all yours if you had but wandered into the fair way of life, but now they are lost to you for ever."

"Ah, no," says the prophet Isaiah, "it is not to aggravate their thirst that I tell them of this river, but to invite them to return to the way from which they have wandered, not to exult over their misfortunes, but to warn them of the consequences of sin. I am not here glorying in the suffering of God's fallen ones. My river is not composed of the blackwaters of the river Styx, but from the flowing crystal waters of the river of life. I am like a loving father whose wayward son has disregarded warnings and has sinned and brought himself into trouble, and the father comes with love and pleads with him to repent and assures him that if he will forsake his sin his wickedness shall be forgiven and his peace" shall be like a river, as though he had never sinned. May suppose that you love God more than the banks of the Jordan or the Rhine or the Tiber or the Upper Thames or the banks of the Hudson, which are now the sacred pulpit. Such a river bank today may become as sacred a pulpit as the banks of Westminster Abbey or St. Paul's or Canterbury Cathedral, even though bishop's hand has not consecrated it or ecclesiastical convocation dedicated it.

The pleading river, in the first place, teaches us that the divine peace which comes to a man must come as the result of natural law in the spiritual life. It is not the result of haphazard. It is not a miracle as we in the broad sense term a miracle. It does not come as a miraculous wind which might dig up a seed in some Italian garden and in its teeth lift it above Alpine crag and carry it over land and sea, and without human aid plant it as an exotic upon the banks of the Ohio or the Mongahela river. All the divine peace comes to man as the result of a rational cause. It has a natural soil or as a direct or natural source; it has a natural flow, as the Jordan has a natural flow, and it has a natural outlet, as the Amazon empties itself into the Atlantic or the Ganges finds a resting place in the huge reservoir of the Bengal gulf.

A river cannot disobey natural law. A river cannot become a defiance among rivers. A river cannot do anything that specific gravity says, "Thou shalt not do." This fact is demonstrated everywhere. I climb one of the tall pyramids of the Rocky Mountains. There upon the highest peak I find what is called a water shed.

But, though the mountain brooks may leap from the cool hills into the heat of the broad, arid plain, it makes a great deal of difference into what plain that leaping raindrop shall go, whether it falls one inch to the right or one inch to the left of the Rocky Mountain water shed. One inch to the right it flows into the Gulf of Mexico; one to the left it flows into the waters of the Pacific.

O. R. KIDNEY CURE

Miss Emma Monroe, Trenton, Ont., says. "I suffered for a long time with nervousness and back-ache. I then got a distressing hacking cough that crept, and felt very miserable every way.

I consulted two doctors; both said I had quick consumption and could only live a few weeks. A friend who had used O. R. KIDNEY CURE, said she believed my trouble was due to weak kidneys. I commenced its use; and, before I had finished six bottles, I felt like a new girl. That was two years ago, and to-day I am perfectly well and happy."

O. R. KIDNEY CURE is sold by all druggists, 50c per bottle; or write to the O. R. MEDICINE COMPANY, LIMITED, Toronto.

The waters of a river must obey natural law. Now, if God's laws are inexorable in regulating the source and the course of a river, are they not equally inexorable in reference to the source and the course his divine peace, which is like a river?

You must obey God's laws before you can enjoy God's peace. To resist them, to qualify them, is to ally yourself against omnipotent power and infinite wisdom. It is not necessary that God should punish you with it; you bring the punishment on yourself in failure and disappointment. Every violation of God's laws in nature is given over to anarchy and lawlessness. Only as you yield to his will do you put yourself in line with the eternal order and enter into peace. I do not care how much you may think your way is better than God's ways, one fact you must understand you cannot get the divine peace, which is like a river, unless you bring yourself into harmony with God's laws and obey God's commandments.

Naaman had to learn this lesson before he could be cured of his leprosy. His way was that the prophet should come out and stand and call on the name of the Lord and strike his hand over the place. God's way was that he should seven times in the Jordan. When he took God's way he was cured, but not until he took it. Your soul immortal, of your sin. Are you ready to welcome this divine peace, like a river, which flows from you through Jesus Christ? The way of the cross is the source of this peace. From the mount of Calvary that stream gushes forth, as from Mount Hermon flows the Jordan and from the Adirondacks the mighty Hudson.

But the pleading river teaches us another lesson about the divine peace which passes understanding. The longer a disciple of Jesus Christ lives a Christian life the deeper and wider does the river of his peace flow. It should deepen and widen and grow more majestic in volume, even as the waters of the Hudson grow deeper and wider as they slip past the highlands and lap the feet of the Palisades and sweep on to the ocean, down to the place where they are married to the waters of the mighty deep at the nuptial altar of Gravesend Bay, Long Island, in upper New York Bay. It should go on growing deeper and wider, even as become the waters of the River Orinoco, where they empty themselves into the unfathomable depths of the sea. In 1498, Christopher Columbus for the first time touched the mainland of South America and saw the mighty river, one of his officers congratulated him because he had discovered another island. The navigator answered, "No such river as that flows from an island. That mighty torrent drains the waters of a continent." The pleading river of God's peace grows wider and deeper as we travel along its banks in the journey of the ever widening river of Christian course it may seem a small stream, but as the years pass and our course nears the ocean of eternity the volume of the river increases until it becomes a peace that passeth understanding.

Is this increasing power true in reference to our spiritual peace? As we accompany our spiritual life with that of your spiritual life ten, twenty, thirty years ago are you conscious that you love God more now than you did then? Do you read the Bible more now than you did when you joined the church or received for your first communion? Is your enjoyment of prayer and your dependence upon it more intense now than it was at first? Are you striving more earnestly than formerly to gather the showers of blessing that are ever where falling around you into your own spiritual nature? Are you more ready now than at the beginning of your Christian career to go into the house of a neighbor on whom sickness or bereavement has fallen to administer comfort and to cheer him with reminders of God's promises? There is something awfully wrong with a Christian life while his wealth and mental power increase with the passing years, finds that his spiritual nature does not widen and deepen like the pleading river of God's peace.

Indeed, I sometimes think that our so called peace is not like a river at all. It is more like a brackish, stagnant pool or as a drink which one gives forth no water. "There was a very good well here once," said an old farmer in reference to a certain drinking trough. "Indeed," answered a preacher on his vacation, "is that so? I wonder why you should let it with. How did it get filled up?" "Neglect, sir," answered the farmer. "First, a little sediment got in it, then a little more and a little more and a little more. The dirt and refuse were not cleared out, and the water grew worse and worse and less and less until at last the well became choked up. I wonder if there is any water at all in the bottom of the well?" "Yes," said the preacher, "I wonder if there is any water at the bottom of the well that is like the figure of our peace? Is it a well and not a river?

As the Mississippi River is fed by the Missouri, the Ohio, the Tennessee and the Red Rivers and indirectly by the Allegheny, the Monongahela, the Yellowstone and the Platte, so from many sources might our river of peace receive the waters of blessing, but instead we allow the dirt and refuse of this world to choke the passage by which they might enter and our river dwindles into a stagnant pool. Have we become dried-up spiritual souls? As the tourists dropping pebbles into Jacob's well have choked it up, some of us have choked up our gospel wells. Years ago we dropped the pebble of Sabbath desecration into it. Years ago in went another pebble—absence from Sunday school and church worship. Years ago we took to reading the Sunday newspapers instead of the Bible. No wonder that our peace, which should pass all understanding and be like a river, wide-flowing and deep-running, has become a brackish, stagnant pool or dried up like Jacob's well. If it be not like a river, the fault is ours and not God's. God is pouring down upon us everywhere his showers of spiritual blessing, which we should gather, freshet-like, into the river beds of our hearts.

But the pleading river not only teaches our relationship to God, but also our practical spiritual relationship to our fellow men. It clearly and emphatically and distinctly says, "Gospel peace must be eyes to the blind, food for the hungry, clothing for the naked and happy firesides for the homeless." It teaches man that the first great commandment is to love the Lord our God with all our soul and strength and mind. And the second is like unto it: we must love our neighbors as ourselves. It is a law of our nature that peace and happiness come to us through service to others. No man is so happy as he who has made another happy. No pillow is so restful as that of him who has relieved the anxiety of his brother. The peace that passeth understanding never fills the heart that cherishes selfish desires or turns away from another's misery.

Are we temporal and spiritual "rivers of life" to our fellow men? Some of us are truly "rivers of death" or "rivers of seclusion." Our lives are like the stygian river in the great Mammoth cave of Kentucky. We are surrounded by grandeurs and beauties on every side, but we have walled ourselves in by solid rock, where we can do no good to others and where others cannot do any good to us.

Or our lives, if they are not like the Styx or a Mammoth cave, are supporting only a few blind fish swimming hundreds of feet below the surface of the earth, may be like the wonderfully suggestive beauties of a Luray cave of old Virginia, which likewise are doing no good to any one. That Luray cave is a marvelous place. Though its beauties were buried for centuries, yet under the flash of light it looks as though its walls had been erected only yesterday and, like the Taj Mahal of India, are a glittering mass of dead precious stones. Yonder stand the colossal forms of angels as statuary in vestal garments of purest white. Here are the drippings of a cataract, as though the mad rush of a Niagara had been instantly halted and, like an open mouthed lion, dared not utter one growl. Beyond even where we seem to hear the echo of its last wild, mad roar. Yonder is the "ballroom," where imagination can step us the nymphs and the fairies used to sport and dance and make merry. Near to this "ball hall" is the "cemetery ridge," where those nymphs and fairies were buried ages on ages ago. Here are the "hanging veils of the goddesses," so thin that through them flashes the light of our guides' lamps. From yonder cathedral, with its domes and spires and steeples and minarets and strange carvings, there come echoing the solemn notes of an organ which roll and swell and thunder and whisper and pray and chant and die. Now out of every grotto stretches some hand or lifts some snowbank or flaps some wing or, like a rock eye, blinks some emerald or, tiger-like, glares the bloodshot eyeball of some ruby or flashes some emerald. And while all the chimes of all the towers are beginning to ring suddenly a blackness many tons in weight breaks loose and crashes upon the floor. It shivers, rolls over once or twice and then lies still, to be decomposed by the coming ages. A marvelous and enchanting place is Luray cave of old Virginia.

But I cannot close this sermon upon this beautiful text without finding one more analogy. The pleading river is not only a river of consecration to God, but a river of triumph. It is not only the pearly gates through which, as the Jordan of death, we shall enter the tomb, but it is the crystal gates by which we shall leave the wilderness of trouble and earthly wanderings and enter the promised land of heaven and eternal joy. Shall our peace, which is like a river, stop at the brink of the grave?

We have read how George Frederick Handel on the River Thames won his great musical victory over the irate George I. of England. When King George was Elector of Hanover he befriended the young unknown musician Handel and made him court musician. But after Handel had won musical fame he tired of the Hanover court and hied himself to London. This greatly enraged the Elector. When he became King of England as George I. he would have nothing to do with his old favorite. But the day the King gave a great fete upon the River Thames. As the royal barge moved along another barge followed, playing inspiring concertos of music. Those concertos, gathered together under one musical head, he knows as the celebrated "water music" of Handel. Every musical instrument then known was utilized in the concerto. "Ah," said King George, "no one could compose such music as that but my old court musician, Frederick Handel!" And once the King restored Handel to favor and gave to him a salary of $1,000 per year. But though Handel upon the River Thames was able to play himself into the good graces of an earthly king our divine peace, like a river, shall yet open for us a more triumphant entry into the royal courts of heaven. There we shall not have to play as Handel played, but we shall join all the celestial choir which sang for the shepherds above the Judaean hills sing for us in the glorious chorus of a royal and divine welcome.

But I think myself of one suggestive fact about this same River Thames. Though Handel by sweetest harmony may have played himself over to the good graces of an earthly king, yet he was playing his "water music" upon the stream which was at the front gateway of the "traitor's gate" of the old Tower of London. Through this gate the English took their enemies for incarceration or decapitation. Oh, my friends, can it be that you or I must ever pass through the traitor's gate, which is to-day swinging over the river of death for those who have not God? Can it be that there shall ever come a time when God shall speak to us an eternal condemnation with the following words: "Oh, that thou hadst hearkened unto my commandments; then had thy peace been as a river and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea!" Oh, for the peace, the everlasting peace, of God, which is like a river!

Value of Underdrainage.

Under-drainage requires an expenditure of no little time and money and to many farmers looks like borrowed capital, but the experience of those who have done most along this line goes to show that it is a profitable investment. A single crop from under-drained ground that was previously too wet to work has been known to pay all the expense incurred.—Cor. American Agriculturist.

The Limit.

A number of actors were discussing recently the merits of different boarding houses in a certain city, and the argument turned on the comparative meagerness of the table board provided by the various landladies. One of the party who had listened quietly to the talk now spoke up.

"If one of you fellows really wants to put yourself on a rigid diet," he said, "go to Mrs. ——'s boarding house in Cincinnati. I came down to breakfast there one morning, and the servant waitsed up and asked me if I'd have tea or coffee. ACUTE INDIGESTION

A Trouble That Causes Untold Suffering to Thousands Throughout Canada.

"I suffered for years with acute indigestion that I frequently would walk the floor through the long nights," said Mrs. Thomas Vincent, building at 98 St. Peter street, Quebec. "I had been afflicted with the trouble," she continued, "for upwards of twenty years, but it was only during the past year that it increased an acute form. There were times when I was almost distracted; everything I ate disagreed with me and the pains in the region of the stomach were almost unbearable. When the attacks were at their worst my head would grow dizzy and would throb violently, and sometimes I would experience severe attacks of nausea. At the time went on I was almost worn out either through abstinence from food or the havoc it brought to what I did take it. I tried many much lauded dyspepsia cures, but they did me no good. In fact, I tried nothing that helped me until my nephew urged me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He had used them himself with the greatest benefit, and assured me that they would help me. So I made up my mind to try a few boxes of the pills there was some improvement, and I continued to take the pills until I had used about three months, and at the end of that time I found myself cured. I could eat a hearty meal and eat it with relish. I slept soundly at night, my weight increased, and my constitution generally built up. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure any case of dyspepsia, if they are given a fair trial such as I gave them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure cases like Mrs. Vincent's simply because they make new, rich blood that feeds every organ of the body. To do its work properly. That is the reason why the pills cure all blood and nerve troubles such as anaemia, neuralgia, rheumatism, kidney troubles, skin diseases, St. Vitus dance, paralysis and the special ailments of growing girls and women at middle age. MONEY MADNESS.

The Evils of the Mania For Getting Rich in a Hurry.

The mania for getting rich—the mad, false idea that we must have money—has played worse havoc among ambitious people than war or pestilence. A member of the Chicago board of trade says that the losses and woes of this country contribute $100,000,000 a year to the sharpers who promise to make them rich quick. They work the same confidential letter and the same shrewd baiting until the victim parts with his money. Thousands are plodding along in poverty and deprivation, because the accumulated because they have not been able to get up in the world or to realise their ambitions, for the reason that they succumbed to the schemes of the smooth promoter who hypnotised them into the belief that they could make a great deal very quickly out of a very little.

The present fever of trying to make a dollar earn $5 is growing more and more contagious. We see even women secretly going into brokers' offices and "playing the market," speculating, everything they have in all sorts of schemes, drawing their deposits out of the bank, sometimes pawning their jewelry—even their engagement rings—and borrowing, hoping to make a lot of money, before their husbands or families find it out and then to surprise them with the results, but in most cases what they invest is hopelessly lost.

Thousands of young Americans are so led on by designing financial entanglements even before they get fairly started in their life work that they can only transmute a tithe into that which will count in their lives. A large part of it is lost on the way up, as the energy of the coal is nearly all lost before it reaches the electric bulb.—Orison Swett Marden in Success.

THE FOURTH DIMENSION.

Plato's Early Efforts to Define This Intangible Quality.

In Harper's Magazine C. H. Hinton writes on the much debated question of "The Fourth Dimension." In opening his article he cites Plato as an early exponent of this idea.

"Plato, at the beginning of the seventh book of the Republic, describes a set of prisoners who are held in chains before the mouth of a great cavern, bound so that they cannot turn their faces in any other direction than looking straight into the cavern.

"On the wall in which the cavern ends they see their shadows projected by the sun. Their only experience of objects is derived by watching these shadows of passers by traverse the roadway behind them all they see is the shadows of these passers by on the wall. If an object strikes them what they see is the shadow of that object striking the shadow of themselves.

"Plato draws the conclusion that they would identify themselves with their shadows, and that the occurring among these shadow forms are the invariable accompaniments of all their sensations they would think that they themselves were those shadows and lived and moved in a shadow world.

"Now the shadows can only move on the surface of the wall. They cannot approach each other except in one direction. Two shadows can only meet in one point. Their whole universe is a surface, and they are conscious of nothing else

THE WAR.

JAPAN PLANS BIG CAMPAIGN.

London, Feb. 13th.—"If we are to have a Waterloo we must first have a Trafalgar." So said an Japanese authority at the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese struggle, and Japan having found in Admiral Togo, a veritable Nelson, all English observers now await the advent of her Wellington.

The idea that Japan will now abandon the initiative on land and remain on the defensive, holding that with Port Arthur lost Manchuria is useless to Russia, is only mentioned to be abandoned. Japan has other things to do in the world than engage in chronic warfare at the will of her enemies. Everything points to a supreme Japanese effort, while the morale of the Russian leaders and men is under the baneful influence of the Russian home troubles; perhaps such an overwhelming political and military blow as the capture of Mukden by Marshal Oyama, perhaps the destruction of the Russian force facing upon the Pacific by the reduction of Vladivostok, perhaps even both.

THE FRUITS OF VICTORY.

The Japanese Minister at the British Court, Viscount Hayashi, frankly discusses in The Manchester Courier what Japan means to do with her victory. He places first the open door in Manchuria. "We shall claim no privileges in Manchuria that may not be obtainable by all on equitable terms. If there be any peril to the nations of the Occident in our achievements in Manchuria it will consist merely in the fact of our great proximity in this field of enterprise. It may enable our manufacturers, in some respects, to compete on exceptionally favorable terms, but we surely are not to be blamed if we happen to be geographically well placed for trading in our immediate neighborhood." That Japan will seek to impose a tariff permanently at Niu-Chwang and Dalny, every one knows. The American consul appointed to Mukden in 1903 never had a chance to assume a residence. Under Japan's Inspiration China is expected, says Minister Hayashi, to open larger centres of commerce to foreign concerns, and also to facilitate the exploitation of her inexhaustible mineral and other wealth.

THE WAR'S MORAL LESSON.

Thus Englishmen begin to see the stupendous worldwide importance of Japan's victory, even in the moral sphere. The Times finds much food for reflection in the possibilities of Japan's influence upon Western civilization and religions. Its special correspondents in the Far East insist again and again upon the splendid morale of the Japanese fighting men and the Japanese people at large. "In that," says The Times, "far more than in her ships and rifles, lies the real strength of Japan. The greatest lesson for England from the war is the moral lesson." Then follows a sentence which will be read with some misgiving by many English parsons. "It matters not by what creed or training this splendid result has been achieved. The fact of our intense provincialism to look at the difference between creeds and training, and conclude that those in which we believe must produce the best results, but the dynamics of national struggles know nothing of methods. It is the result that counts"

Eternality.

Eternity is incomprehensible. When the laziest snail has carted every drop of water in all our oceans and every grain of sand in all our lands to the farthest away star and brought it all back again, stopping for a century rest at each planet on the way both ways, then will we see the first rays of the sunrise of eternity's endless day in the east of the beginning.

This being the case, it is suggested that we don't cram ourselves with this world's foods and drink so much of earthly water that it will take half of the everlasting to get our systems in shape to enjoy what's left of eternity.

"You are almost an octogenarian, sah," said the semicolonized young yellow negro pompously.

Strenuous Times Since.

Rheumatism and Neuralgia Do Their Terrible Work In February.

Every tortured victim of rheumatism should carefully read the following letter from Mr. H. W. Cryster, of Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., who was cured by Paine's Celery Compound.—

"About four years since, I had a severe attack of grippe, followed by rheumatism, for which the local physician prescribed the usual remedies, which helped me at the time, but did not eliminate the disease. Becoming gradually worse, I finally became discouraged and began using the "proprietary" medicines without benefit. Then I went to Clifton Springs, took the treatment, and felt somewhat better; but after coming back I became very much worse, and was confined to bed for a time. I then went to Paine's Celery Compound, and have gained in health and strength up to the present writing. I now walk from my house to my store, a distance of one-quarter of a mile, daily, and to church Sundays. Paine's Celery Compound has done all this for me. My friends are surprised and astonished to see me able to attend to business again. Believing that it is my duty to let other sufferers know of the great benefit I have received from Paine's Celery Compound, I cheerfully send this letter."

THE WOOLEN INDUSTRY.

Editor of The Beaver:

Napanee, Ont., Can.

My Dear Sir,—In looking over a copy of "Fibre and Fabric," one of the leading textile papers of this country, the enclosed article came to my attention, and which I quote.

CANADIAN AND ENGLISH WOOLEN INDUSTRIES.

The Canadian commercial agent at Leeds and Hull, the center of the Yorkshire woolen industry, reports to the Trade and Commerce Department that he considers it hopeless for Canada, under existing conditions, even with a protective tariff of 30 per cent. and freight charges for 3000 miles in its favor, to compete with the British woolen manufacturers. Canada may possibly have a fighting chance in the cheaper and poorer grades, he says, but in the finer cloths "she is not in the race, but is dragged halfway along the track." He suggests that the only way in which Canada will ever become able to compete is by importing heads of departments who are graduates of textile schools, and also English workmen and their families. He also advises the establishment in Canada of schools of practical training, saying, "I would here suggest to the merchant princes and wealthy men of Canada the advisability of establishing scholarships in connection with technical education which would enable some of the bright Canadian youths to take a thorough course in textile and technical departments of colleges of this district. I know of nothing in this regard which should tend more to the fame of the donors, and from which Canada herself would reap more real business advantages in years to come."

Being naturally interested in the industries of Canada I beg leave to call your attention to it, and would ask you to note principally what the writer has to say in regard to the possibility of establishing textile schools in Canada and if I might add to his suggestion an optional course in this line could be added to your high schools, collegiate institutes or even your colleges.

It is unnecessary to explain much about the textile industry. The financial advancement of this section of New England, which has been really wonderful, has been due chiefly to it and the large fortunes of a big percentage of our representative men can nearly all be traced to the establishment of a small cotton or woolen mill. It is an industry which is world wide and one which must continue to grow always as population increases and I see no reason why Canada should not at least supply her own people with the clothing which they wear. The woolen business was not at the present time so practically dead. Only recently several of your larger mills became incorporated. What could it be so? In the first place what becomes of your own supply of wool? There is a great deal of it produced in Canada in a year. You can import Australian or English wool which is of very fine quality at a less cost than it can be gotten here. You can buy machinery at the present time at a better figure owing to the keen competition along these lines, and in the matter of skilled labor, I claim that the industry in Canada, were large enough to warrant it there would be very little trouble in getting plenty of help to go there where the cost of living is very much less and the advantages just as great.

The larger of your cotton mills in Montreal, Cornwall, Hamilton, are now filled mostly with help which have gone there from mills in this vicinity and it would be the same in the woolen mills if they were sure they could find work in one of several places. I have gone over carefully a list of the woolen manufacturers in Canada and excluding the Toronto Carpet Mfg. Co., of Toronto and the Paton Mfg. Co., of Montreal, I can not find a single mill which is equipped with a hundred looms, and I regret to say a large number of them are marked "out of business." It is too bad to have such conditions as that in an energetic rising country like Canada, and it seems to me that some of your successful men, possibly some of them may have retired by now and have their money lying out in a bank drawing from 3 to 4 per cent. interest, would see the advantage of putting it into an industry of this kind.

As the writer says the establishment of textile courses in schools would do a great deal for the advancement of the industry, but I also contend that a few small mills started up in your towns like Napanee would soon bring the young people to a knowledge of what great possibilities there are in a business of this type and without a doubt many of them would take it up. These mills can be operated at a profit I am sure and it might be interesting for you to know that one of the modern looms built by this Company, running 110 picks per minute on fine worsted goods and weaving a fabric 82 in. wide, would produce from 25 to 30 yards in a day of 10 hours.

I hope to see this industry take big bounds in Canada within the next few years, and I trust Napanee will be one of the first places to take the initiative and establish a good sized mill which I know would be a very profitable enterprise in your town.

With best wishes I remain,

Yours very truly,

HARRY L. FINKLE.

We Paid $100,000

For Liquozone, Yet We Give You a 50c. Bottle Free.

We paid $100,000 for the American rights to Liquozone; the highest price ever paid for similar rights on any scientific discovery. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, in this country and others. We cured all kinds of germ diseases with it—thousands of the most difficult cases obtainable. We proved that in germ troubles it always accomplishes what medicine cannot do. Now we ask you to try it—try it at our expense. Test it as we did; see what it does. Then you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do. You will use it, not only to get well, but to keep well. And it will save nearly all of your sickness.

Kills Inside Germs.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas —largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a germ food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact that gives Liquozone its worth to humanity. And that worth is so great that we have spent over one million dollars to supply the first bottle free to each sick one we learned of.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

Kills Inside Germs.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas —largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a germ food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

WORKING A FRAUD.

A Typical Swindling Scheme as Carried on Through the Mails.

One of the most typical of the frauds carried out through the mails was one wherein the receiver of the circular was told that he was entitled to a prize which he had won from a machine called the Mississippi Valley Planter, published by the Mississippi Valley Publishing company.

The real interest in the statement that the recipient of the circular was entitled to a certain prize which would be shipped on receipt of the freight charges, is in the fact that the machine dressee had won premium No. 7, a "horse and Lilly buggy and harness, valued at $175." With equally remarkable uniformity the freight charges were placed at $29.60.

Never was a bubble blown with less actual soap. There never had been such a concern as the Mississippi Valley Publishing company or such a publication as the Mississippi Valley Planter.

The fraud order intercepted 600 money orders and a number of registered letters. All these people, with the hundreds who had written before them, are reaching out after valuable prizes which they in the nature of things must have known they had never earned or competed for. They are mistaken me for some one else, but I'll take the horse and buggy just the same," must have been the thought which flashed through the 600 brains, and it is an unpleasant commentary on the wickedness of human nature. The prime swindler simply took advantage of men not unwilling to be his accomplices.—Leslie's Monthly Magazine.

SHE FORCED HER WAY.

The Rose Annie Russell Used to Get on the Stage.

William Gillette was seeking a young girl with a southern accent to play Esmeralda. Annie Russell answered an advertisement. She was in short dresses, with her hair down her back and sixteen years old.

"Now, my little girl, run back to your good mother and your Sunday school lesson," was the dismissal she got. "The stage is not for such as you. Run along, my dear."

The little girl obeyed dutifully, but with no intent of accepting the dismissal as final. At the place where she was boarding was an actress who starred in the play called "East Lynne," and from her Annie Russell borrowed an elaborate stage gown with a long train which she plastered with jewelry, also borrowed. She put on high heeled shoes and piled her hair on the top of her head. Thus arrayed she again applied to Mr. Gillette for the position. He talked with her without a suspicion that he had seen her before, and later he said to the manager:

"Well, I think that girl might do. Of course we can easily make her look younger, and some good fairy will have to give her her voice back. But she is certainly the most intelligent looking applicant we have had."

And that is how Annie Russell secured the engagement that made her fame.—Everybody's Magazine.

Baron Rothschild's Pun.

Owen Wister, the novelist, was talking about puns. "I detest puns," he said, "but Fanny Kemble, who was my grandmother, used to tell one made by a certain Baron Rothschild that was good of its kind. The baron was dining out, and some one spoke of venison. 'I think it is not so,' said the baron, 'I think it ish not so coot ash mutton.' 'Oh, absurd!' some one exclaimed. 'If mutton is better than venison it must be more expensive?' The baron laughed, overcome by the brilliancy of the pun that had just come to him. Then he said, and his failure to see the point was the reason why venison ish more expensive than mutton ish that the peoples always prefer vat ish deer to vat is sheep.'"

THAT PALE, TIRED GIRL.

She is in society, in business, at home, everywhere you see her, but always pale, tired and faded. Her hair, hand, heard of Ferrozone or she would be perfectly well. How quickly it strengthens—what an appetite it gives—what a glow it brings to pallid cheeks! The nutriment contained in Ferrozone puts strength into anybody. Laughing eyes, rosy lips, bright quick movements all tell of the vitality Ferrozone produces. Thousands of attractive happy women owe to Ferrozone their joy and health. A fifty cent box of Ferrozone, or five fifty cents at any drug store.

Label Paste.

To make good paste for labels mix together with cold water until they form a smooth cream four ounces of flour and an ounce and a half of brown sugar. Then pour in boiling water, stirring all the time till the right consistency is obtained. Add five or six drops of carbolic acid to keep the paste from becoming sour, and when it has been well stirred in the compound will be fit for use.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS SICK?

Let your morning urine stand for 24 hours in a glass or vessel, and then if it is milky or cloudy, or contains a reddish brick-dust sediment, or if particles or germs float about in it, your kidneys are diseased. If the kidneys are well they filter just so much blood, but if they are sick or weak from any cause, they leave the poison in the blood, and this poison affects the entire system.

It is natural to pass urine three times a day, but many who regard themselves as healthy are obliged to pass water six to ten times a day, and are obliged to get up frequently during the night. They have sick kidneys and bladder and don't know it. Smith's Buchu Lithia Pills cure Rheumatism and all Kidney and Bladder diseases, and bathe new, rich blood.

We will send you a generous sample post paid Free, together with our large, 100 page book about your kidneys. Address, W. F. Smith Co., 185 St. James Street, Montreal, Canada.

A GREAT SCHOOL.

An educational institution which can show an actual attendance of over 1,000 students gathered from all parts of the Dominion and whose graduates are eagerly sought for by business firms, may reasonably be termed a great school. The one business training school in Canada which enjoys this standing is the Central Business College of Toronto. The catalogue issued by this well known school is an interesting production and may be had on application to the Principal, Mr. W. H. Shaw.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

The Maid and the Mummy, a musical melange by Richard Carle and Robert Hood Bowers, met with instant favor on the part of theatregoers at the time of its production in New York at the New York Theatre, and is the one big musical success of the present season. Its presentation there was most successful for its engagement covered a period of many weeks. The delicacy of the situations and in the dialogue, the bright and catchy music and the large and well drilled chorus have won for this entertainment a host of friends. Its appearance here will be identical with that seen during its New York run, as to cast and production. The Maid and the Mummy will be presented under the management of the Carle Amusement Company at the Grand Opera House, Kingston, on Thursday, Feb. 23

A RARE TREAT.

Is in store for the people of Napanee. The ladies of the Eastern Methodist Church are singularly fortunate in having secured the services of Rev G. H. Raley, of Kit-a-mout, B.C., to deliver an address in the body of the church, on Friday evening, 24th inst. Mr. Raley holds an important and strategic point in the development of the Pacific slope. He has been at once Judge, Doctor, Postmaster and Editor of the Na-na-qua. His story is one of most thrilling recital, and is wierdly fascinating. Our citizens will do well to reserve the date. Further particulars next week.

MRS. MACE DEAD.

Friends in the city were, last night, notified, by telegram, of the sad death of Odilia A. Guest, wife of W. D. Mace, which occurred at St. Paul, Minn., yesterday. The deceased lady and her husband resided for many years at Tamworth, where the latter conducted a general mill. A short time ago they went out to Winnipeg to live and later removed to St. Paul in hope of restoring Mrs. Mace's declining health. The deceased was forty-nine years of age and was a daughter of the late Francis Guess, Kingston. One sister, Mrs. A. M. Dell, Washington, D.C.; one brother, R. S. Guess, Harrowsmith, three daughters, Mrs. A. McCurdy, Cape Breton; Mrs. J. Mack and Miss Mertie Mace, Montreal, and the husband survives to mourn her demise. The remains will be brought to Tamworth on Monday for interment.

SEED DISTRIBUTION.

Napanee, Febr. 8, 1905.

Editor of The Beaver.

Dear Sir,—In common with the other directors of the Farmers' Institutes of the County of Lennox, I have received a number of blank forms to be filled up by anyone requiring farm help during the coming year, from Thos. Southworth, Esq., Director, Ontario Department of Crown Lands, and will be glad to distribute them to those interested. The accompanying form will explain. Please insert and oblige.

Respectfully yours,

T. B. REID.

Toronto, Dec., 1904.

Dear Sir,—After consultation with Mr. G. F. Fulram, Superintendent Farmers' Institutes, we have decided to solicit the assistance of the Directors of the several Farmers' Institutes throughout the Province in distributing blank forms of application among those of their neighbors in need of farm help for the coming year. The object is not merely that these forms should be handed out, but that those who receive them should be assisted in the necessary in the manner of filling them up, so that a clear statement of their requirements may be secured, to enable the agent at our Distributing Office, Union Station, to make a judicious selection from among the immigrants according to the special wants of the applicants. I am therefore taking the liberty of sending you some blank forms, and shall be happy to supply you with any larger number that you may require.

Yours truly,

THOS. SOUTHWORTH,
Director of Colonization.

THE COSMOPOLITAN

In the February Cosmopolitan the editor writes in a characteristic vein about the application to the complex life of the day of the principles enunciated in that oft-quoted book, "The Simple Life. The story of the growth and development of the city of Nome tells of its rise in the five short years from a barren strip of beach to a city of 21,000, with all the appurtenances of permanent civilization to be found in more favored localities. The Industry paper and the fiction are very bright, and altogether the number is exceptionally readable.

A GREAT SCHOOL.

An educational institution which can show an actual attendance of over 1,000 students gathered from all parts of the Dominion and whose graduates are eagerly sought for by business firms, may reasonably be termed a great school. The one business training school in Canada which enjoys this standing is the Central Business College of Toronto. The catalogue issued by this well known school is an interesting production and may be had on application to the Principal, Mr. W. H. Shaw.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

The Maid and the Mummy, a musical melange by Richard Carle and Robert Hood Bowers, met with instant favor on the part of theatregoers at the time of its production in New York at the New York Theatre, and is the one big musical success of the present season. Its presentation there was most successful for its engagement covered a period of many weeks. The delicacy of the situations and in the dialogue, the bright and catchy music and the large and well drilled chorus have won for this entertainment a host of friends. Its appearance here will be identical with that seen during its New York run, as to cast and production. The Maid and the Mummy will be presented under the management of the Carle Amusement Company at the Grand Opera House, Kingston, on Thursday, Feb. 23

A RARE TREAT.

Is in store for the people of Napanee. The ladies of the Eastern Methodist Church are singularly fortunate in having secured the services of Rev G. H. Raley, of Kit-a-mout, B.C., to deliver an address in the body of the church, on Friday evening, 24th inst. Mr. Raley holds an important and strategic point in the development of the Pacific slope. He has been at once Judge, Doctor, Postmaster and Editor of the Na-na-qua. His story is one of most thrilling recital, and is wierdly fascinating. Our citizens will do well to reserve the date. Further particulars next week.

MRS. MACE DEAD.

Friends in the city were, last night, notified, by telegram, of the sad death of Odilia A. Guest, wife of W. D. Mace, which occurred at St. Paul, Minn., yesterday. The deceased lady and her husband resided for many years at Tamworth, where the latter conducted a general mill. A short time ago they went out to Winnipeg to live and later removed to St. Paul in hope of restoring Mrs. Mace's declining health. The deceased was forty-nine years of age and was a daughter of the late Francis Guess, Kingston. One sister, Mrs. A. M. Dell, Washington, D.C.; one brother, R. S. Guess, Harrowsmith, three daughters, Mrs. A. McCurdy, Cape Breton; Mrs. J. Mack and Miss Mertie Mace, Montreal, and the husband survives to mourn her demise. PROVED IN MOUNT FOREST.

Every doctor in this town tried his best to relieve Mrs. J. Wilson of Asthma, none succeeded. For years she states, "I was a dreadful sufferer, nothing gave relief. At times I found it necessary to have all the doors and windows open to get my breath. When in despair I heard of Catarrhozone." This proves beyond doubt that any case of Asthma is curable with Catarrhozone. No remedy so pleasant, none so absolutely certain to thoroughly cure; try "Catarrhozone" yourself; it's guaranteed.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA

The Sweetness and Charity of England's Queen

Queen Alexandra, whom Dean Stanley termed "the angel in the palace," has for over forty years endeared herself to the hearts of the British people since the time, when a girl of nineteen in her quaint, little, old-fashioned poplin frock and shawl, she landed at Gravesend as the future wife of the Prince of Wales.

Her early life was passed in extreme plainness and simplicity, because of the smallness of the family income. When she was born, her father, then Prince Christian, had no hope of ever being King of Denmark, for his wife was first in the reigning king was so distant. He had nothing but his military pay and his wife's modest dowry. The life in their home, the Yellow Palace at Copenhagen, was pretentious only in name. The daughter, Alexandra Caroline Marie Charlotte Louise Julia, who became Empress of Russia, wore garments of cheap material and in the plainest style.

When Alexandra was seventeen, the Prince of Wales, while speaking to one of his friends, jestingly asked to see the portrait of his sweetheart. Inadvertently the wrong picture was handed to the Prince, and instead of the face of his friend's fiancée, he saw the likeness of "the most beautiful woman in Europe." The future king of England promptly fell in love with the portrait which led to his marriage two years later.

The simplicity of her early years has ever clung to the Queen; though in the court she has not been of it, and for society she has cared little. Her home circle has been her throne, where she has reigned with sweetness and love. Her kindness, gentleness, tact and generosity have been always at the call of need, and since she went to England has been instrumental in raising for charity over $250,000.00.

In one of King Christian's weekly letters to her, he wrote that an elderly lady-in-waiting to the late Queen of Denmark was dying, and that her one wish was to speak again to her dear "Princess Alex." At that time it was impossible for Alexandra to leave England, but a long telegram of sympathy and love and hope spoken by her into a phonograph, was sent by special courier to Copenhagen, and on arrival a short time before the aged lady's death made her last hours serenely happy.

At Sandringham she led the life of a country lady, finding her pleasure in her children, in the house, the grounds, her pets and in ministering acts of mercy. Serene, gracious and beautiful, her life has been quiet, though with a thread of sorrow running through days of seemingly golden happiness.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by W. C. Mack, at the Department of Agriculture.

NEWBURGH.

The snow storms of last week simply demoralized traffic on the line. The Bay of Quinte Ry. did the best they could under the circumstances, but it seems the unfortunate part was that some of the engines are not equal to the task on such occasions. There were no trains on Saturday until 4 p.m. when two passenger trains going north and south crossed here.

The mild weather of this week has settled the snow considerably.

Day was just breaking on Monday morning when a fatal accident occurred in Nugent's cut, just west of the village. John Jensen, a much respected resident, started for his work at Strathcona, about 5.30 a.m., and had just reached the cut when a Bay of Quinte special with a flanger, passed through the village going south. It appears that the eye witness of the tragedy was Max Hodgins, who called to Mr. Jensen, but the latter, did not hear him, and was killed near the trap which was coming at a very fast rate. In the unfortunate result of the attack will never be known, but an examination of the spot where the accident occurred, leads one to believe that Mr. Jensen stepped to the side of the track and was caught by the wings of the flanger. So soon as knowledge of the accident, and as the train'd'not stop at Newburgh, the unfortunate man was dragged to Napanee. When the train pulled into the yard Napanee the trainmen were horrified to find a human arm off, fast in the wings of the flanger, and twenty feet from the body. The authorities were notified, but as the remains were brought here by the noon train and taken to C. H. Pinkle's undertaking rooms, where they were prepared for burial. The funeral service was held in the Presbyterian church on Wednesday afternoon. The late John Jensen was a hard working man, 70 years of age, of Norwegian descent, and spent many years on his farm as a sailor upon the high seas. He was a quiet citizen respected by all and a regular attendent of the Presbyterian church. The sympathy of the entire village goes out to Mrs. Jensen in this hour of sad bereavement. Inside of nine months two brothers of Mrs. Jensen have died, two nieces and one brother-in-law and now her life companion has been called away in a very sudden and tragic manner.

CHAPTER VIII.

LOLA VELEZ was the rage for a season. She sprang into fame in a single night and thenceforth held an undisputed position as the favorite of the London public. She was not exceptionally handsome, nor was her dancing distinguished by any special grace, but about her there was something weird and original which appealed to her audience. George Brendon had been instrumental in introducing her to the public, and also gave her position as much to his kindness as to her own genius.

It was a snowy winter's night when Brendon found her. He had just entered Pembroke square, where he had lodgings, when he heard a moan. Turning aside into the shadow of a hall, he found a woman lying there exhausted with cold and hunger. Always anxious to do good, he brought the poor creature to his rooms. Under the influence of food and wine and warmth she revived sufficiently to tell her story.

Her name, she stated, was Lola Velez. She was Spanish by birth, but had lived many years in Italy. Trained as a dancer, she had appeared at several of the best theaters with more or less success, but, owing to her violent temper she had lost all chance of gaining a permanent position. She had danced her way to Paris through various small towns, but there, as elsewhere, her temper proved her ruin. Then she had crossed the channel only to find that the London market was stocked with dancers. Unable to obtain employment and having very little money, the unfortunate woman had fallen lower and lower until she was reduced to begging in the streets. Finally she was turned out of her poor lodgings and had expended her last sixpence on food. It was shortly after this that Brendon found her.

He acted the part of a good Samaritan. Giving her a sovereign, he sent her away, restored in her manner to her right mind. The next day he saw the proprietor of a music hall with whom he was acquainted and procured her an engagement.

Her success was immediate. She enacted her part with a reckless abandon and a wild frenzy which thrilled the house. For the moment Lola was not herself, but a wild Theban queen reveling in the orgies of the wine god. All London came to see the frantic revels over which Lola presided, and night after night the little music hall was filled to overflowing. Lola made good use of her fame. She insisted that her salary should be raised, took modest lodgings in Bloomsbury and for a time saved her money as a provision against old age and poverty. On the stage she was a dancing demon, but in private no one could have been more modest. There was not a breath of scandal against her, in spite of Mrs. Ward's hint to Brendon.

This change in the formerly reckless woman was caused by love and gratitude to George. He had saved her from starvation, from death; he had procured her the engagement which had led to her success; at present she. She desired him to marry her and, figuratively speaking, cast herself and all she had at his feet. Brendon found this excessive gratitude rather trying. Even then he was in love with Dorothy, whom he had met twice or thrice, and he was not disposed to accept the wild passion which Lola so freely offered to him.

Lola could not understand his coldness. She was accustomed to see men at her feet and to spurn them. Now that she was willing to surrender her liberty and to give her love, it exasperated her to think that the one man she had chosen would be the one of her. As yet she knew nothing of Brendon's love for Dorothy, but with the instinct of a jealous woman guessed that some such passion engrossed the mind of the man she desired to marry. Wearied of her persistency, Brendon stopped away, and for a few weeks Lola did not see him. Then she saw his name in the papers connected with the Amelia square tragedy and wrote to him. He accepted her invitation and came to supper, less because of her desire than because he wished to speak to her about Dorothy. The name of Lola Velez on the lips of the red man had startled Brendon almost as much as the fact that Bawdsey appeared to be acquainted with him. George could not recall

Colds. Their Proper Treatment and Cure.

Commonly, the first symptom of a "cold" is a chilly feeling, accompanied by sneezing, or a tickling in the throat. The most frequent of external causes are draughts, wet or cold feet, or going from hot rooms suddenly into cold ones. More frequently there is an inner cause—namely the stagnation of the blood caused by constipation or biliousness. Almost the first symptom is the feeling of cold in the feet and increased discharge from the nose.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. Pure, concentrated, or large portions of alcohol, iron or cod liver oil do not bring the desired changes in the blood, because they do not enter the system and are not absorbed into the blood, with the exception of the alcohol, which shrivels up the red blood corpuscles when it does come in contact with them. We commend the botanical extract of Dr. Pierce because it contains no alcohol, and offers a reasonable and scientific method of treating the blood, by improving the nutritive functions of the patient. The "Golden Medical Discovery" accomplishes this, by first restoring the diminished digestive organs, so that food, the natural tissue builder, will be digested and assimilated.

Accept no substitute for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach.

ming the man, and as he was not yet sufficiently recovered for his name to be on the lips of the public he wondered how it came about that Bawdsey knew of his existence. Anxious to know who the man was, he sent a note marked private to Miss Bull and received a reply stating that Mr. Bawdsey was a new boarder, and, so far as she knew, a gentleman who lived on his income. There remained Lola to question, and to Lola George went a night or two after the rescue of the red man. George made up his mind, and a strong mind it was, that he would not leave Lola until he knew positively how her name came to be mentioned by Bawdsey.

Having just returned from the music hall, Lola wore a loose tea gown of scarlet trimmed with glittering jet. It was a bizarre garment, but the vivid color suited her dark face and southern looks. Lola herself, short, very slender, and she moved with the dangerous grace of a pantheress. Her face was oval, sallow and thin, with ever changing expression in it. It was never two minutes the same, but her prevailing mood was one of fierce intensity. The smoldering fire in her great black eyes broke into passionate love as she swept forward to greet her visitor.

"My deliverer, my adored!" she cried in moderately good English and kissed his hand with burning lips.

George snatched it away. "Don't, Lola. You know what that sign of doing!" And so saying he threw down his coat and hat on the sofa at the far end of the room.

"There, my friend," cried Lola, when he was seated comfortably by the fire and was puffing at a cigarette, "now we must talk. Why have you not been? Oh, you wicked young boy!"

"I have been engaged," replied George.

"Engaged!" she repeated, with a flash of her wonderful eyes. "That is words for 'I don't want to come.'"

George laughed, shook his head and changed the subject. "Have you ever been in San Remo, in Italy?" he asked.

"Ah, bah! Have I been anywhere? All Italy I know—all—all."

"You know it better than Spain. Yet you are Spanish."

"I am whatever you desire, my George. Yes, I was born in Corsica, where my parents sold oil to their ruin. They came to Italy, to Milan, and made money to live from wine. I was trained to the dance. They died, and I, my friend"—

"You told me all this before," interrupted Brendon ruthlessly. "I ask if you have ever been in San Remo?"

"Why, yes, assuredly, and why not?" She looked at him with narrowing eyes as she put the question, blinking like a cat.

"There is no reason, only I was thinking"— He paused.

"Eh, you think—of what?"

"Oh, something which does not concern you, Lola."

"All that is of you is to me," she responded. "I love you."

"Lola, be reasonable."

"Pschutt! I mock myself of your reason," she cried, snapping her fingers and speaking in quite a French way. "I leave reasons to your chilly English ladies. I—eh, but you know I am of the south. To you—to you, my adored preserver, do I give myself."

George grew angry. "If you talk like this, Lola, I shall go away."

"Ah, then, good night to you. Let it be adieu and never come back."

"That's grateful," said George quietly, and she was at his feet.

"Ah, but no! I am a bad woman. I am entirely all wicked. You are an angel of the good God. Dearest—my own"— She stretched adoring hands, and her eyes glittered like gems.

George reasoned with her. "Lola, do you wish me to be pleased with you?"

"Assuredly. And why not?"

"Then sit down and talk sensibly."

She sat down, or rather flung herself into the chair, with a whirl of scarlet draperies. "Decidedly I am a Christian. I go to mass, I confess—yes, I confess to the priest how I love you."

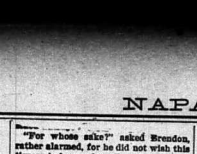
"Do you really love me, Lola? I was told that you wished me harm."

She started from her chair with a passionate gesture.

"Who says it is liars of the worst! Tell me who speak, that I may tear and scratch."

"No, no! I don't want a scandal."

"For her sakes, oh, yes!" She subsided sullenly. "I am nothings."



"My deliverer, my adored!"

mine all, and would be but for the other womans. Imbecile that—I am to think of you who kick me hard—hard. And I can learn nothing—nothing. If I did—if I knew, I"— She stopped and breathed hard.

"I wonder you don't have me watched," said George, thoroughly angry at her unreasonable attitude. Lola tossed her head and her expression changed to one of alarm. Brendon saw the change and guessed its meaning. "You did have me watched."

"And what if I did?" she demanded defiantly. "You are mine."

"I am not yours," he retorted angrily. "I have given you no cause to think that I would marry you."

Lola burst into tears. "You took me from the stones and snows," she wept with extravagant grief. "Why did I not die? You fed me with foods and made me shine in the London. You win my heart and then—then—pschutt!"—she snapped her fingers—"you toss it aside."

"Why did you have me watched?" asked George sternly.

"I want to know of the other woman," she replied sullenly.

"There is no"— He broke off. "It has nothing to do with you."

Lola sprang to her feet with fierce eyes. "Then there is another—another —oh, you cruel! Name of names, but I shall find her. I shall tell her"—

"You shall tell her nothing—you shall not see her."

"But I will. Eh, yes. You do not know me." This with a stamp.

"I know you cannot behave decently, Lola. If you have me watched again, if you dare to—to—bah!" George stamped in his turn. "I have had enough of this. Behave, or I go and will not return."

She flung herself at his feet with a wail. "Ah, but no," she sobbed, "I do love you so dearly—I will die if you love me not."

George drew himself roughly away, and taking her by the hands placed her in a chair, where she hid her face and sobbed. "Who was it you got to watch me—you hired to watch me?" George stridently used the word "hired," as he thought she might have engaged one of her friends to do the dirty work instead of engaging a professional. Yet he knew she was quite capable of going to a private detective office.

"I shall not tell you," said Lola, sitting up with a hard expression on her mouth and in her eyes.

"Did you pay him much?" asked Brendon dexterously.

"I paid him what I chose," retorted Lola, falling into the trap.

"Ah! Then it was a professional detective you engaged. You have been to one of those inquiry offices."

"That is my business," said Lola, who, seeing she had made a slip, became more obstinate than ever.

George shrugged his shoulders. He was not going to argue with her. Remembering that Bawdsey had mentioned Dorothy's name, and that Bawdsey appeared to know all about himself, he began to put two and two together. Certainly he might be wrong, and Bawdsey might have nothing to do with the matter. Still it was worth while trying to startle Lola into a confession by the use of his name. His rescue of Bawdsey hinted that the long arm of coincidence might be at work.

"I should have thought that the red man was clever enough to"— began George.

She rose to her feet with such manifest alarm that George knew his guess was correct. "You talk foolish," said she.

George looked at her angry face serenely. "Did Bawdsey when he said you wished me harm?"

"What?" She flung up her hands, with blazing eyes. "Did he say I do wish you harm? Was it—that—that cow—pig"—

"Don't call names, Lola, and don't distress yourself," said Brendon, calmly.

Lola saw that she had gone too far. She tried to recover lost ground. "I do not know his names," she said sullenly, then burst into tears. "I have no harm. Eh, will you believe that, my preserver?"

"I'll believe nothing if you will not tell me the truth," said Brendon, a little cruelly. "Come, Lola, admit that you paid Bawdsey to watch me."

"I did not pay—no, not one sou. He did it for love."

"Oh, indeed! So Bawdsey is in love with you?"

Lola threw back her head defiantly. "Oh, he is, and I care not one, two, three little fifties for him. Chut! He is old—he is red—he is one big fool, that I can twist and twist"—

"And you apparently have done so. Well, then, Lola, did you get him from a private inquiry office?"

"No, I did not so. He loved me, and see me flowers—oh, many, many flowers—those roses." She pointed to a silver dish filled with roses. He has flowers from a friend in San Remo."

Brendon sat up with an eager look in his eyes. So Bawdsey knew some one in San Remo. Brendon began to think that there was some meaning in all these things and piled Lola with questions. She was sulky at first and would not answer. But Brendon knew how to manage her, and before the conclusion of the conversation he got the whole truth out of her.

"So Bawdsey knows San Remo, and he is fifty or over fifty years of age. H'm! He knows all the history of the place, I suppose."

"I know not—nothing do I know."

"Ah, that's a pity! Bawdsey could tell you some nice tales." He fixed a keen glance on her. "About some yellow holly, for instance."

Lola winced, for the shot had gone home. But she still held to her declaration of ignorance. "I know nothings—absolutely."

"But apparently this man knows a great deal. He is in love with you and must have told you much. Did he inform you of a certain murder which took place at San Remo?"

"Ah, bah! Why should he? I know of all already."

"You! How did you know?"

"My father and my mothers, they lived in San Remo when—oh, they did tell me all of that Englishman."

"Did they know who murdered him?" asked George, marveling at this unexpected discovery.

"No. No one know anythings."

"Was there no suspicion?"

"Not one suspicions. I know nothings," she repeated doggedly.

"It strikes me that you do. How did you and Bawdsey come to be talking of this matter?"

"We did not talk." Lola looked down at her foot as she told the lie and moved it restlessly.

George rose and took up his hat. Throwing his coat over his arm, he moved toward the door. "Good night, mademoiselle."

She sprang to her feet and flew after him. "No, no!" she cried in lively alarm. "You must not go, my dearest dear!"

"What is the use of my stopping when you will not show your gratitude toward me by telling the truth?"

"I will tell! I will tell! Sit down. The coat—you shall not go. I will say all. Ah! what you will do. Sit, my little cabbage—a wise in the glass—ah, yes—and a cigarette. Come, be good. Am I mademoiselle?"

"No," said George, smiling on her pleading face. "You are my friend Lola now that you are sensible."

"Ah, only friend!" she said sadly. "But I speak. Yes?"

George began at once to question her lest the yielding mood should pass away. "You made the acquaintance of Bawdsey at the hall?"

Lola nodded. "He loved me; he sent me flowers. I learn that he looks after people, and I made him watch you. I told him your name."

"Did he know my name?" asked Brendon quickly.

"He knew everything—oh, yes—all—all!"

Brendon was taken aback. "All—all what?" he asked, amazed.

"Why"—Lola twirled her fingers—"all what you would not tell to me, my dear. That your names is Vane, Mallet"—

"Derrington! Did Bawdsey mention Lord Derrington?"

"Oh, many times he speaks of a pillor. I speaks of San Remo. This—this Bawdsey ask me of the blue domino—of the holly"—

"Of the murder, in fact."

"It is quite so, my friend. Of the murder of your father."

"What?" George started from his seat. "Did he know that the man who was murdered at San Remo was my father?"

"Yes, and that it was difficult about the marriages."

"That also. He appears to know the whole story. And he mentioned Lord Derrington. That is how he comes to be acquainted with these facts. A spy —Derrington is employing him. And the man is boarding in Amelia square." George struck his hands together. "By Jove, it's a conspiracy, and I never knew anything!"

"I do not wish you to have the marriages right, George," said Lola, with a pout. "If you are as what you are, then you will marry me. She will not be mistakes."

"Did Bawdsey tell you the name of the lady?"

"No. But he will tell. But she is a well born one, and I am of the gutter. But I love you—oh, yes, I love you. She threw her arms round him. "Be still Brendons, and not milor, and I am yours."

"No, no!" George took her arms from his neck and spoke more soberly. "Lola, hold your tongue about what you have told me, and I'll see you again. If you speak, I see you no more."

"I will be silent," she said as Brendon put on his coat. "But you are cruel, wicked. You shall never be milor, never!"

CHAPTER IX.

AN invitation—an invitation to dinner. By Jove, I never thought I'd get that far. The Honorable Mrs. Ward too. Hurrah!"

Leonard Train made these remarks over a letter which had come by the morning post. It was a delicate perfumed friendly note, begging dear Mr. Train to come to dinner the next evening without ceremony. "I have just learned that your dear mother was at school with me," wrote Mrs. Ward in her most gushing style. "So you will see why I am so interested in you."

To account for Train's exuberant joy, which seemed out of all proportion to its reason, it must be explained that, notwithstanding his money which might be regarded as his talents, he had never managed to enter the fashionable world. He was a man of the world, a cock and anxious to shine and so admired among people worth knowing, this was a great grief to him. George had also been very anxious for Leonard did not seem to be a success, for after one visit he was never asked again, although he left cards assiduously. The desire of his life was to be fashionable; hence his delight at the letter.

"Of course I'll go," soliloquized Leonard when calmer. "I wonder if George will be there. He loves that Ward girl, so he might. Mrs. Ward does not appear at the match, so he might not. I wonder if there is a regular engagement. If not I might have a shot myself. The Honorable Mrs. Train—no, that would be like mother."

It will be seen that Leonard was not very faithful to his absent friend, but the fact is that Train was less devoted to Brendon than he might have been. The episode of Amelia square made him fight rather shy of George. The story of the marriage was known, and in some way—Leonard couldn't exactly explain how—seemed to be connected with the murder of Mrs. Jersey. Moreover, Leonard thought he had kept his part mentioned to Brendon and would not have mentioned for the fashionable world. However, he had said nothing about George's attitude and so far had kept faith. But Brendon saw that Leonard was no longer so pleased to see him as formerly. He therefore avoided the fat young man, and Leonard did not seem to mind the avoidance.

Leonard never intended to speak, being weak, but honorable in his own foolish way. But when Mrs. Ward's invitation came he walked blindfolded into a trap laid by that clever little woman. She asked Train to dinner, not because she had known his mother —although that was true enough—but for the simple reason that she wished to hear what he knew about the Amelia square tragedy. Brendon had told her much, but it was probable that Train, being a weak idiot in the hands of a pretty woman like herself, would tell her more. Mrs. Ward wished to find some scandal smirching George, that she might induce Dorothy to break the engagement. She would have utilized the tales about Lola and Brendon, but she was not sure of her ground in this particular direction, and, moreover, having seen the Spanish dancer, feared lest so passionate a woman might make her own scandal. It was the aim of Mrs. Ward's life to do wrong things and to avoid troubles arising from them. Therefore she, for the time being, made Lola the dupe and arranged in her own scheming mind to make use of Leonard.

When Leonard entered the drawing room he was somewhat surprised to see who told him that Mrs. Ward would be down shortly. "It is only a small dinner, Mr. Train," she said. "Mr. Vane is coming; no one else."

"I expected to find my friend Brendon here," said Leonard, thinking how beautiful she was.

"No. Mr. Brendon is very busy at the present time with his book. I would have come otherwise."

"Oh, by the way, I give way where a lady is concerned," said Train gallantly.

Mrs. Ward laughed. She had heard much of Train from Brendon and thought him a kindly but foolish young man. "I am not a woman of that sort, Mr. Train," she said, before that a man should neglect his work for frivolity. You are a great friend of Mr. Brendon?"

"The greatest in the world."

"And he was stopping with you in the house where that tragedy took place. He told me about it."

Train secretly wished that George had held his tongue on this particular point, as he had his own reasons

STARTLING BUT TRUE.

How she can tick! So Mr. Brendon is in—wish we had thought of bringing it of him; but these quiet men are always the worst."

So Mrs. Ward rattled on in her intoxicated manner, but perfectly clear in her own mind as to the good Vane's injudicious observation would do. If Dorothy once got it into her brain that George was an admirer of Lola, there would be a chance of breaking for not wishing to be questioned. With the very best intentions as to holding his tongue, he knew his weakness for babbling well enough and found it easier to abstain from talking altogether than to be temperate in speech. "Brendon certainly stopped with me," he said reservedly, "but we were sound asleep when the murder took place. Neither of us heard anything. After the inquest we both returned to the west end."

"It was a most unpleasant experience," said Dorothy thoughtfully.

"Very," assented Train, wiping his face. "I shall never go in search of types again."

"You can find amusing types in the west end," remarked Dorothy in a low voice. "Here is one."

The young man who entered the room was a small, attenuated, precise sort of a creature. Immaculately dressed and with a rather shrill voice. He answered to the name of the Hon. Walter Vane and was the cousin of Brendon, although he did not know of the relationship. But Dorothy and Train both knew and compared Vane's physique disadvantageously with that of Brendon.

Lord Derrington, who was a bluff old giant of the country squire type, sneered at his degenerate descendant. All the same he would not replace him by George, who was a man in looks and tastes after the old lord's own heart.

"Mr. Train—Mr. Vane," said Dorothy, introducing the two.

Vane stared again, and it was Dorothy who answered. "My mother wants to see her and says she is a most extraordinary dancer."

"I saw your friend Brendon at the ball, Miss Ward—the writing man, you know," said Vane; "a fine looking chap, but sulky."

"The best man in the world," said Leonard, whereupon Dorothy gave him an approving look. She wondered how much he had told to Brendon and how much he criticised so freely. "I was his cousin and the legitimate heir to the Derrington title."

"Mr. Vane!" cried Dorothy, the blood rushing to her face.

"Well, good people," cried Mrs. Ward, entering the room at this very inopportune moment, "are you all here? Mr. Vane, I am pleased. Mr. Train, how good of you to come! Ah," Mrs. Ward sighed, "you have your dear mother's eyes, and lovely eyes they were!"

Having slipped in this compliment to put Leonard at his ease and throw him off his guard, Mrs. Ward delivered him to Dorothy and took Vane into a shady corner. "Dinner will be ready soon," she said, fanning herself, although it was a cold winter's night. "I hope you are hungry, Mr. Vane."

"I was," admitted her guest, "but I have to nurse my appetite carefully, you know, Mrs. Ward, and I am rather put out."

"Not by Mr. Train, I hope. He is a nice fellow, really very nice, with money made out of pigs or whisky or something," said Mrs. Ward vaguely, for she was not certain. "What did he say?"

"He said nothing, but Miss Ward did."

Mrs. Ward shrugged. "Oh, well, you know, Dorothy has such odd ideas and all that sort of thing. I suppose it was something about books, or philosophies, or grammar, or something—enough to spoil any one's appetite, I'm sure."

"No. But I mentioned that Brendon was in the house writing his book."

"Yes, I know," said Mrs. Ward viciously and at once on the alert.

"Well, I said that it was rumored he was sweet on Lola Velez, and Miss Ward fired up. Is she so great a friend of his as all that?"

"Oh, by no means," responded Mrs. Ward vivaciously. "A mere acquaintance, you know. I'm sure he's dull enough. Lola Velez—oh, a perfect dear!

the engagement. Before Vane could make any more remarks the gong thundered. "You take in Dorothy," she said to Vane, thus getting him off her shoulders, but not hoping to find Leonard a pleasant change. "I will take Mr. Train under my wing."

In this order they entered the dining room, Mrs. Ward trying to stifle a yawn and wondering how she would get through such a dull evening. Luckily, Vane mentioned that his grandfather had expressed his intention of looking in during the course of the evening. "If you will not mind, Mrs. Ward," he said politely.

"Oh, I'm rather glad," replied the little woman. "Such a delightful old gentleman! His anecdotes are quite in the best style. Do try this dish, Mr. Train. It is good."

Leonard did try it and did full justice to the merits of Mrs. Ward's cook. She kept a particularly good chef, as she knew the value of good cooking. "People like nice things to eat," she explained to Leonard, while Dorothy listened to entertain Vane. "One can break all the Ten Commandments if only one feeds the men." Then, thinking she had said too much, she added severely, "But of course, I am only joking, Mr. Train, as one must be good and all that sort of thing."

"I'm sure you are all that is good and kind, Mrs. Ward."

"Now, that's really very nice of you, Mr. Brendon would never say a really nice thing like that. Of course he's a great friend of yours, isn't he? And he stopped with you when that poor woman"—

Leonard uttered an ejaculation. It seemed to him that he was pursued by the Amelia square tragedy. First Dorothy and now her mother. Was there no other topic of conversation? He would have answered an ordinary person rudely, being wearied of being questioned, but Mrs. Ward, having the key of the door which led into the fashionable world, was to be conciliated. He replied to her almost in the same words as he had used to Dorothy. "Mr. Brendon did stop with me," he said, "but we were asleep when the murder took place."

"How instrumental!" said Mrs. Ward languidly, yet with a keen eye on the change in Leonard's face. "I wonder who killed her?"

"No one knows," replied Train shortly. "The police are quite at fault."

"Oh, the police!" said Mrs. Ward, in a proper tone of contempt. "They never do anything except make love to cooks. Do you suspect any one?"

Leonard flushed. "I, Mrs. Ward? Why should I suspect any one?"

"Oh, I don't know. You have a clever face. Just the kind of a face that one would think a brilliant detective would have. You must have some suspicions?" Again her eyes searched his face.

"No," he protested. "I was asleep. I know nothing about the matter."

"How stupid of you!" said Mrs. Ward, beginning to think that her condescension in asking Leonard to dinner was wasted. "But you men are always so blind, poor dears! Did Mrs. Jersey and Mr. Brendon get on well together? I suppose Mrs. Jersey liked him?"

"I think she did," replied Leonard, on whose weak head the claret was beginning to take effect, "but she was rather startled when I saw her first. It wasn't at him exactly, but at a piece of yellow holly he wore in his coat."

"Yellow holly," repeated Mrs. Ward, with feigned surprise. "Why, of course Mr. Brendon wore a sprig. My daughter gave it to him."

"So he told me, Mrs. Ward."

"And I gave it to Dorothy," continued Mrs. Ward, who for some reason wished to make an explicit statement, "by the very rare, you know, and a man who lives in the Amelia square sent me a bunch. Dorothy mentioned that Mr. Brendon had begged for a piece. Yes, he would admire it, of course. But that night, as he had just left my house. But why was this unfortunate woman surprised?"

"I can't say, but she was," answered Train. "She turned white, and we all thought she was about to faint."

"Did she give any explanation?"

"No. In a few moments she recovered, and nothing more was said."

To be continued.

KILLED BY SOMNAMBULIST.

London, Feb. 14.—Two sisters, aged eleven and eighteen, have been killed by their uncle during a fit of somnambulism in Upper Burmah, telegraphs the Rangoon correspondent of the Express.

Mong so Bon, the uncle, who is a Burmese living at Kabyubin, is under arrest, and has related a strange dream to the police to account for his strange act.

He dreamt, he said, that he was about to ascend a throne in an unknown land, when he was prevented by being stopped him, declaring that he was an impostor. Therefore he seized his dah, or sword, and furiously attacked his nieces, who were sleeping on mats close by, in such a manner that they died shortly afterwards.

When he woke he went to the police and weeping bitterly, told them that he had done a terrible deed that it was an act of vengeance by the spirit of the fields because he had that day neglected the old-fashioned custom of offering it food at dinner.

STRATHCONA.

A shocking accident occurred Monday morning last, when J. Jensen, coming to his employment from Newburgh to this place, was overtaken by a train and killed. Whether the unfortunate man did not hear the engine or whether he stepped aside to allow them to pass and was then run under the train, no one knows. At any rate the body caught on the snow plough and was carried for a mile before it was discovered. Deceased was a Norwegian, but had been in this vicinity since the building of the B. of Q. Ry. He was about sixty years of age, and was an industrious quiet man. A wife is left to mourn.

On Monday afternoon the barns on the farm of Mr Jas. Kenny, Newburgh, commonly known as the "Red Buildings," were totally destroyed by fire. James McGuire and Percy Pybus, of this village, driving by, saw the fire and succeeded in getting the cattle out, 8; in number. The horses were in

MR. AYLESWORTH'S POSITION.

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—The prime minister intimated, to-day, that A. B. Aylesworth, K.C., may soon become a member of the cabinet. The matter was brought up by Mr. Borden, who enquired what cabinet changes had occurred since the session of 1904. In reply Sir Wilfred Laurier said that with the concurrence of his colleagues and the consent of the governor-general, he had approached Mr. Aylesworth and requested him to become a member of the cabinet without portfolio. Mr. Aylesworth accepted, but up to the time of the election he had not an opportunity of being sworn in. After the election, in which Mr. Aylesworth was a candidate for Durham and was defeated, the prime minister asked him to be sworn in, but at the time declined, and is not now a member of the government. It is hoped, as mentioned above, that he will join the cabinet.

THORPE.

The order of the day is snow and if we take good care of it it will last until July.

Miss Mabel Peters, of Sandhurst, was the guest of Pansy Peters, Thorpe, for a few weeks.

A strange thing occurred at Thorpe last Friday. While Chester Peters was out around the barn a large bird flew over his head and was taken for a hawk. He went to the house for his gun to shoot it and broke its wing. When he picked it up he found that it was a water fowl for it had web feet. It measured from tip to tip of wing five feet, and is alive and eats well at time of writing. All that have called to see it do not know what kind of a bird it is, except Mr. Thomas Caton, who thinks it is a canvas back duck.

We are very sorry to hear that Mabel Peters is going to Syracuse. She will be very much missed on this street. Her many friends wish her a safe trip.

Mr. Salters Peters, of Winnipeg, Man., is home visiting his father, and his sisters and brothers for a few days.

Harry Peters has been confined to the house for a few days with sore throat.

We only received mail at Thorpe once last week.

HIS COUNTRY'S FATHER

REV. DR. TALMAGE'S ANNUAL SERMON ON GEORGE WASHINGTON.

NAME'S FADELESS LUSTER

Traces His Achievements to a Higher Source—Never Failed to Acknowledge That It Was By the Help of God That He Won His Victories—Heavenly Coherts Fought in His Behalf—How He Overcame.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1903, by Frederick Tarner, at Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 19.—The preacher takes occasion, in view of the approaching celebration of Washington's birthday, to remind the nation of its indebtedness to God throughout its history for the same care and protection that he vouchsafed to his people at a crisis of their national affairs. The text is Joshua x., 12: "Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon, and thou, moon, in the valley of Ajalon."

I choose to-day this story of Joshua as a topic for our thoughts because it emphasizes with Oriental imagery the great lesson of Washington's career. The materialist who would exclude God from his universe is met here in ancient and modern history with the sublime truth that the Divine sympathy is on the side of righteousness and that God is able by his infinite power to give the victory to the weak who trust in him.

One reason given for the non-interference of God in human affairs is that man is an infinitesimal. Though man as a finite cannot drop a fathom line long enough to sound the bottom of God's deep seas of mysteries, that does not prove that these "Divine mysteries" are not true. Because many of the leading scientific men of Europe scouted the practicality of George Stephenson's invention, that did not make the iron tracks on which was harnessed the locomotive any less strong. Because for years and years Cyrus Field's attempts to connect the old world to the new with the wedding ring of an Atlantic cable was the butt and ridicule of thousands of unbelieving tongues, that did not make the possibility of sending a message under the seas less an attainable fact. Because we cannot explain to the satisfaction of the skeptic the miracle of the sun standing still, shall we abandon our faith in God's providence? Shall we not rather remind them that in our own national history his interference on behalf of the weak was displayed in less conspicuously and no less effectively?

God has omnipotent power over the forces of the material, the scientific, the atmospheric and the angelic as well as the astronomical—and time and again he has compelled them to bend the knee for the aid of man. In this sermon I am going to show you that, though man may seem to be insignificant, yet he is not so in reality. Man is so important in God's eyes that God is ready to do everything possible in his interest and for his salvation. He has not shrunk from the sacrifice of his only begotten Son, who is yet to become Kings of kings and Lord of all.

Let us first see how God has exalted man's throne above the stars. Let us study from the astronomical telescope how man, instead of being a mere nondescript, a being unthought of, an unrecognizable, a forgotten pigmy in an unknown world, wriggling out upon the outskirts of the universe, is more important than all material worlds and more important than any other creature in ing this side of the New Jerusalem. Let us enter the throne room of the heavens and see how in the past, for man's good, the stars have wheeled into line and obeyed God's behests, even as a torchlight procession might march past the reviewing stand of a King or a President.

Let us make men ashamed on the outskirts of the universe? If he is, how can you account for the order of the creation? As a bridegroom prepares a home for his bride God prepared this world for the habitation of man. He made the sun and the moon, the one to light the day and the other to guard the night. He spoke, and the dry land appeared. He swung out into the heavens the myriad of stars. He upholstered the sky with curtains of blue. He carpeted the fields with grass. He made the hillsides great woodland temples. Then God made the songsters to sing. After God had created the heavens and the earth and all that are in them he said: "Let us make now our masterpiece. Let us make him after our own image." "So God created man in His own image." He crowned him with honor and glory and made him the high dominion over the works of his hands, of which the moon and the stars were only the works of God's fingers. Thus we find that all the way through the one home created for the great climax of all earthly creations, the advent of man. Is it incredible that, in order to work out His purpose for the human race, God should use these lower creations at His will.

If man is not more important than the stars, how can you account for the fact that of Jesus Christ came to this world to die for man? There are billions upon billions of worlds. There are worlds above worlds. There are constellations upon constellations. These worlds are born; these worlds die. Every night the telescopic eye of the astronomer can see their funeral pyres burning. Yet it was not to reanimate perishing worlds that Jesus died. It was to redeem immortal man that Jesus left heaven and suffered upon the cross. Our earth is but a speck in the universe, one of the smallest of the millions of worlds that are visible in the winter's sky, yet it was for the redemption of the inhabitants of that planet that Jesus gave himself to suffer and die. Does not this prove the importance of man? If a man is not more important than a star, how does it you account for the fact that weeks, perhaps months, before Jesus was born in the manger at Bethlehem God sent a stellar messenger to guide the wise men from the east? Would a star step out of its course and with finger of light become a guide to man? Does not this prove that a star was a messenger to man at the first Christmas morn prove to you that God has enrolled many astronomical hosts mighty forces which if necessary, are ready to serve us and our interests? Does not the star of the east" was able to slip its chains and run down the boulevards of the heavens we know not. Some of the astronomers declare the "star of the east" was not a single star at all, but in order to lead those wise men God wheeled into line two, three, perhaps fifty, a thousand, stars and caused all their lights to rest on one stary crib. But, whether the star in the east was a single star or twenty or a hundred, it was God's star, we know—"God made the heavens, with their constellations, and they are at his command; they are his servants, and they do his will."

But we are not compelled to put our world in harmony with those millions and billions of miles away to find some of the mighty forces God is able and willing to employ for man's life and service, for man's safety temporal and safety spiritual. We can hear God speaking to man in the voice of the storm. We can see Him smiling in laughing eyed sunbeams. Furthermore, we may learn that this voice and this smile in answer to believing prayer will come for man's blessing. If we will trust Him for an atmospheric blessing. When one of the Princes of the Persian empire said Dr. Alexander, "Professor, do you ever lose your faith in God?" he replied, "Never, except when the wind is from the east."

God's power extends to all meteorological phenomena. In the Bible we have wonders of the storm been reduced to a system. The weather bureau's prognostications rarely ever fail. As with Washington, as with Joshua, as with Moses, God's hand is outstretched to the assistance of his people. What incident in history is so astonishing as that of the passage of the Red Sea? The children of Israel, fleeing from Egyptian enslavement, were caught in a trap. In front of them was the sea. Behind the earth was shaken with the revolving chariot wheels and the thundering cavalry hoofs of the pursuing soldiers of Pharaoh. What happened? Moses said: "Fear not, my children; fear not. God will save us." Moses then stretched out his hand over the sea, and the Lord caused the sea to go back by "a strong east wind." In other words, in answer to Moses' prayer God sent a strong east wind, which blew back the waters so that the Israelites might flee away from their masters. And to show what the power of this east wind was Major-General Tulloch of the British army a few years ago before the London Geographical Society read a paper in which he declared that he stood a few years ago where the Israelites were supposed to have crossed. One night he felt a strong east wind blow. It blew so hard that in one night it blew back the waters and left the ships which were once riding at anchor stranded on dry land. God answered Moses' prayer.

God exercises the same control over His animate creation that He has over the winds, and with this, He operates for the benefit of His people. After the children of Israel had been for months fed upon the manna in the wilderness they began to crave meat. They cried unto Moses: "Give us flesh! Oh, that we us flesh!" What happened? The Bible says: "There went forth a wind from the Lord and brought quails from the sea and let them fall by the camp . . . as it were two cubits high upon the face of the earth." This does not mean, as Mr. Hastings declares, that the Lord by an east wind piled up the quails about the Israelite camp two cubits high. But it does mean that the east wind blew the quails, speaking for His will, straight toward the Israelites. The wind was so powerful that the birds, flying low, could not rise on the wing, had to fly low on account of the tornado. And as they flew low the Moses killed them. God answered the prayer of Moses. He answered it in the shrieking of winds.

But why go back in Biblical history to find how God has aided his children in the voice of the winds? What about the Spanish Armada under the "golden duke," Admiral Sidonia, with its 129 ships, defeated from invading British harbors not by the English navy, but by the storm god who swept the English channel in 1588? What about the storm which prevented Napoleon attacking Wellington at Waterloo in the early morning and which delay was a great factor in the defeat of the French? What about the dense and impenetrable fog which settled in New York Harbor in the night and saved Washington and his troops escaped from Long Island and which lifted in the morning, allowing boats to row to safety under the very guns of the British fleet which would have annihilated them? What about the frost which came in answer to America's prayer just at the right time after a thaw which destroyed the locusts by the millions a few years ago in our western states, where they were destroying the crops and threatened them with destruction?

And those frosts the voice of God in answer to prayer commanded the old of his children? I tell you we have to realize that there are atmospheric answers to prayer as well as astronomical answers to prayer. God speaks to us in times of drought when we pray as he answered Elijah's prayer of old when Ahab fled to Jezreel to escape the deluge: "Hath not the rain a thousand" God's rescuing voice is heard in the growl of the storm; God's smile is seen in the incubating sunshine, and if it is best for us God's storm and God's sunshine are seen and felt in answer to our believing prayers.

But I find the mighty forces not only astronomical and atmospheric but also socialistic, subserving God's children. I use the word socialistic not in its narrow sense. I allude to it in its broad sense of man's relationship to man. In the triumphs and defeats of nations, in the supremacy and the overthrow of thrones, I find that the great onward movements of the world have been employed for the rescue and salvation of God's peoples for all time.

What is the meaning of that verse Galatians iv, 4, "When the fullness of time was come, God sent forth his son, made of a woman, under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons?" Was not one time in the sight of God just as favorable as any other time? Oh, no. There were certain prophetic conditions which had to be fulfilled. Not the least of these was that Jesus had to be born in Bethlehem of Judaea. How was this to be accomplished? After the whole civilized world was brought under the domain of the Roman empire by the prowess of Caesar to order that a Jewish census be taken. What was the result? In order to obey that command, Joseph, the carpenter, who was married to Mary, had to take a trip to Bethlehem. He was one of the descendants of David, and all his family had to be counted in the village where the royal shepherd boy once lived. Thus through Joseph, through Caesar, through a foreign command, Jesus was born where prophecy said Christ should be born. It is folly for you and I to say, "God might have fulfilled prophecy in a different way." He might. But God's way was a true way. And in order to accomplish that way Caesar must conquer and Rome must rule.

Can we not in the same way see the finger of God in the discovery of America, in the birth of our constitution, in the awful tragedy of the Civil War, in the strange acquisitions of Porto Rico and of the Sandwich and Philippine Islands? Can we not feel that the booming guns at Port Arthur and the success of one political party over another are the voice of God heard in the same voice that Paul spake when he said that God is working out his plans through the movements of the nations? Because with our nearsighted vision we cannot see the end from the beginning that does not lessen the privilege of God's movements for the salvation of nations.

Man's throne is higher than the stars. Man's life is more precious, more lower than the angels. Yes. But on account of Jesus' sacrifice for us God has entered into a covenant of security in the awful struggle against sin and temptation and in the battle for the world's redemption. He has sworn them, not here one and there one. "The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of angels." The Lord is among them as in Sinai, as in the holy place." These angels are everywhere, willing to minister unto us and care for us.

Mighty angels for our protection! Oh, my brother, in the struggle of life can you afford to be downhearted and slothful? Have I not said enough to encourage you to do anything and everything in God's name? When the King of Syria sent his horsemen and charioteers to capture Elisha the prophet's servant was more afraid. Elisha was not. Why? He saw reenforcements the frightened eyes of his servants could not see. At last the prophet cried to his servant: "Look, man; look! Look at the reenforcements God is sending to us to fight against these men of flesh and blood." Then the young man looked. This is the account of the Bible: "And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man, and he saw, and, behold, the mountains were full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha." They were angelic hosts. Those angels are about you to-day. They are messengers sent from God for your protection and triumph. Will you not take courage? Before your reviewing stand march the nations, while at your left and right, before and behind, stand your protecting angels. Astronomical, atmospheric, socialistic and angelic forces are now ready to fight for your eternal welfare.

Thus when I began the study of the tragic events of Joshua's life I did not think there was very much in old Joshua by the strength of his own arm had won the battles they would have been wonderful, but the victories were not won alone by the arm of the Lord Almighty, who said to the new leader: "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life; as I was with Moses so I will be with thee." When I see the British's prayer of old when Ahab fled to Jezreel to escape the deluge: "Hath not the rain a thousand" God's rescuing voice is heard in the growl of the storm; God's smile is seen in the incubating sunshine, and if it is best for us God's storm and God's sunshine are seen and felt in answer to our believing prayers.

ST. VITUS DANCE.

Nervous Trouble That Yields Readily to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

St. Vitus Dance is a common disease with children, but it often attacks both men and women of nervous temperament. The symptoms are sleeplessness, jerky arms, trembling legs, twitching muscles; sometimes the power of speech is affected. The only relief lies in plenty of blood because good blood is the life-blood of the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills never fail to cure St. Vitus Dance, because they make the rich, red blood that feeds the nerves and keeps them strong and steady. Mrs. Wm. Leveille, Welland, Ont., was seriously afflicted with St. Vitus dance, and no treatment helped her until she began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. Leveille says,—"At times the trouble was so severe that I could not take a drink of water unaided, and could not trust myself to raise a dish. There was a constant involuntary motion of the limbs, and at times I could neither eat, walk nor talk. I grew pale and emaciated, and my life was fairly a burden. Doctors' treatment, which was taking almost continuously, did not do me a particle of good and my health and strength were fast failing. I had almost come to the conclusion that there was no cure for me. I was in what might be considered a desperate condition when I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I procured a few boxes after I had begun their use, there was a marked improvement in my condition, by the time I had taken nine boxes every symptom of the trouble had disappeared, and I was healthy and active as in girlhood."

It is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills go right down to the root of the trouble in the blood that they cure such diseases as St. Vitus dance, neuralgia, rheumatism, anaemia, backaches and headaches, rheumatism, kidney trouble, indigestion, and all nervous troubles and other diseases of the blood and nerves. MEN'S DRESS CLOTHES.

How the Change From Colored Garments to Black Was Effected.

It puzzles us often, too, to know how it is that the many different occasions black is considered to be the most fashionable shade for our masculine attire and not merely fashionable but the correct color, for which in our society there is no alternative. It may be argued, as it is with the silk hat, that it is so severely respectable that we feel ourselves ourselves to the idea the same might be said of white, which would have the advantage of being much less gloomy. Clear white, in the old fashion, and as for its application to evening dress, in which it is most of all de rigueur now, while there would be from our unconscious might tastefully dress themselves in almost all the colors of the rainbow for the evening, the adoption of black must have come about through a paragraph in a celebrated novel, and it is the latter we have to thank for the fact that we are not now permitted to wear our best lines and most solemn garments at the time when we feel, to say the least, more satisfied with all about us and the world in general than at any other period of the day. Bulwer Lytton's novel, "Pelham," was the culprit, and it is a letter in this book purporting to have been written by Lady Frances Pelham to her son that set the fashion. Lady Frances writes: "Apropos of the complexion, I did not like that blue coat you wore when I last saw you. You look best in black, which is a great compliment, for people must be very distinguished in appearance to do so." The man of the day read these lines and weighed them carefully, and what more natural than that he should straightway come to the conclusion that black was the one shade which for evening wear suited him perfectly? As soon as he could be discarded all his colors and took to it, every man of, him.

THE FARMER'S ICE HOUSE.

By Prof. J. B. Reynolds.

The season of the year has arrived when the ice house may be filled. There is no reason why most farm houses may not have a continuous supply of ice throughout the summer. Where a stream or sheet of water is within reach, the cost is but trifling.

An ice house can be constructed very cheaply after the following fashion:—Large posts six or eight inches in diameter may be sunk into the ground to support the frame work forming the walls. For a small ice house two or at the most, three posts on each side would be sufficient. Inside the posts two inch planks may be nailed on, the posts and the plank completing the wall of the storage. A door may be constructed of short pieces of plank kept in place on the inside by the ice itself and on the outside by the posts. As the ice is used the boards closing the doorway may be taken down one after the other. The roof may be made after any fashion to suit the builder. The cheapest roof shingled would prove to be as cheap and satisfactory as any.

In the filling of the ice house the floor should be covered with a foot of straw, and the walls for a distance of two feet should be lined with straw. The ice should be cut in blocks of uniform size, and packed in the house with as little space between the blocks as possible. Each layer of ice should be covered with straw, and the walls should be filled in solidly with straw. The roof should be made tight to prevent the entrance of rain or snow, which would materially detract from the purposes of the house. The material required to construct this building would be only trifling in cost, and a few trips to the nearest wood or creek would bring enough ice to fill the house.

It is best to fill the ice house after cold weather, when the ice is most likely to be sound and solid. When filled remember to see that no air spaces, which will not last nearly as long as solid ice.

AN OLD-FASHIONED BEAR STORY

The frontiersman of our day, the hardy settler of the Canadian Northwest, is realized in bear drawn in a rattling good bear-story by Frederick E. Scotford in the March McClure's. This new author does not belong to that school of nature writers who clothe the brutes of the forest with human attributes. "Thora Tom" is a ranger-bear learned in traps and the ways of men. There is no glamor thrown over his bear nature. He remains as diabolically wicked as only a ranger-bear can be, and the reader, when Molly has suffered from his claws, burns to join her young husband in the chase. We breathe our relief when during Molly Tom's in the root-cellar, and it is a real satisfaction to know that when David cometh in from the woods the terror of the wilderness farm will meet a well-deserved fate.

CANADA'S ATTITUDE TO THE U. S.

Mr. W. S. Harwood has an article in "The World's Work," in which he interviews three hundred of the leading men of our Dominion as to our attitude towards the United States. The following is the question set, and following it we give the reply of our representative in the Dominion Parliament, Mr. Uriah Wilson:

"If Canada could be merged into the United States with no loss of self-respect, and with no friction with England; becoming a section of the United States, as the eastern, southern, or Pacific Coast States, but completely merged, so that all residents of the continent above the Mexican line should meet upon a plane of absolute equality as citizens of one country, and go forward to the building up of the continent—under these conditions, would you be in favor of this complete uniting of the two nations?

MR. WILSON'S REPLY.

"I am utterly opposed to this merger because:

"1. Canada's boundaries are as extensive as those of the United States, and her territory larger.

"2. We have as vast and varied resources in our country as the people of the United States have, and I believe that the next few years will see an advance in the development of the resources of our country beyond the dreams or expectations of ordinary mortals.

"3. Our political institutions are on a better foundation than those of the United States, and more surely guarantee the rights and liberties of the subject, and are freer from corruption, and the possibilities for corruption, than those in the United States. And our system of government, is worked out so as to give full effect to the principles of responsible government. I believe, further, that our judiciary is, on the whole, better than theirs.

"4. No matter what terms may be agreed upon for the absorption of Canada by the United States, the Americans could not help showing their national vice of believing that they are 'the' people, and the Canadians would resent this strenuously.

"5. Our educational system is as good as that of the United States, if not better.

"6. Our national character is as healthy as that in the United States, if not healthier, and we know we are building up a sturdy race.

"7. We have bigger institutions, financial, industrial, governmental, educational, and of other kinds, than the citizens of the United States are generally aware of, and these are making for self-reliance.

"8. I do not consider that there would be a sufficient increase in certain businesses, as a result of the merger, to offset the losses to our manufacturers.

"9. I am Canadian born, and the Union Jack appeals to my sentiment more strongly than the Stars and Stripes could ever do; and, no matter what inducements might be offered, nothing could make me feel my citizenship under a new flag so much as I feel it under the Union Jack. Canada and all British dominions have flourished, and their institutions have been strengthened and broadened under the British flag, and now that we are upon the wave of expansion we feel content to live under it still, with all the memories of its glorious traditions."

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Mad Your Friends and Neighbors Well.

Mrs. Geo. B. Griswold, Nanaimo, B. C., writing specially for women says, "The grand success of Paine's Celery Compound in my case, leads me to believe that it has no equal in the world for curing this class of troubles. For three years, female troubles, dyspepsia and nervousness made me a shadow of my former self. I was treated by competent doctors, and took a sea trip that lasted six weeks, but I came home from it as sick as ever. After reading one of your books on Paine's Celery Compound, I bought a supply and used it faithfully. Three bottles were sufficient to convince me that I had found a friend and helper. Six bottles, thank God, banished all my complaints and made me a new woman. I am anxious that every suffering woman should know what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me."

Patient—That's all right, doctor. There wasn't a soul in the house that knew how to spell rheumatism.

Cindy—Gloomy! Should think I was. You know Sandy Macintosh, who ran away with Mary Wild? Well, he's sent me a bill for her board.

The Younger, ending the argument But when he's grown and done, married is the happier state.

The Elder, gloomily—Maybe—when all's said and done; but there's not much to say and it's so long being done.

AR HIE WINTERS,
Clerk Pro Tem.

POOR BUT HONEST.

Saturday Night.

Upon one of his Western tours Bishop Potter spent a few days at the home of a prominent churchman. The host's wife took particular pains in making the bishop's room worthy of the guest, and among other things intended for his comfort put a fine silver toilet set on the bureau. The bishop, however, preferred his own, and transferred the set provided to a bureau drawer. The consequence was that when the hostess went to the bishop's room after his departure, the silver set was missing. She worried for several days, then finally summoned courage to write a very apologetic letter to the bishop, asking if by any chance he had found any of the articles among his luggage. There was an immediate and characteristic reply. The telegram read as follows: "Poor but honest. Look in the washstand drawer."

We Will Buy

A 50c. Bottle of Liquozone and Give it to You to Try.

We want you to know about Liquozone, and the product itself can tell you more than we. So we ask you to let us buy you a bottle on a full-size bottle—to try. Let it prove that it does what medicine cannot do. See what a tonic it is. Learn that it does kill germs. Then you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do.

This offer itself should convince you that Liquozone does as we claim. We would certainly not buy a bottle and give it to you if there was any doubt or results. You want those results; you want to be well and to keep well. And you can't do that—nobody can—without Liquozone.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving, in thousands of different cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a Liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you.

Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

We Will Buy

A 50c. Bottle of Liquozone and Give it to You to Try.

We want you to know about Liquozone, and the product itself can tell you more than we. So we ask you to let us buy you a bottle—a full-size bottle—to try. Let it prove that it does what medicine cannot do. See what a tonic it is. Learn that it does kill germs. Then you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do.

This offer itself should convince you that Liquozone does as we claim. We would certainly not buy a bottle and give it to you if there was any doubt of results. You want those results; you want to be well and to keep well. And you can't do that—nobody can—without Liquozone.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving, in thousands of different cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a Liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you.

Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

At a meeting of the Board of Health a deputation was present to represent the inconvenience and annoyance that residents in the neighborhood of the town dairies suffered by reason of the large number of cows kept and driven through the streets twice a day. "Moved by Dr. Stratton, and seconded by Mr. Cliff that the Medical Health Officer be instructed to notify all parties keeping cows within the corporation limits that they shall hereafter comply with the provisions of the Public Health Act as embodied in schedule B, clause 10.

The Medical Health Officer will receive applications from parties desirous of keeping cows up to March 1st, and these applications will be considered and permits granted to those prepared to comply with regulations at the March meeting of the Board. All places where cows or horses are kept will be subject to inspection.

A motion by Councillors Graham and Normile was passed, "that this council apply to the Legislature of Ontario for a special act allowing the Corporation of the Town of Napanee to establish a municipal electric light plant for lighting the streets and for service to private consumers, and that the Fire, Water and Light Committee be and they are hereby authorized to take whatever steps are necessary to give legal notice of such application, and to have a petition to the Legislature and a form of Act drafted, and that the committee take such steps as they may consider necessary to promote the passage of the said Act through the Legislature.

EXPRESSIVE NAME FOR INDIGESTION.

Wallace's Red Cross Drug Store Has a Simple Remedy That is Guaranteed to Cure the Trouble.

No one word better expresses the condition of the sufferer from weak stomach or indigestion than "misery." The stomach is weak and cannot digest the food, so that there is no appetite, there are pains and griping in the stomach and bowels, the head and back ache, and the misery goes to every organ.

Strengthen the stomach and the digestive system by the use of Mi-o-na. This is the only stomach remedy known that gives relief by strengthening the stomach and digestive organs. It is this principle that makes it a certain cure for indigestion. Other medicines may give temporary relief by helping digest the food, but they do not strengthen the stomach, and that organ gets weaker and weaker all the time.

T. B. Wallace, the reliable retail druggist, has so much confidence in this remarkable remedy that he guarantees a cure, or the money will be refunded. Mi-o-na costs but 50 cents a box. Ask to see the strong guarantee given with every box.

Mi-o-na is in tablet form and should be taken before each meal. Other remedies for stomach troubles and indigestion are taken after the meal, and decompose the good food you eat, but Mi-o-na used before eating strengthens the stomach, soothes and heals all irritation and inflammation, enriches the blood, and puts the stomach in such a healthy condition that it will take care of the food itself and there will be no pain nad suffering.

ARTHUR J. BALFOUR
The Evolution of a Prime Minister

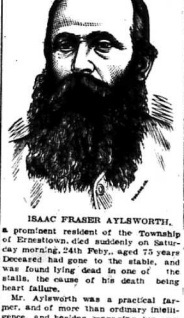
The Prime Minister of Great Britain, Arthur James Balfour, is a strange paradox. A peer in politics, he cares nothing for the name; with little or no ambition, he has risen to a position second only to that of the King; of a dreamy, philosophic temperament, he has proved himself a man of instant action in every emergency.

He was born in 1848 in Scotland, the son of a wealthy Scotchman, and Lady Cecil, sister of the late Lord Salisbury. At Eton and Cambridge he revealed a germ of future greatness. He was a member of a society of enthusiasts vainly seeking the "ultimate" among the list of life's unattainables. When twenty-six he entered Parliament, and was bored and cynical, taking neither himself nor his work seriously, a spectator of life rather than a struggler. As the weak member of "the Fourth Party" he was the favored butt of the House and was usually summed up by his fellows as "clever but hopelessly lazy."

In 1886, to the amazement and amusement of England, Salisbury, his uncle, named him the successor of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chief Secretary for Ireland. This post that had brought the snow of age on the heads of strong men and had even killed some of them in the fierce days of the "Land war" was given to this young, gentle, easy-going individual. The Irish members smiled knowingly and rubbed their hands in the glee of anticipation—but it was all premature. Daniel was surely thrown into the lion's den. The indolent, careless manner of Balfour suddenly fell from him as if it were a magic mantle. He stood before them a man of keen judgment, iron will, vigorous and virile force and a master in executive power. He braved alike their taunts, their threats, their insolence and their abuse until they became tired. They were like lazy bullets that hit him but did not hurt him. His firmness, liberality and good sense at last won his enemies.

From one high position to another he rose without any seeming effort, till his present honors fell at his feet in 1902. Balfour is a man of deep religious spirit, serious by nature, serious and serene in temperament, a conscientious student, a successful statesman, a philosopher turned statesman, and so sensitized to the great realities of life as to be unmindful of many things that absorb the whole life of smaller men.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by W. C. Black, at the Department of Agriculture.



ISAAC FRASER AYLSWORTH,

a prominent resident of the Township of Ernestown, died suddenly on Saturday morning, 24th Feby. Apoplexy was the cause. Deceased had gone to the stable, and was found lying dead in one of the stalls, the cause of his death being heart failure.

Mr. Aylsworth was a practical farmer, and of more than ordinary intelligence, and besides managing his own affairs successfully, took a deep interest in municipal affairs. For years he represented his municipality as reeve, deputy-reeve and councillor, and also in the County Council. He leaves a wife, a daughter and son. Mr. Andy Aylsworth, Ernestown; George Aylsworth, Kingston, and David, of Eldora, Iowa; Mrs. Wm. Hall and Mrs. Dewitt, Eldora, Iowa; Mrs. Baker, Mrs. R. S. Shorey, Napanee; Mrs. Norris Miller, Bath, and Mrs. Benj Asselstine, Kingston.

A debate on the superiority of country to city life was the chief feature at the league on Friday evening. Messrs. Stewart Woods and Stewart Hughes, two of our rising young men, were the speakers for the compet. in which our school principal and others also took part. The arguments both pro and con were strong and animated, and reflected great credit on all concerned. The judges decided in favor of the champions of the country by a majority of one. Some matter of remarks that the debate itself warranted them in their conclusions. The next regularly attended a debate in Toronto which was not worthy to take any rank with the one they had just listened to. That was an additional proof, if one were needed, that the country youth is fully the equal of the town in the city.

NEWS NOTES.

Wheat is being shipped back from Fort William to Manitoba, where it commands a better price.

A street car jumped the tracks at Queen and McCaul streets, Toronto, and crashed into a store.

Esquimalt naval station has been formally abandoned and Commodore Goodrich has hauled down his flag.

A mail car on the Baltimore & Ohio Railway was burned with $250,000 in currency and 1,500 registered letters.

Mrs. Stanford, wife of late United States Senator Stanford, died at Honolulu. She is supposed to have been poisoned.

Albert Howard, Belleville, left his wife and two small children, and eloped with Mary L. Jerman, a servant in the house of Charles Foster, where Howard was also employed.

Two guards and an overseer of Kingston Penitentiary have been suspended by Inspector Dawson for alleged trafficking with convicts by carrying tobacco, letters and papers to them.

Hon. Clifford Sifton, Minister of the Interior in the Laurier cabinet has resigned, because of the attempt to force separate schools on the new provinces, and the proposal to control the lands.

Before the Agricultural Committee of the House of Commons, Dr. Saunders, head of the experimental farms, gave the average production of wheat per Manitoba acre 16.62 bushels an acre, while in the Territories it is 18 bushels. In North Dakota the production is given as 11.80 bushels, in Minnesota 9.60 bushels, and in South Dakota, 9.60 bushels. These figures are suggestive. They account for the rush into the Canadian West.

The Japanese again defeated the Russians this week. The Russian general's despatch shows the Japs are fighting as determinedly as ever, and entrenched Derzewoff Hill after a severe battle last night, the enemy bringing to the attack a considerably superior force. The attack on Tsenti Pass was repulsed. At Derzewoff Hill the Japanese advanced over the bodies of their own dead, in the face of exploding surface mines and through barbed wire entanglements. Their losses were considerable. Our own losses have been not inconsiderable.

The records kept at McGill University, Montreal, show that the downfall of snow in that winter has been no less than 10 feet 4 inches. This is nearly four inches above the average of the total downfalls in the past thirteen years. March is the month in which the greatest snow storms often take place, and only a few years ago forty-eight inches fell in that month. It is possible, therefore, that the present winter may establish a record in snowfalls in the city. Last winter the total downfall was 8 feet 2 1-2 inches.

Mrs. Jean Waldrum Andrews sings with taste and expression and enunciates most distinctly. Don't miss hearing her in the Eastern Methodist church, Thursday evening, March 9th.

TOWN COUNCIL.

A special meeting of the Town Council was held on Wednesday evening to consider the matter of submitting a by-law to the ratepayers of Napanee for the purpose of granting a sum of $75 per annum and to exempt the proposed new factory from taxation (except school taxes) for a period of ten years.

The members were all present, Mayor Lavery presiding.

A verbatim copy of the by-law will be found on page 8, and it would be well for all our ratepayers to peruse it carefully and aid in every way such a laudable project.

Mr Carson, the promoter, agrees to put up a plant and buildings worth at least $15,000, and to spend $8,000 a year in wages. The factory will in all probability be erected at the head of the street, just south of the railroad track.

It was decided to submit the by-law to the ratepayers of the town on Tuesday, 28th March, 1905.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE.

Moved by W. R. Purdy, seconded by R. J. Brethen, to be placed in the Minutes and a copy sent to the family, also to the Daily Standard:

That we, the members of this Council, desire to express their sincere sorrow in the sudden death of their esteemed colleague, I. F. Aylsworth, Esq., and to tender their heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement.

We wish to put on record our appreciation of the valuable services, which he has rendered to the Municipality of Ernestown, and our deep sense of the irreparable loss which the Council has by his late sustained. His long experience at the Council Board and his prior knowledge of Municipal affairs, made his counsel especially valuable, and his advice was constantly sought for, always given kindly.

We feel, therefore, that his death is a distinct loss to the body to which he has served well and faithfully, for so many years, and that we, as the representatives of the people, should put on record our regret at his death, and our sense of his worth.

Impoverished Soil

Impoverished soil, like impoverished blood, needs a proper fertiliser. A chemist by analyzing the soil can tell you what fertilizer to use for different products.

If your blood is impoverished your doctor will tell you what you need to fertilize it and give it the rich, red corpuscles that are lacking in it. It may be you need a tonic, but more likely you need a concentrated fat food, and fat is the element lacking in your system.

There is no fat food that is so easily digested and assimilated as

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil

It will nourish and strengthen the body when milk and cream fail to do it. Scott's Emulsion is always the same; always palatable and always beneficial where the body is wasting from any cause, either in children or adults.

We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Mr. A. Brown, of Ottawa, Ont., Saved by PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Mr. Alfred Brown, 91 O'Conner Street, Ottawa, Ont., pronounced incurable by physicians, was cured by Paine's Celery Compound; he says—

"I acknowledge with thankfulness and pleasure the fact that I have been cured of a very painful illness of eight years' standing by use of Paine's Celery Compound. I had during the years of my illness tried almost all the advertised medicines without deriving any good results. I was also treated by several of the best doctors of this city, hoping to find that one of them at least would understand my case.

"I was getting worse, and was told I was incurable. I was indeed in a critical condition. I could not rest from the house alone, as I was liable to sudden collapse. I tried hospital treatment, but no relief or good results came to me. I could not sleep; anything that I ate increased my agonies; I was extremely weak, restless, tired and despondent; was obliged to walk about with my hands pressed firmly into my left side to ease my pains; my feet and hands were cold continually; had inclination to vomit, had profuse cold sweats quick breathing and would be racked with pain for hours at a time.

"After the regular use of Paine's Celery Compound for a time, I am now in the best of health, have good appetite and can use any kind of food. Thank God I am my old self once more, all through the use of Paine's Celery Compound."

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES.

The resolutions passed at the convention of the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions, held in Toronto, February 14th to 16th, are likely to have far reaching effects. The Agricultural societies of the Province for many years have been receiving fixed grants from the Government, irrespective of the work they were doing. At the recent convention, as a result of information furnished by Provincial Superintendent, H. B. Cowan, a resolution was adopted recommending that in future grants should be distributed in proportion to the amount of money they expend for agricultural purposes.

It is probable that the Agricultural Act will be revised and this change made within a year or two. Should this be done it will result in many of the smaller societies in the Province being cut off and societies which are doing good work being strengthened. An estimate based on the returns made to the Department of Agriculture, by some of the societies of the Province shows how such a change is likely to work out. In a county in Eastern Ontario, where the district society has been devoting a great deal of attention to horse raising, this society will lose $110 from its grant, which money will go to a township society farther back in the county where little is being conducted on agricultural lines. In another Eastern Ontario county the district society will receive an increase in its grant of $101 which will be taken from the grants of three small town fairs. The result will probably mean that two of the small societies will have to go out of existence and that the third one will be strengthened, leaving two strong societies in the riding instead of four at present.

In yet another county the grant to the district society will remain about as it is, while two small township societies will lose $88 which will go to a third township society. In that county it will probably also mean that two small township societies will have to give up holding exhibitions, while the second township fair will be strengthened.

It is thought that the Provincial Department will be strengthened while the weak and struggling ones, which are doing little or no good will go out of existence. Such a change in the Act will do away with all distinction between township and district societies and will place all societies on the same footing as regards their government grants.

The convention adopted a resolution requesting the Department of Agriculture to enforce the Act by cutting off the grants to all societies which permit games of chance at their exhibitions, and pledged its support to the Department in any measures it may take to suppress such features at fall fairs.

PROTECT YOURSELF AGAINST GERMS

People With Weak Stomachs Most Liable To Catch Disease.

When the stomach and digestive organs are weak, the food does not digest, and there is a sour, slimy, fermenting mass, which is an ideal spot for the disease germs to multiply. The only way to protect yourself against disease germs is to strengthen the stomach and digestive organs, and Mi-o-na is the only agent, so far as is known that will accomplish this.

The only stimulatory medicine that is taken for indigestion and stomach troubles is advertised to act upon the food alone, and hence only gives no more than temporary relief. Mi-o-na is a certain cure in all cases of stomach troubles, excepting cancer, because it enables the stomach and digestive organs to act in the way Nature intended they should. Drugs cannot digest the food; they simply decompose it.

If you suffer with distress after eating, pains in the head, chest, sides and back, belching of gases and undigested food hot taste in the mouth, dizziness, or vertigo, sleeplessness, variable appetite, dark headaches, spots before the eyes, and have a peculiar feeling of despondency, weakness, and debility, you should at once strengthen the stomach and digestive system by the use of Mi-o-na. There is no liquid, no alcohol, no spoonful doses with Mi-o-na. Just one simple tablet out of a fifty cent box before eating, and your stomach will soon become so strong and healthy that you will be quite proof. Ask Wallace's Red Cross Drug Store to show you the guarantee under which they sell Mi-o-na; it costs nothing unless it cures you.

People With Weak Stomachs Most Liable To Catch Disease.

When the stomach and digestive organs are weak, the food does not digest, and there is a sour, slimy, fermenting mass, which is an ideal spot for the disease germs to multiply. The only way to protect yourself against disease germs is to strengthen the stomach and digestive organs, and Mi-o-na is the only agent, so far as is known that will accomplish this.

The only stimulatory medicine that is taken for indigestion and stomach troubles is advertised to act upon the food alone, and hence only gives no more than temporary relief. Mi-o-na is a certain cure in all cases of stomach troubles, excepting cancer, because it enables the stomach and digestive organs to act in the way Nature intended they should. Drugs cannot digest the food; they simply decompose it.

If you suffer with distress after eating, pains in the head, chest, sides and back, belching of gases and undigested food hot taste in the mouth, dizziness, or vertigo, sleeplessness, variable appetite, dark headaches, spots before the eyes, and have a peculiar feeling of despondency, weakness, and debility, you should at once strengthen the stomach and digestive system by the use of Mi-o-na. There is no liquid, no alcohol, no spoonful doses with Mi-o-na. Just one simple tablet out of a fifty cent box before eating, and your stomach will soon become so strong and healthy that you will be quite proof. Ask Wallace's Red Cross Drug Store to show you the guarantee under which they sell Mi-o-na; it costs nothing unless it cures you.

The Yellow Holly

BY FERGUS HUME.

"Oh!" Mrs. Ward seemed disappointed. "Was that all?"

"Why"—Leonard turned his dull eyes on her flushed face—"what else did you expect to hear, Mrs. Ward?"

"Nothing! Nothing," she said hurriedly, for she did not wish to make him suspicious; "but it seems so odd. Dorothy giving the holly, you know, and that Mrs. Jersey should be upset. We must continue this conversation, Mr. Train. It is really most interesting. But you literary men are quite fascinating. After dinner in the drawing room, Mr. Train. Dorothy!" She signaled with her fan, and her daughter came. "Don't be too long over your wipe," said Mrs. Ward as she left the room. "We can't spare you, Mr. Train."

Leonard believed that all this attention was due to his own fascinations. His head was still heated with the wine he had drunk, yet he began to regret that he had said anything about the yellow holly. Certainly he had not promised George to be silent on this especial point, but he nevertheless thought it wiser to hold his tongue about all that had taken place in Amelia square on the night of the murder. Warned in this way by his mother sense, Train took no more wine, but after a rather dull conversation with Vane he went into the drawing room. Dorothy was at the piano, and thither repaired Vane. But Mrs. Ward, seated near the fire, called Leonard to her side. "I must introduce you, Lord Derrington—Mr. Train."

The grandfather of George was a huge man, burly, red faced, white haired and with a rather truculent expression. He was over seventy, yet carried his years like a boy. Under his bushy white eyebrows he shot a quick glance at Leonard from a pair of keen gray eyes and summoned him up at once as a foe. But Lord Derrington had been a diplomatist many years before and knew that even fools are sometimes useful. He, therefore, had learned from Mrs. Ward's conversation that Train was a great friend of Brendon's and he knew more about George than a secretary should. Therefore, on receiving, after his one glance of contempt, was very civil to Leonard indeed.

"I am glad to meet you," he said, with a nod. "You go in for books, I understand from Mrs. Ward."

He had a deep, raucous voice like that of an early starling, and spoke in an abrupt staccato kind of way. Train, who stood before him like a rabbit before a snake, compared him in his own mind with Becky Sharp's friend, the Marquis of Steyne. Derrington was quite as wicked and savage and unscrupulous as that celebrated nobleman.

Derrington seemed to Leonard to have the instincts of a despot, and Leonard could imagine him slaying and burning and doing all manner of evil things. He wondered how Brendon ever came to have such a villain as grandfather. It was on the tip of his tongue to say something about Brendon, just to observe the effect on Derrington. At that moment fate intervened. The drawing room door opened, and a servant announced, "Mr. Brendon!"

The next moment George came face to face with his grandfather.

CHAPTER X.

IT was a most awkward meeting. Dorothy, Train and Brendon knew the truth, but Mrs. Ward and Vane were ignorant. As to Lord Derrington himself, George was not sure. After his conversation with Lois he had a very good idea that, since Bawdsey was connected in some way with his grandfather, Lord Derrington must have somehow learned that Brendon was the name by which he had taken. There was no other way of accounting for the mention of Derrington's name by the private detective. However this might be, Lord Derrington was too clever a man to betray himself. George felt that the old man knew who he was, but he could not be sure, for Derrington welcomed him with a well bred air, as he would have done a stranger. Mrs. Ward watched the meeting curiously, and Brendon noticed her inquiring gaze, but he put this down to his knowledge that Derrington knew he was a suitor for Dorothy's hand and wished the girl to marry Vane. Leonard was the only person in the room who dis-

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS SICK?

Let your morning urine stand for 24 hours in a glass or vessel, and then if it is milky or cloudy, or contains a red brick-dust sediment, or if particles or germs float about in it, your kidneys are diseased. If the kidneys are well they filter just so much blood, but if they are sick or weak from any cause, they leave the poison in the blood, and this poison affects the entire system.

It is natural to pass urine three times a day, but many who regard themselves as healthy are obliged to pass water six to ten times daily and are obliged to get up frequently during the night. They have sick kidneys and bladder and don't know it. Smith's Buchu Lithia Pills cure Rheumatism and all Kidney and Bladder diseases, and make rich blood.

We will send you a generous sample test paid Free, together with our large book on the above mentioned diseases. Address, W. F. Smith Co., 185 St. James Street, Montreal, Canada.

A DUTY WOMEN OWE THEMSELVES.

"Good actions speak louder than words," so too, does the testimony of many thousands of women during a third of a century speak louder than mere claims not backed by a guarantee of some kind. That is the reason why the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription are willing to offer $500 reward for women who cannot be cured. Such a remarkable offer is founded on the long record of cures of the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women. If there is an invalid woman, suffering from female weakness, prolapsus, or falling of womb, or from leucorrhea who has used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription without complete success, the proprietors of that medicine would like to hear from such person—and it will be to her advantage to write them as they offer, in perfect good faith, a reward of $500 for any case of the above maladies which they cannot cure. No other medicine for women has the composition of the unparalleled curative properties that would warrant its makers in making such an offer.

The Sisters of the Good Shepherd, at their convent, "Our Lady of the Woods," Carthage, Ohio, use a great deal of Dr. Pierce's medicines; they say, in a recent letter to Dr. Pierce: "We beg to assure you of the great benefit these medicines give our ailing ones. We cannot sufficiently recommend their excellence."

When the clergy have to have something that is as good as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, just tell him, "There's nothing just as good." He says so because he hopes to make a better profit but his own mixtures have not stood the test of long experience and success that Doctor Pierce's medicines have. Then, too, many patent medicines advertised as tonics contain large quantities of alcohol. Dr. Pierce guarantees that his "Prescription" does not contain a particle of alcohol.

played any visible disturbance. He grew red and restless. Brendon was perfectly calm.

"How delightful of you to come, Mr. Brendon," said Mrs. Ward, rising and apparently forgetting that she had forbidden him the house. "I must introduce you. Lord Derrington—Mr. Brendon, and you know Mr. Train."

"We are old friends," said George calmly. "Miss Ward"—he bowed to Dorothy, who emulated his serenity, although she felt anxious. But when she saw her lover's composure she knew that nothing disagreeable would occur and her apprehensions were relieved.

There ensued a general conversation relative to the weather, the doings of a certain politician and to sundry other subjects more or less vague. George talked excellently and was conscious that Derrington was listening with approval. Again and again he wondered if the old man really knew who he was, and again and again he failed to arrive at any conclusion. After a time Leonard went with Dorothy to the piano, where she played for his delectation, and Mrs. Ward seized the opportunity to leave Vane some new photographs of herself. Derrington and Brendon were practically alone, and the old lord appeared anxious to make himself agreeable.

"I have heard of you from Mrs. Ward," he said in his harsh tones, which no amount of politeness could render agreeable, "but I do not think we have met before. Are you related to the Brendons of Shropshire?"

"No. I have that privilege," Derrington chuckled at this reply. He thought George had a good deal of the man in him when he answered thus flearlessly. "I have seen your name somewhere lately," he observed, "but I can't recall where or in what connection."

Brendon laughed, quite at his ease, although he did not know if this was an attempt to make him speak out. However, he did speak out with the idea of seeing what would happen. "I can supply the connection," said he lightly, but keenly observant of the old man's face. "My name appears as a witness at an inquest a week or so back."

"Ah, now I remember, Mr. Brendon. Quite so. It was that Amelia square murder."

"You have a good memory, Lord Derrington."

"In this case you flatter me, Mr. Brendon. There is no difficulty in my remembering the especial case, as Mrs. Jersey was a tenant of mine."

George was not supposed to know this and displayed suitable surprise.

"Indeed," he said; "then you have lost a good tenant."

"Possibly," replied Derrington, rather grimly. "She always paid her rent regularly. You saw her?"

"Yes. My friend, Mr. Train, was stopping in the house"—

"That young man." Derrington cast a look in Leonard's direction. "I did not know he was there on that night."

"He was a witness also," said Brendon significantly.

"I can't remember all the names, sir. Well?"

"I stopped for the night with Mr. Train and during the night Mrs. Jersey was murdered."

"You heard nothing—saw nothing?"

"I was sound asleep the whole time," said Brendon calmly.

"Humph!" Derrington pulled at his gray mustache in the very same way that George did when he was reflective. "What a pity. You might have discovered the assassin."

"I don't think the assassin will ever be discovered."

"That's lucky for the assassin," rejoined the old lord cynically. "You appear to be very certain, Mr. Brendon."

George shrugged his shoulders. "No more certain than the police are," he replied. "They examined every one in the house, and no one could be accused —there was absolutely no evidence."

Derrington for some reason appeared to be rather relieved. "I read all that in the papers," he said roughly. "You are telling me nothing new. But there, you didn't say you would. By the way, do you know a Miss Bull?"

George nodded. "She told my fortune," he said.

"She told Mrs. Jersey's fortune also, and a very true fortune did she tell," said Derrington grimly. "What did she prophesy about you?"

"There were trouble and enemies and the promise that I should get my wish," said Brendon, with a quick look.

Derrington laughed. "What is your wish?"

"If I tell it I won't get it," replied George, also laughing, "but I don't believe in fortune telling or in Miss Bull."

"It wasn't in Mrs. Jersey's case," said the other, who appeared to be a trifle superstitious.

"Oh, that was a mere coincidence. But you asked me about Miss Bull, sir. Do you know her?"

Derrington nodded. "She came to me on behalf of Mrs. Jersey's niece and wished the lease renewed. I heard her story and consented. I dare say the niece will be quite as good a tenant as the aunt."

This conversation was all very well, but there was nothing to be learned from it on either side. Brendon could not discover if his grandfather knew to whom he was speaking, and Derrington found it impossible to tell. George could tell him anything of the case which had not been reported in the papers. For some reason Derrington wished to know what had transpired, and Brendon felt convinced that this anxiety was more than that of a landlord for the loss of a good tenant. He wondered if Derrington knew that Mrs. Jersey had written out a confession and that it was missing. He would have liked to find out, but since he could not reveal himself as Derrington's grandson there was no chance of getting this information. Besides, Derrington appeared to grow weary of discussing the murder. "It is worn threadbare," he said. "All the papers have been talking about it. I agree with you, Mr. Brendon, that the assassin will never be discovered. However, there are pleasanter subjects to talk of. What about yourself, your aims, your ambitions, your chances of success?"

"Are those pleasant subjects?" laughed Brendon.

"To an old man such as I am," nodded the other. "I like to hear of the castles in the air which youth builds."

"I am afraid my castles will soon turn to bricks and mortar," said Brendon, with a sigh.

However, he was not averse to showing his grandfather that he was no fool, but a man with a head on his shoulders. George had a quick brain and a strong will and a considerable fund of information. He had taken a good degree at Oxford, and his literary articles always received praise from the public and from his brethren of the press. Moreover, George was fond of politics and could converse excellently on that fascinating subject. He laid himself out to please Derrington, knowing that the old tyrant was disappointed in the languid Vane, who was chattering commonplaces to Mrs. Ward. In a short time Brendon and Derrington were engaged in a discussion about Ireland and Irish home rule.

"You ought to be in the house, Mr. Brendon," said the old lord.

"I have no one to help me to such a goal."

Derrington was about to speak and fastened his little eyes on the keen, handsome face of his grandson, but he suddenly changed his mind and turned away to talk to Mrs. Ward. Brendon knew that he had succeeded in pleasing the old gentleman and was glad that so much was accomplished. If Derrington found that he was clever and presentable and likely to add luster to the family name it was not improbable that he would recognize the marriage. But by this time Brendon had in his mind that Derrington knew who he was and had been talking advisedly under the cover of pretended ignorance so as to see what manner of man his acknowledged grandson was. "Well," thought Brendon, "he has learned that I am no fool, at all events."

Mrs. Ward came across to George and left Derrington talking to Dorothy, for whom he professed a great admiration. He knew that Dorothy liked Brendon, as Mrs. Ward had told him so, and he frankly acknowledged to her that Brendon was a clever man. "I wish my grandson had his brains," said Derrington regretfully. "Do you like Brendon?"

Dorothy did not see why she should conceal her feelings. "I love him," she said quietly and firmly.

"Ha!" replied Derrington, showing no surprise. "Mrs. Ward hinted at something of that sort, but I thought that Walter"—

"Please say no more, Lord Derrington."

"Well, then, I won't." Derrington's eyes rested wrathfully on the withered young man he called grandson. "I don't wonder at your choice, my dear. What Walter requires is a nurse."

"That is a profession I have not taken up," said Dorothy, laughing. Derrington said no more about Brendon, but Dorothy noticed that his eyes were rarely off the face of her lover.

Meantime Vane joined Mrs. Ward, and Dorothy, seeing that Leonard was alone, beckoned him to approach. Derrington was not particularly pleased at having his conversation with a pretty girl interrupted, but he was polite, and, on learning that Train knew Brendon intimately, he began to ask him about his friend.

"But really, you know, she is a great artist," Mrs. Ward was saying to Brendon. "There is something so original about her."

They were speaking of Lola Velez, and it was Vane who had introduced the subject. George, to whom the subject was distasteful, tried to avoid the discussion, but Mrs. Ward would return again and again to the topic.

"They say you know her very well," she declared.

"I am not sorry to put you right on that point," replied Brendon, his eyes hardening. "Many false rumors are about, to one of which you alluded the other day, Mrs. Ward. This is another. What I know of Senora Velez and how I know her can be put in a nutshell."

And George quietly related his rescue of the dancer.

"Then you did make her the success she is?" cried Mrs. Ward when he ended. "Oh, yes, it's no use denying it. You picked a jewel out of the gutter and gave it a chance of shining."

"Perhaps I did that much. But she made a success by her genius."

"I hope she is grateful," murmured Vane, with a malicious smile.

Brendon turned on him sharply. "I don't know what you mean by gratitude," he said deliberately.

"Well," drawled the little dandy, "she is pretty and"—

"She is not at all pretty, Mr. Vane, and were she as lovely as Cleopatra it would not matter to me. My connection with her ceased when she made her success." George quite forgot the presence of Mrs. Ward and spoke vehemently. "Can't you understand that a man may do a kind action without being biased by the beauty of a woman?"

"Some men can," said Mrs. Ward politely, "and I am sure you are one, Mr. Brendon. But suppose the woman"—

"I don't suppose anything, Mrs. Ward. I know. Senora Velez was poor. I helped her to attain to the position she now holds because I endeavor to follow the preaching of Christ, and she is to me a grateful friend. There is no more and no less to be said," and, a trifle ruffled, George turned on his heel to join Dorothy.

"Well, I'm sure," murmured Mrs. Ward, "and in my own house too!"

Vane sniggered. "There must be something in it," he said. "She's too pretty."

So these two scandal mongers talked on, and George had only made matters worse by his explanation. However, he believed that he had nipped the scandal in the bud, and strolled into the next room with Dorothy to quiet his mind. Behind them they left Derrington talking to Train and rather enjoying himself.

"Do you think Lord Derrington knows who you are?" asked Dorothy as she and George seated themselves on a divan.

"I am not sure," replied George, who did not want to tell her what he knew lest he should have to introduce the name of Lois Velez. "I have an idea that he does."

Dorothy shook her head. "I don't think so. If he knows you he must be aware that you know him, and about the relationship, and would not speak so freely. I think he is taken with you, George."

"Well, he has been putting me through my paces. I only hope that our chance meeting of tonight may bear fruit. What is Train doing here?"

"My mother really had him in her house once before, and she does not like him."

"I can't make out why she asked him," said George. "He is a dull young man, though harmless enough. But my mother made a point of asking him to dinner."

"Perhaps I do wonder what that's for," said Brendon, wrinkling his brows, for he knew well that Mrs. Ward did nothing without expecting an equivalent return. Then he recollected her questions about the crime and wondered if she had invited Leonard so as to pump him.

And that is what she was doing at the very moment. Almost as soon as the lovers had disappeared into the yellow boudoir Lord Derrington had taken his departure. He insisted that Vane should accompany him home, and they left together.

This was an excellent opportunity to find out what Mrs. Ward wanted to know. Taking Leonard's arm, she led him to a chair some distance from the door of the boudoir.

"Now that we have a nice long talk, dear Mr. Train," she said. "We can renew our pleasant conversation."

"I don't think it was very pleasant," said Train unwillingly.

"What an ungallant thing to say!" "I mean to talk about crime"—

"Is most amusing—I mean instructive. Oh, yes, I have read many of those novels—what do they call them? —detective novels. I have often thought how nice it would be if one could really try to find out who killed a person. Now, in this case, Mr. Train, I am sure you heard something or saw something"—

"Upon my word, I neither saw nor heard," protested Leonard. "I was in bed all the time."

"But you must have heard the fall of the body or the shutting of the door as the—ah!" Mrs. Ward saw from the expression of Leonard's face that she had touched upon something. "You did hear"—

"No, no!" he stammered, wondering how he was to get out of confessing about the opening of the front door without appearing rude.

"Nonsense! Confess! Confess, you silly man!"

But Leonard was too loyal. To lead her away from the point he asked a question. "Mrs. Ward, that yellow holly!"

"Yes. What about it?" She leaned forward eagerly.

"Did you give a sprig of it to any one else?"

"No. I only gave a bit to my daughter, and she"—

"She gave it to Brendon. Yes, I know. But did Miss Ward give any of it to a third person?"

"Certainly not. To do so she would have had to get it from me. But be yond the sprig which was given, and which Mr. Brendon had, no holly went out of this house."

"It is very rare, is it not?"

"I believe so. I dare say there wasn't another bunch in London on that particular night. Of course there might have been; still—but why do you ask all this?"

"Well," said Leonard, "it seems to me that the yellow holly has something to do with the crime."

Mrs. Ward drew a long breath, but said no word. He was speaking half to himself, and she did not wish to interrupt his train of thought. But she listened with all her ears. Leonard continued: "I found a berry in the room where she was killed. Yes. They took us in to see the body, and a horrid sight it was. I turned my eyes to the floor, and there I saw—just by the table—a kind of amber bead. I dropped my handkerchief so that Quex might not suspect, and I picked it up. When in my own room I examined it. It was one of the yellow holly berries."

Mrs. Ward drew herself back with a kind of unholy triumph. "Do you know what you are saying, Mr. Train?" she said in a half whisper. "You are accusing Mr. Brendon"—

"No, no!" Train started to his feet. Mrs. Ward pulled him down again and pointed with her fan toward the boudoir.

"Hush! He might come out," she whispered. "But can't you see? Brendon threw the sprig in his coat on that night. He must have been in the room and have dropped the berry. What was he doing there if it was not to"—

"No," said Train hoarsely. "I half thought of that myself, but it is quite impossible, I tell you. He could not have got out of his room unless he had come to me."

"How do you mean?"

"I locked the door of the sitting room, which was between his bedroom and mine. There was no exit from his bedroom, and to get out and down the stair he would have had to open the sitting room door. Now, the key was under my pillow, and the door was locked in the morning. No, Mrs. Ward, Brendon is innocent."

"He might have stolen the key while you slept."

Train shook his head. "Impossible. I sleep very sound, and on that night I hardly slept at all."

"Why? Was anything wrong?"

"I can't tell you that, Mrs. Ward, without violating the confidence of my

A CHICAGO ALDERMAN OWES HIS ELECTION TO CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY.

"I can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," writes Mr. Fred Berwick, Alderman, So. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago last April I was taking a severe cough. I caught cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and lungs. I was finally compelled to stop, as I could hardly speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my ears when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale at The Red Cross Drug Store.

friend. Indeed, I have said too much. Promise me you will not speak of what I have told you."

"I promise, but I am quite sure that the holly berry was dropped by George Brendon and that he was in Mrs. Jersey's sitting room on that night. He is the criminal."

"I tell you he is not, Mrs. Ward."

"Don't excite yourself, Mr. Train. Here are Mr. Brendon and Dorothy." She sailed toward them with open hands. "Finished your talk? We must say good night." And to herself she murmured, while smiling, "I've got you at last—I've got you at last!" And Brendon shook hands with Madame Judas, quite unconscious of her premeditated treachery.

CHAPTER XI.

UNDER the rule of Miss Bull—for Margery was a mere figurehead—the house in Amelia square was much more lively, but in spite of the air which certainly pervaded the house all things were very proper. Miss Bull was a lady and saw that things were kept decent. The boarders feared her bright black eyes and her sharp tongue and were always glad when she retired to her sitting room. But Miss Bull was also liked, as she was a very affable hostess. Margery was now, as ever, her docile slave, and Miss Bull governed with a rod of iron.

Among the new boarders Miss Bull took most notice of Bawdsey, who occupied the rooms formerly inhabited by Train. On his arrival he had asked particularly for these rooms, saying that he had once lived in them when he stopped with Mrs. Jersey many years before. After some thought Miss Bull remembered the man. He had boarded in the house and had been a great favorite with madame, but had later gone to America and for some time had remained away. He expressed the greatest sorrow for the death of the old lady, but declared that he was very pleased with the house as managed by Miss Bull. The little woman liked him, as his conversation was amusing and he was most polite, but had she known that he was a private detective she might not have approved of him so much.

What Bawdsey was she never inquired, as she was the least curious of women. His habits were certainly eccentric, for sometimes he would remain away for a week and at other times would stop constantly in the house. He often remained in bed for the day and had his meals brought to him. This he called his bed cure and stated that he suffered from nerves. He told Miss Bull quite gratuitously that he had a small income. "I am simple in my tastes," said Mr. Bawdsey, "and what I have keeps me in luxury. But a man even of my age must be up and doing. Better to wear out than rust out."

Miss Bull assented. She liked to hear Bawdsey tell of his travels, and frequently asked him into her sitting room for that purpose. He seemed to have been everywhere and to have seen everything. It appeared from his own confession that he began his travels at the early age of seventeen, when he went to Milan. And the man talked freely about himself—so freely that Miss Bull, in spite of her suspicious nature, never dreamed that all this chatter was for the purpose of throwing dust in her sharp eyes.

A week after the little dinner at Mrs. Ward's, Bawdsey sent a note to Brendon asking him to call on a certain afternoon, and when George, anxious to continue the acquaintance and curious to know what Bawdsey had procured his address, arrived, he was shown up to the well known room. Bawdsey welcomed him with enthusiasm and acted in the same style as Lola did, but in a less theatrical manner.

"My preserver!" said Bawdsey, shaking hands vigorously, and George laughed.

"You put me in mind of a lady I know," he said. "She uses the same term—quite unnecessarily, as it happens."

"I don't agree with you," answered Bawdsey, to the astonishment of his visitor. "When a woman is rescued from starvation she has a right to call her good Samaritan the best of names."

"Oh," said Brendon, taking a seat, "so Lois has told you."

Bawdsey nodded. "I guess so," said he, with a pronounced American twang —somewhat too pronounced, George thought. "She told me all about your visit the other night."

"Did she never speak of me before?"

"Why, of course she spoke. I tell you, sir, that the girl is just bubbling over with gratitude."

"Yet you said when last we met that she meant me harm."

TAMWORTH.

The at home at the manse on Thursday evening, under the auspices of the W. F. M. S. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Tamworth, was in every way a great success. Thursday of last week was one of the jolliest of February, and the evening was a particularly bright one, notwithstanding the bad condition of the roads the people took advantage of it between sixty and seventy being present who enjoyed themselves greatly at different games. A very interesting and unique feature of the evening was the presentation by the members of the congregation of Cameron's Hall and Tamworth, of a very handsome cutter of the Tamworth make to the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Henry. The pastor expressed his appreciation in very valuable and useful gift, and thanked the congregation most sincerely for their very great kindness. At a late hour tea was served at small tables in the drawing room and dining room. The proceeds of the evening were devoted to Foreign Missions.

MARLBANK.

The school concert, which was held on Friday evening, was well attended, and proved a decided success. The chair was ably filled by Mr. Wm. Wilson. The programme was a lengthy one, consisting of dialogues, musical numbers and readings of music, which was furnished by the organ of the school, the Misses J. Yates' graphophone, and Mr. M. Keller's phonograph, which gave music in a manner that held the audience spell-bound. The net proceeds of the evening were $27.00. After the programme the young congregation rose and was dismissed by singing God save the King.

Napanee's Greatest ...Store.
THE— Robinson Co.

We are daily impressing on the people here that if it is a crime and foolishness and business death to lie; that it isn't smart to make a customer think a thing is other than it is, or that fabrics match when they don't.

If a transaction at Robinson's turns out to be your disappointment it is an error beyond usual prevention,—and never a designed wrong.

Let us care the blunder. Our best friends make it a personal matter with the management.

We knew what we were up against for 1905 and have been planning for months to be ready for it. The special bargains prepared for you will be announced from time to time in the local press. Right now let us say that any day you come there are lots of special values to be picked up that we have not press space to tell you about. Last year's Big Sale was started March 7th. This year we will start the race to increase our sales on Saturday, March 4th.

ODESSA.

The weather has been some what milder this last week, which makes our village quite lively again. The roads are getting quite passable and the farmers are beginning to haul in logs to the saw mill.

A very sudden and unexpected death occurred in our community on Saturday morning, taking away one of our old landmarks, Mr. I. P. Aylsworth. He was a very popular man and well liked by every body. He also took a very active part in our municipal elections. This makes the fourth sudden death we have had in our community this winter. The first was W. Babcock, next F. Thompson, then N. F. Suider, and last Mr. Aylsworth.

The township council met on Monday, but adjourned till the next day on account of the death of Mr. Aylsworth, who was one of its members. The township will elect another man. Nomination takes place on Monday, 13th inst.

Mr. E. Storms is moving in our village on the lot of Mr. J. Shiee.

Mr. W. T. Hodge intends giving one of his popular shows in the town hall on Saturday evening. The Odessa band will be in attendance.

Rev. Mr. Brown, of Kingston, will preach missionary sermons in the Methodist church next Sunday, morning and evening.

YARKER.

The revival is still going on in the Methodist church, and although the roads have been almost impassable, large congregations have been in attendance, and the interest in the meetings seems to be increasing. This is the twelfth week of the meetings held in Colebrook and Yarker. During that time about one hundred and forty have presented themselves at the altar as seekers of salvation, and among these many heads of families. The success has been due to the united efforts of pastor and people who, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, poured out their hearts to God in prayer for the conversion of souls, and God heard and answered their prayers to whom we give all glory and praise.

THOUSANDS DIE OF CONSTIPATION

No condition causes so many incurable diseases as constipation. It not only prevents the kidneys from eliminating the poisonous wastes, but causes anaemia, stomach trouble and indigestion. Why won't you use Dr. Hamilton's Pills and get cured? This excellent medicine restores normal bowel action in one night. Thousands say so. Your system will be pure and clean, you'll be free from headaches, no more sour stomach—in short you'll have joyful spirits and perfect good health. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are sold everywhere, 25c a box. Get the genuine.

THORPE.

As some of your readers may not be acquainted with our locality, allow me to say a few words in its favor.

Thorpe lies in the suburbs of Odessa, and is west the cities of Wilton and Violet. All it lacks is the electric road, which we understand, is to be completed next summer, connecting Thorpe with the city of Kingston and Trenton. Among its noted buildings are Victoria Rolling Mettler's cheese factory, postoffice, and last but not least, Uncle Tom's cobbin.

We are supposed to have a daily mail, but owing to so much snow there were several days we were without any news, and busied ourselves watching our sports breaking roads.

Some of our boys are thinking of getting out a patent for snow shoes, as they have been in great demand this winter. It is not as easy of course as riding, but then you see we make the way so much shorter by cutting off the corners.

Mr. Fred Davidson, of Oxbow, Assa., is spending the winter here.

CANNING FACTORY NOTES.

The town is asked to give Mr. Carson $75 per annum for ten years and exemption from taxes (except from school taxes) for the same period of time. Does the town lose anything thereby? The taxes on the factory will be built on is now paying about $6.25 taxes. The school tax alone on the new building will be about $20, and in addition, there will in all probability be residences erected nearby, the taxes on which will come into the treasury.

The by-law will be submitted to the ratepayers on Tuesday, March 28th, 1905. It will require a majority of the votes polled of the actual number of property owners on the list to carry the by-law. If you are a property owner in Napanee and do not go to the poll on election day, you are voting against the by-law.

The City Fathers of Montreal has endorsed this marvellous discovery. No Sanatarium is required. The Treatment can be taken at home. No special diet required. The desire to reform is simply necessary and spirits a relief to a few days.

This medicine is now within the reach of all, the price having been reduced. The wonderful results obtained with the worst class of drunkards coming before the Judges of the Recorder's Courts in Quebec and Montreal warrant the statement that the disease of Drunkenness can be cured—readily and surely—under ordinary circumstances and with the reasonable desire upon the part of the individual.

This treatment is simply the medicine of the medical profession—the only secret is as to its administration.

Dr. MacKay's discovery is the result of 25 years of practice as a specialist and expert. He is Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the Province of Quebec

The Government of Quebec through the Judges ordered over 500 boxes of the medicine for the purpose mentioned in the Courts in 1904—Official Reports establish 81 per cent of cures with these cases.

"GREAT AWAKENINGS"

Which Are Now Stirring Churches In Various Parts of the World.

GOD IS VISITING HIS PEOPLE

Rev. Dr. Talmage Contrasts Them With Other Famous Revivals, and Points Out the Lessons it Teaches—When God's People Plead With Him for a Blessing They Put Their Trust in One Who Never Fails.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Diver, at Toronto, at the Dept of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 26.—In this sermon the preacher gives a vivid description of the "great awakening" which is just now stirring the Pacific coast, contrasting it with other famous revivals and pointing out the lessons it teaches for the nation. The text is Revelation xiv. 18, "The time is come for thee to reap."

Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision," rescued by surrendering their hearts to Christ. Oh, what glorious news it is that reaches us from all lands, telling of old-fashioned revivals! As in bygone days, God is visiting his people. No ever-busy hand the Holy Spirit is moving on the dull and lifeless churches, rousing apathetic Christians and bringing multitudes of sinners to the foot of the cross. Australia has her Pentecosts, England her Pentecosts, Wales her Pentecosts, Scotland her Pentecosts. Christmas Evans, beloved Welsh preacher, have witnessed such an outpouring of the Holy Spirit as no living man has ever seen before. Rough miners and cultured scholars, old men and children have been stirred by a mysterious power and have turned to the Lord.

Our own land is sharing in the blessing. Great tidal waves of revival power have rolled up from the south. Great tidal waves of revival power have rolled forth from Pennsylvania and New York and Chicago. Great tidal waves of revival power are now rolling forth from California to the far east. Conquering revivals are everywhere. God has harnessed to his gospel chariots of revival fire an Evan Roberts, a Chapman, an Alexander, a Torrey, a Hyde, a Wolf and a Sheffler, the soul winner of little children, and scores of other mighty gospel chargers in this wonderful work of grace. Truly God has poured out His Spirit upon all flesh. Our sons and our daughters are prophesying. Our young men are seeing visions. Our old men are dreaming dreams. The Spirit that inspired the Wesleys and Whitefield and Finney and Baker and Cartwright and Nettleton is moving on in this widening gospel movement for the redemption of a sinful world for Christ!

What is the meaning of all this wonderful manifestation of the Spirit's power? Is there any one not yet discovered that governs such movements? Is it possible that in the spiritual world there is a close, unbreakable relation between cause and effect? Is there anything that we as individuals Christians can do to bring into operation these life-giving showers of divine grace? Is it possible that we as Christian people continue to obey God's command, we can have a perpetual revival of divine grace in our churches and homes every morning, every noon and every night?

These wonderful manifestations are the work of any human agency, but of God. Those were the results of faith in the faith that moves mountains. When God's people pleaded with him for this blessing they put their trust in one who never fails. The preparation in the heart of man is with the Lord, and when these believing men and women begged him to touch the hearts of the people he heard and answered them. If we want a revival to move a city we must get that revival by the "golden tongue" of earnest prayer. We shall never get it simply by the "silver tongue" of brilliant prayer. Prayer, prayer, agonizing prayer, prayer which came from hundreds and thousands of fathers and mothers and brothers and sisters, and husbands and wives was the cause.

The same lesson comes to us by the movement led by Campbell Morgan a year ago. After the great English preacher had left Los Angeles for the Ministerial Union of this city met to discuss the results of those meetings. One clergyman after another discussed the causes of that awakening, but no one found God. I confessed my own inability to understand it, for I had heard Campbell Morgan in the east when he did not seem to have any such influence over men. Yet the sermons which were powerless there were powerful here. The same sermons that were fruitful here. With that the Nestor of the congregational ministers arose, good old loving Dr. Warren F. Day. He said: "Brethren, you have omitted to state the chief reason of Campbell Morgan's success in Los Angeles. It was due to the fact that hundreds and thousands of Christians paved the way for his success by secret and earnest prayer. The Christians prayed in their churches; they prayed in their cottage prayer meetings; they prayed everywhere!" "Amen," said I. "Dr. Day is right." Campbell Morgan's revival was due chiefly to the fact that those meetings were lifted up to heaven by thousands of pleading, praying Christians. J. Wilbur Chapman, when he reaches heaven, will see there many saved during these revivals. But the dear old men in Israel, the old Christian elder and deacon, the old Christian church members, will rejoice over him in that harvest. Christ from his throne will recognize their services. "You wondered," he will say to them, "why it was that your words so moved the sinner to seek salvation. It was in answer to the prayers of these humble Christians that the Holy Spirit touched the hearts of your hearers so that the good seed fell into good ground." Let us thank God for such prayers.

These revivals teach another great lesson. The vast number of people do not have to be taught who Christ is. They have enough knowledge of the way of salvation to be saved if they will. They must be led by the power of the Holy Spirit simply to make up their minds to a decision to do what they know they ought to do. They do not need to hear sermons on the authenticity of the Scriptures, the divinity of Christ or the doctrine of original sin. They are for the greater part familiar with Christianity. It is the personal appropriation of these truths that they lack. They know all the truths that are needed to come to the desired decision. In other words, they believe, but they do not wish to give up sin. It is not information about Christ, nor explanation of the truths of Christianity that men need. They understand what they know already. It is the will that must be persuaded. They do not realize their danger, nor that they must themselves seek salvation through Christ. The sermon prepared by the evangelists proved that fact.

But another weighty lesson is pressed upon our hearts by these meetings. That is this: The Lord's work is in business. It is not a hysteria. It is not a few holy rollers shouting. It is not lifting your head above the clouds so that the mists blind your eyes and cause you stumble. It is the simplest duty on earth. It is not a few spasms and a few temporary gospel gymnastics. It is the steady, persistent work which we should study carefully and plan systematically and press strenuously with all our faith and energy.

When these evangelists began their work, as far as human agency was concerned, they had almost a perfect system of machinery. All the parts were systematically and completely advertised; second, all the workers of a district were gathered together in one head. Some went into the choruses. Then other workers were detailed to certain districts, and one or four pews had their overseers or gospel sentinels. No sooner was a hand raised for prayer than a certain worker was by that person's side to lead him or her to Christ.

Then, not satisfied with all this, one night General J. Wilbur Chapman—for he is a general of men—marshaled all his forces for a great attack upon the citadels of sin. That night the Christian evangelists from their churches came from all over the city. Down into the saloons and the places of evil resorts they went. Many were in search, hand of a Christian brother or sister was extended. Everywhere a pleading voice could be heard saying, "I want you for Christ." These valiant soldiers of the cross did not wait for sinners to come to the gospel meetings. They literally followed out the command of Jesus, which said: "Go ye out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled." And come they did. They came by the hundreds and by the thousands. The drunkards, the libertines, the outcasts—they came. Oh, how they longed to come! Gad and those who witnessed that wonderful and inspiring meeting in the Opera House of Los Angeles Feb. 2, 1905, will forget the revelation?

The elements seemed to conspire again.t the effort. When the hours drew toward the evening of that wonderful night, we said to ourselves: "Can we go out into this storm, even to bring sinners to Christ?" The rain then was falling in torrents. All the batteries of the elements were unlimbered. "Crash! Crash!" went the booming of the thunder. "Zigzag!" went the lightning. An electric thunderbolt struck the North Methodist Church of Pasadena, and set it on fire. The cars were blocked. Freahets were everywhere. Many of the theatres and places of amusements were emptied, long after most of the great city was asleep, hundreds of men and women marched throught the flooded streets, sometimes wading above their ankles in water. They marched singing and praising God. They marched down to the haunts of sin. Then, after they had collected the Magdalenes and the human prodigals who had been wallowing in the swine troughs of "the far country" they started back for the great largest theatres in the city. There, in that theatre were crowded at least 4,000 men and women. Many were in rags. Many faces were scarred and seared with the awful marks of sin. All, whether outcasts or rescuers were anxious about souls—anxious about their own souls or about the souls of others. Some curiosity seekers may have come to that meeting to scoff, but nearly all, before they left, prayed as did the poor publican prayed. There were tearful penitent tears—which welled up from breaking hearts. Yes, there were glorious tears, flowing unbidden and unchecked. Four thousand men and women, many of them drenched, gathered together in the midnight hour during the tempest to seek Christ. Did you ever see or hear the like of it? Can anyone who witnessed that wonderful and transporting meeting in the Grand Opera House on Sunday afternoon forget the revelation? Were we not then taught how Christ wants us to go forth into the highways and hedges, there seeking sinful men and women wherever they may be found?

One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, tolled the city bells. The evangelists and their followers worked on. Nine, ten, half past ten—the midnight bells were tolled on. Eleven, twelve, went the clock. What! Is it yet one to-night? Oh, yes; the moments of sin are out to-night. This is the harvest hour for the devil's consolations. It is not alone the hours of death. But to-night—aye, to-night—God's hours of mercy are calling and pleading. Mothers and fathers in heaven, wives and children in heaven, even the redeemed dead are not see the prayers being offered to God in midnight hour? Oh, God, teach us, as these meetings have taught us, that the mission of a Christian church is not alone to care for a few people who are our social set, and who happen to come to our churches! The greatest mission of Christian churches is to go after men and women—to go after them in haunts of sin, in gambling dens, everywhere and anywhere—to go after them in the morning, at noon and at midnight.

But, lastly, I learn from the work of these evangelists a lesson which ought to make us, one and all, ashamed of ourselves. If the churches of the Lord Jesus Christ would join together their forces to make a conquest for Christ there could win the same triumphs for the Master year in and year out. The evangelistic forces of J. Wilbur Chapman and his associates is to unite Christ's forces. They have given us an object lesson as to how souls are to be won by the united effort of all the denominations.

Suppose in every fall the Congregational ministers, and the Baptist ministers, and the Methodist ministers, and the Campbellite ministers and the Presbyterian ministers, and the Lutheran ministers, and the Reformed ministers would all get together. Then supposing they should say: "Let us join in sections. We will exchange pulpits. We will preach for souls, no matter in what church we preach. We will have our cottage prayer meetings and our noonday prayer meetings. We will send our best men down into the slums." What would happen? Not only would they break down sectarian lines, but they would teach congregations that the mightiest business on earth is not to build up a denomination, but to save immortal souls. They would put aside that Dr. Chapman and his associates have done. They would shake the cities and the states from centre to circumference.

One of the most farseeing acts Dr. Chapman ever did for the advancement of a gospel movement was to combine evangelists of different ecclesiastical denominations into a unit for the spreading of the gospel. Dr. Chapman is a Presbyterian, and is laboring under the orders of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. Dr. Henry Ostrum, his associate, is a Methodist. Tilman Hobson is a Quaker, Rev. R. W. Stough is a Congregationalist. B. A. Walton belongs to the Southern Presbyterian Church—here there were no northern and southern churches—John K. Ellott is a Dutch Reformed minister. All sectarian fences have been burned in these evangelistic meetings. Why cannot we do the same every year as gospel ministers? Let Presbyterian differ in doctrine. Let us have a forward movement. Yes, let us also a united movement for Christ.

Every evangelistic meeting is a choir in his own ecclesiastical row, whereas, in fact and in truth, there is but little difference in these creeds. They all end in having their sheaves of wheat deposited at the foot of the cross. Why cannot we work hand in hand with other Christian denominations? Are we not all servants of Christ? The Presbyterian differs in doctrine from the Methodist, the Congregationalist from the Presbyterian church government from the Episcopalian, but all give the same answer to the question, "What must I do to be saved?" Every evangelical denomination points the finger to Christ as the one and only source of salvation. Once, gospel laborers ought to make us all one. Oh, for gospel forces united and welded together! Oh, that the churches of all the Protestant denominations might utter into a concerted and single purposed movement for Christ, as was done in this great gospel campaign on the Pacific Coast, which has won thousands of souls for the Master!

I cannot close without an expression of gratitude to the evangelists who have visited us. I honor all evangelists. We realize how much these evangelists have put into their work! All the joys-of home life, all the sweet fellowship with their people that the regular pastorate enjoys these men must all be surrendered by the evangelist who goes from city to city to arouse and stimulate the churches. We thank God that for ten years the only home he had was a trunk. Let us honor such men, and devote themselves to their glorious service. The church of Christ benefits by their labors, and too often it forgets the hardships they undergo.

I want you to pray for God's evangelists. Pray for them when, tired and fatigued, they go to their lonely rooms in an hotel. Pray for Dr. R. A. Torrey and Alexander, far far away from home. Pray for these friends, Dr. Chapman and his associates, who are now going up and down the land, who have lately been among us. May their joy be the peace that passeth all understanding. May their happiness be gained from the fact that they are winning many, many souls for Christ. God bless the gospel evangelists, that they may teach us gladly to do the Father's will, whether it be like Paul in far-off Macedonia, or in our home Tarsus, "which is no mean city."

The Cinque Ports.

What are known as the cinque ports of England (cinque being the French for five) are Sandwich, Dover, Hythe, Romney and Hastings. It is said that these five ports were enfranchised in the time of the Saxon King Edward the Confessor, but it was subsequent to the battle of Hastings, 1066, that William the Conqueror, in order that he might secure the resources of the seaports with greater vigor, constituted this whole line of coast, with its jurisdiction entirely separate from the Counties of Kent and Sussex, and erected it into a sort of principality, under a warden or guardian, the seat of whose administration was in Dover Castle. The warden, whose office corresponded to that of the ancient count of the Saxon coast, exercised jurisdiction, civil, military and naval, uniting in his single person the duties of sheriff, custos rotulorum, Lord-Lieutenant and Admiral. Privileges equal to those originally bestowed on the cinque ports were subsequently extended to the so-called ancient towns of Winchelsea and Rye; and most of the municipal towns had subordinate ports and towns attached to them, which were called members.

Jiu Jitsu.

The jiu jitsu trick recently imported afresh from Japan is not exactly a style of wrestling.

There are tricks that make the opponent suddenly and utterly helpless. There are grips which, however, if they do not break the victim's wrist. There are pinches that paralyze nerves and cause agony for the second before the victim is released. Then there are deft and sudden ways of breaking bones and of dislocating them, and giving a slight jar that was quishing tilt to an opponent who is off his centre of gravity and tricks him into the victim's brain whirl.

A woman equipped with the jiu jitsu can throw a strong man down and then proceed to tie his hands.

After this let him be anathematized as such a thing as he never saw a good epitaph.

Restored to health by a wonderful Curative Liquid composed of Healing Gums, Balsams, Barks, etc.

This Liquid is called the

O. R. KIDNEY CURE

Miss Emma Monroe, Trenton, Ont., says: "I suffered for a number of years with nervousness and back-ache. I then got a distressing hacking cough that took hold of me. I commenced to feel weak and felt very miserable every way.

I consulted two doctors; both said I had quick consumption and could only live a few months. One doctor who had used O. R. KIDNEY CURE, told me he had used it successfully in many cases of kidney trouble. I commenced to use; and, before I had finished six bottles, I felt like a new girl. That was two years ago, and to-day I am perfectly well and happy."

O. R. KIDNEY CURE is sold by all druggists, 50c per bottle; or write to the O. R. MEDICINE COMPANY, LIMITED, Toronto.

Healthy Lungs.

Depend Upon Rich, Red Blood—Poor Blood Means Weak Lungs and Fatal Consumption.

Every drop of blood in the body must go through the lungs. That is why the lungs are helped and healed and strengthened with the great blood-builder, Dr Williams' Pink Pills. They fill the veins with pure, rich red blood that gives health and vigor to weak lungs. That is the way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills brace the lungs to throw off bronchitis and heavy colds. That is the way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills build up the lungs after an attack of la grippe or pneumonia. That is the way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved hundreds in Canada from consumptives' graves. No other medicine does this work so speedily and so well. Mrs. Jane A. Kennedy, Douglastown, Que., says: "My sister, a young and delicate girl, took a severe cold when about seventeen years old. Nothing we did for her seemed to do any good, and we feared she was going into consumption. Often after a bad night I would get up early to see if she had spit blood during the night. My sister was urged me to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and within a month from the time she had begun their use, she had almost recovered her health. Under the continued use of the Pills she is now well and strong."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills not only make weak lungs strong, but they cure all troubles arising from a poor or deficient blood supply, such as indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, general weakness, St Vitus dance, headaches and backaches, female troubles, palpitation of the heart, and the special secret ailments of young girls and women. Insist upon the genuine with the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around each box. If your dealers cannot supply you, they are sold by mail, at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If it continues long enough, Piles can be caused by congestion or stagnation of blood in the lower bowels, and it takes an operation to remove the cause. Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Rold is a tablet taken internally.

It gives permanent cure, and no case of Piles has ever been found it failed to cure. Don't go back on it if it does.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

The Moulster—I stopped in to see if you would let your daughter join the choir?

Mrs. Wise—Oh, no! It's quite impossible, she has such a lack of music composition, and I don't want to spoil her.

Often what appear to be the most trivial occurrences of life prove to be the most momentous. Many are apt to regard a cold as a slight thing, deserving of little consideration, and this neglect often results in most serious ailments entailing years of suffering. Drive out colds and coughs with Hagyard's Anti-Consumptive, the recognized remedy for all affections of the throat and lungs.

Tom—Are you deaf to my pleading? Ella—I am.

Tom—But what if I were to offer you a diamond ring?

Ella—Oh, I am not stone deaf.

A Wise Sphere of Usefulness.—The consumption of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has grown to great proportions. Notwithstanding the fact that it has now been on the market for over thirty one years, its prosperity is as great as ever, and the demand for it in that period has very greatly increased. It is beneficial in all coughs, colds and sore throat, introduced fresh supplies are constantly asked for.

The Child—And Mary, nurse says when it thunders it's the angels at skittles in the sky.

Aunt Mary—Perhaps it is, dear.

The Child—Well, I don't see what angels can't be so much afraid of, for everything to-day kept brush my teeth.

"Bridget, didn't I hear you quarrelling with the milkman this morning?" "Sure not, Mr. Hinks' gyurl's sick and I was inquirin' after her. But he's an ongodly rapscallion."

"How's that?"

"Sure not, Mr. Hinks' gyurl's sick and he's inquirin' after her. But he's an ongodly rapscallion."

Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator has the largest sale of any similar preparation sold in Canada. It always gives satisfaction by restoring health to the little ones.

"I didn't suppose you Kentuckians ever put water in your whiskey, colonel."

"Yaas, suh, some Kentuckians do, but they sell it, suh."

Present Disorder.—At the first symptoms of internal disorder, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills should be taken immediately. Two or three of these salutary pellets, taken before going to bed, followed by doses of one or two pills for two or three nights in succession, will serve as a preventive of attacks of dyspepsia and all the diseases forth which follow in the train of that foul disorder. The means are simple when the way is known.

Singleton—After a man is dead he is soon forgotten.

Seconhurst—Yes, as a rule; but the poor jay who is married to his widow is never allowed to forget him.

He—I told your father that I just dote on you.

She—And what did he say?

He—That I had better find an antidote.

Do Not Delay.—When, through debilitated digestive organs, poison finds its way into the blood, the prime consideration is to get the poison out as rapidly and as thoroughly as possible. Delay may mean disaster. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a most valuable and effective medicine to assail the intruder with. They never fail. They go at once to the seat of the trouble and work a permanent cure.

"Your father," said the man at the door, who was taking names for the city directory, "is a blacksmith, I believe."

"Papaw is quite wealthy now," replied the woman haughtily, "you may put him down as a 'black-smyther.'"

Cordelia—"Yes, I screamed when George kissed me."

Pauline—Each time, or only once?

Beggar—Kind lady, won't you help a poor man wot's out at de knees?

Kind Lady—How came you to be out at the knees?

Beggar—Why er er prayin' for work, ma'am.

WHAT CAUSES SNORING.

When asleep, the mouth and nose breathe through the mouth instead of the nostrils which are choked with catarrh. Just use "Catarrhozone" before retiring and you'll quickly cure the snoring habit. By healing the cause of catarrh and healing the membranes, Catarrhozone makes a complete cure in every case. It cleans the nostrils, stops the discharge and prevents dropping in the throat in a few minutes. Nothing so pleasant or certain to cure snoring, catarrh or colds as Catarrhozone—that's worth remembering.

A WONDERFUL FACTORY.

The Sleepless and Busy Workmen of the Human Body.

Andrew Wilson, the English scientist, says the human body is a wonderful factory. The workmen are the cells' which form the essential parts of every gland. Indeed cells appear before us as the veritable workmen of the whole body, nerve cells, nerve cells, which rule us, to the cells that build up and produce our bones. Now, in the glands of the body these workmen, each a microscopic unit of protoplasm or living matter, discharge the function of making from the blood whatever product a gland may offer as its contribution to life's processes. The cells which compose our liver are bile makers in addition to their performing certain other curious works expressing the liver's duties. Other cells in the glands of our eyes manufacture our tears. Others again secrete the gastric juice by which the food is acted upon in the stomach. A fourth set of cells produces pancreatic juice in the sweetbread, and a fifth set supplies the saliva.

"Tears, saliva and bile and so forth are all employed directly through their being poured outward on the food or into various parts of the body and that lubricates our joints represents a selection which is perpetually being produced and maintained between the surfaces that move one upon another. When, however, we come to consider 'internal secretions' a very different state of matters falls to be noted. Here we meet with substances that are not poured outwardly, but inwardly. The work of internal secretion is performed by certain glands. The thyroid gland in the neck is one of them. This is a gland which grows very large in goiter or 'Derbyshire neck,' an ailment of hard water districts. If the secretion of this gland is not duly added to the blood disease of a very distinct type appears, and it is cured when the physician administers to the patient the thyroid gland substance of the sheep.

"Gives the sweetbread itself, though it does make a definite fluid of use in digestion, seems also to supply a something necessary to the blood, for we find that diseases in delays of more serious type when the sweetbread is involved. Such discoveries bring us to the very limit of present day research into living functions. Their most gratifying feature in addition to their throwing light on life's workings is that which places in the hands of the physician knowledge both of the cause of disease and of its cure."

OBITUARY.

ELIZABETH SCOTT.

Deceased was born in Scotland. She came to Canada at the age of thirteen in 1835 she married John Coburn, of Kingston. Shortly after their marriage they came to Camden. They had eight children, George, of Ludington, Mich.; John, of Port Arthur, Ont.; William Smith, of Brownlow; Mrs. Lockridge, of Camden; Mrs. T. Penny, of Camden; and Mr. Wm. Coburn, on the homestead; also Mrs. J. Fleming and Mrs. T. Cameron, who survive. Mrs. John Coburn was one of the oldest residents of the fifth concession of Camden. She was a liberal supporter of the regular attendant and a faithful member of the Presbyterian church, and was highly appreciated by the wives of her children and neighbors. After a painful illness of several weeks she passed away on Thursday, 9th Feb., aged 88 years, 6 months and 16 days. Through faith in Christ Jesus, her end was peace.

CURING A COLD.

The season of colds and coughs is at hand. What can we do about them? How can we get rid of them? If we are duly vigorous they will probably wear off; if not, then if we do nothing if we let them run on, they may lead to something worse—chronic bronchitis, pleurisy, pneumonia. We "catch cold" because there is something wrong with our system. Climatic conditions are largely responsible, but there are other factors. Microbes of some sort are at the bottom of the trouble. We are always exposed to these more or less, but if the system is in proper condition it resists their attacks.

As the autumn advances street watering ceases, the dust blows in clouds and there is less sunlight to kill the microbes that the dust carries. The air is colder and more humid, our pores are congested, the function of the skin in excreting waste matter from the system is diminished. Consequently, more work is thrown upon other organs; they are likely to prove unequal to it, more toxic matter, therefore, is carried through the system by the blood and with it disease is generated in the most susceptible parts. We also get less fresh air, there is less ventilation in sleeping rooms and in offices than in summer. But oxygen is needed to keep the blood in the right state.

Meanwhile in the cold weather time we are exposed to the assaults of millions of additional microbes which we are not in good condition to resist. At first we feel a sort of soreness in the nasal cavity. Perhaps if we at once take proper measures we may be all right. If not, the inflammation will extend to the throat and the bronchial tubes. A cough follows and this may persist definitely. The chill humidity of the season is bad for us; it checks the respiration of the skin and aggravates the disorder. Nothing could be worse than to obey the proverbial injunction, "Feed a cold and starve a fever." A cold means congestion; if we stuff ourselves, if we drink whiskey or other alcoholic beverages, we simply add fuel to the flame. We need to kill the germs, to clear out the waste, to tone up the system. Germicidal gargles, etc., may help, but it is important to aid the system to fight the microbes. Hence the first thing should be a good cathartic and purgative—this along with advantage be taken two days in succession. At the same time some tonic should be employed, something that would improve the physical condition. Care should be taken about the food; it should be wholesome, not excessive nor too nitrogenous. Since the excess of toxic products in the blood that causes rheumatism also causes the congestion which we call a "cold" the same things that help the former are also good for the latter, particularly the drinking of an abundance of water, and the remedies that tend to eliminate uric acid. The main things are to live temperately, breathe as much pure air as possible, sleep well, and take all the exercise practicable while guarding against exhausting fatigue.

HELEN KELLER

The World's Most Remarkable College Graduate

The story of Helen Keller's life is the biography of two wonderful women—the blind, deaf and dumb girl, who for over twenty years has fought against awful odds; and the kind, ingenious patient teacher who has led her charge into the sunlight of knowledge and of kinship with humanity.

In 1886, when Miss Annie Sullivan was called to Tuscumbia, Ala., to assume the care of Helen, the child had been living for nearly five years in the mental darkness that followed her treble affliction resulting from convulsions. The task of education seemed well-nigh hopeless, for the one sense through which the child's mind was to be awakened to consciousness was her sense of touch. But in June, 1904, eighteen years later, Miss Keller graduated from Radcliffe with distinction, and received her degree of B. A.

This fairy tale of education, this romance of the conquest of obstacles, is a superb triumph of concentration. At her entrance examination in June, 1900, as if Nature had not sufficiently handicapped her efforts, she had to submit to two additional trials. The questions were given her in the American Braille system of writing for the blind, with which Miss Keller was only slightly familiar, having learned the English Braille—the two systems being as different as two distinct systems of shorthand. This delay in puzzling out the translation of the questions was further aggravated by the fact that their little Swiss watch with raised figures had unfortunately been left at home, so she had no means of gauging the time, yet her typewriter clicked out the answers and she "passed" with flying colors in every study.

During her college career, in many studies Miss Sullivan repeated the lesson while Helen's fragile fingers feathering their way over her mentor's face, translated the muscular motions of speech into ideas. She studied English, Latin, French, Greek, German, political economy, logic, higher mathematics, chemistry and all the other myriad phases of higher education through her wonderful fingers.

She uses the typewriter in five languages, has learned to speak with clear articulation, can swim, row, play cards, chess and basketball; dance, and perform a hundred other seemingly impossible things. Her memory is marvellous, her temperament sunshiny and happy; her mind is wonderfully broad, subtle and thorough, and her book, "The Story of My Life," besides being great as a biography, is the most important work of the century on psychology as a revelation of the human mind, its methods and possibilities.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by W. C. Mack, at the Department of Agriculture.

MADOLE & WILSON

A Public Benefactor.

The name of Mr. Harvey Warner is so familiar to the readers of The Beaver that such a sketch of his career as could be published by us would add very little information to what is already known by nearly every one who peruses these pages. Old and young, rich and poor alike know Mr. Warner, and owing to his genial disposition each one feels that he is their personal friend, as indeed he is. His name has become a household word in Lennox and Addington. As one desiring an illustration of an honest, straightforward man, whose word is always as good as his bond, would naturally single out Mr. Warner. He is an adherent of the Methodist church and the most liberal supporter it has in this part of the country. In politics Mr. Warner is a staunch Liberal, and has frequently been urged to allow his name to be put forward as a candidate for municipal and parliamentary honors, but he has steadfastly declined to enter that arena. He is of a particularly cheerful disposition. The little children salute him on the street as they pass and never fail to receive in return a hearty recognition and a pleasant smile. Mr. Warner was born at Wilton about seventy years ago, and until the death of his father, the late Sidney Warner, which occurred in 1885, was associated with him in mercantile business. Wagner's Hall at Wilton was known far and wide, and people came long distances to see the "Yankee Peddler" that they would always be accorded a fair and liberal treatment. Shortly after the father's death, the late Sidney Warner family moved to Napanee. Mr. Warner is now engaged in the manufacture of Napanee and he has an extensive trade throughout the surrounding counties of Frontenac, Lennox and Addington. Numerous are the families in these counties who have been partakers of his bounty. His distress display of any kind, and it is not from him that one gathers any information of his numerous acts of charity. Many an aching heart has been soothed by his kind thoughtfulness, and many a threatening cloud of distress has been dispelled by means of his timely assistance. His last act of providing a recreation ground for the citizens of Napanee in the form of a handsome park, is typical of the man, and it was just like him to present it in the unostentatious manner it was delivered to the Council. The fact that we can never fully assure him that it will be enjoyed and appreciated for all time to come. We trust the town authorities will use every effort to beautify the park in accordance with Mr. Warner's wishes. Mr. Warner's many friends will be very sorry to learn that he has suffered a great deal lately from an affection of his eyes, and it is sincerely hoped that the treatment he is undergoing at present will result in removing the trouble that has given him so much anxiety.

THE ENGLISH PUBLIC SERVICE.

Prof. W. S. Milner, Toronto University, gave a most interesting and instructive lecture in the Town Hall last Friday night, the fourth of the Collegiate Institute series. Owing to other attractions, the attendance was small, but those present were well repaid for the hour spent. At the present stage of Canadian history, the subject of the lecture was most appropriate, tracing as the lecturer did the progress of civil service reform in England from its infancy to its present almost perfect stage of development. Not until something similar is followed in Canada, will the mad rush for political appointments and the venal traffic of our legislators and politicians be stopped

FOR THE YOUNG HOUSEWIFE

Young housewives and girls that are training for the responsibilities of a household will find much that is useful in the little paper-covered book to The Delineator by Isabel Gordon Curtis under the title "The Making of a Housewife." In the April number the topic is "Planning a Week's Work and Wash-Day." The author suggests a methodical division of time and labor that will recommend itself to all who read her remarks. Other features of domestic interest in the same number are illustrated cookery for Easter entertainments and a number of recipes under the topics, "Delicious Hot Breakfast Cakes," "Lenten Soups," "Cheese as a Nutritive Article of Diet," and "Savory Varieties of the Homely Bread Pudding," besides a practical article on "Cleaning and Renovating Garments."

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

We will send you a sample free.

Cornwall Standard—The Hon. J. P. Whitney evidently has a good memory. When a youth attending the High School in Cornwall he was accustomed to enter into poetical discussions with the friends with whom he was living, and on one occasion the lady of the house jokingly remarked, "Oh, you will be Premier some day." But I do," was the laughing response; "I will buy you a new silk gown." The good lady, who resides in the West End, had the incident pleasantly recalled to her mind a few days ago by receiving a parcel from Toronto containing the material for a hand some silk gown.

A SUCCESSFUL NAPANEE BOY.

We clip the following from the Phoenix Pioneer, B.C., which will be of interest to many of our readers, who are always pleased to learn of the success of former Napaneeans. The subject of this sketch is a son of Mr. Wm. Dey, for years a resident and business man of Napanee:

George E. Dey came to Phoenix about four years ago, and establish ed himself in business here as a watchmaker and jeweler. Mr. Dey is a native of Napanee, Ontario, and after a good education and spending the required time to thoroughly acquire a knowledge of his chosen business, he decided to launch out for himself. His brother, O. W. Dey, then being the agent of the C P R. in Phoenix, and believing that there was a good future for this city, decided Mr. Dey to locate in the rising young town of the Boundary.

At first Mr. Dey started business in a modest way, but his close attention to work, and his proved ability to handle anything in his line, soon became known throughout the Boundary and he was forced to largely increase his stock, which he did, carrying almost everything that should be found in a well appointed jewelry establishment. But it was not long as a salesman that Mr. Dey obtained a good reputation in Phoenix; it was not long until he was recognized as one of the best, if not the best, watchmakers and jewelers in the Boundary, and his business increased accordingly. People owning fine chronometers are partcular to whom they entrust them when need ing repairs, and they began coming to Mr. Dey regularly when in need of his services.

One of the best evidences of Mr. Dey's ability is the fact that he was elected some years ago as the time inspector of the C.P.R. for the Boundary country, and has discharged h's duties well that he still holds that position. Officials of the road duty to examine and inspect periodically, and inspectors used by the employees of the C.P.R. in this district.

Mr. Dey is a Free Mason of several years' standing, and a few weeks ago was honored by his fellow members of King Edward Lodge No. 36 of Phoenix, by being chosen as worshipful master of that lodge.

He is also a member of Union No. 9, Napanee. He is also chairman of the board of public school trustees and on the board of managers for St. Andrew's Presbyterian church.

The Woman who Would And The Grocer who wouldn't.

Every day from five to fifteen letters are received by The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. from women living in the smaller towns throughout Canada, saying they have asked their grocer for Royal Household Flour but can't get it. One writes—"I told my grocer, Mr.----, that I would buy 'Royal Household' regularly if he would always keep it on hand, but he said he wouldn't take on another brand of flour until he was obliged to." Another says—"My grocer is an 'old fogie' and never gets the newest or the best things until the year after." A third says—"We haven't an enterprising grocer in our town and are obliged to send to------for 'Royal Household' or take a poorer flour."

Write direct to Ogilvie's.

If you can't get "Royal Household" from your grocer, write to us direct—we will immediately give you the name of the nearest grocer who keeps "Royal Household" and send you also the "Royal Household" recipes. There is no good reason why your grocer should compel you to use inferior flour—no first class grocer will hesitate to order "Royal Household" for you, and even the smallest dealer will get it if you insist upon it.

MARCH CANADIAN MAGAZINE.

For interesting illustrations and variety of contents, the March Canadian Magazine is noteworthy. The first of a highly illustrated series of the Russo-Japanese War show considerable care on the part of the publishers, and a high standard for Canadian printers. The article on the Cornwall Canal Lighting Contract should attract considerable attention. The article is well stated, from a purely business standpoint, while the illustrations add to the illuminating explanations. Frederick Rhandon's sketch of Professor Robertson will no doubt be widely read, for it is well done. The article on "Agricultural Progress in Quebec," with its striking portraits of families of thirteen and sixteen children, is pleasing as well as informative. Prof. Thomson, a brother of Silton Thompson, writes on "The Taxation of Fraebishop." Douglas Sladen has a message for the public in his "Future Calls Upon the Empire." Albert R. Carman deals with the unwholesome subject of "Tipping." The stories are five in number, the authors being W. Eweld Field, H. M. Walbrook, Wilbert Durie, James W. Falconer and Eric Rohn. The frontispiece, "To the Victory of Brave Peace," presents a famous incident in the Metabele wars.

PASTURE CROPS.

By Prof. C. A. Zavitz.

The area of cleared land devoted to pasture in Ontario per acre is nearly three million acres, and that devoted to hay and clover to about two and one-half million acres annually. A large number of varieties of grasses and clovers have been grown in the Experimental Department of the Ontario Agricultural College, both singly and in combination, for pasture and for hay. The mixture of seed now used for the production of pasture for a two years' stand in the short rotation on the College farm is as follows: Red Clover, 2 lbs.; Alsike Clover, 2 lbs.; Timothy, 4 lbs.; and Orchard Grass, 5 lbs., making a total of 13 lbs. per acre. This mixture can also be used for hay, but when the chief aim is the production of hay, the Orchard Grass is not included and only 13 lbs. of seed per acre is sown.

Farmers frequently write in the spring of the year, stating that through lack of germination of the grass and clover seed the killing of the plants by the hot dry weather of the summer, or the heaving of the clover in the early part of the year, our crops is likely to be deficient in the coming season, and asking what they can sow in the spring of the year that will furnish the best pasture in the same season. In each of four years we conducted an experiment in testing fourteen different kinds of crops for the production of pasture in the same season in which the seed was sown. As a result of these experiments we find that we can get better returns from a combination of varieties than from any one variety sown by itself. The following mixture, when sown in the spring, is likely to be ready for use at about six weeks after the seed is sown and to give good satisfaction in furnishing pasture throughout the summer, oats, one and one-half bushels; early Amber sugar cane, thirty pounds, and common red clover, seven pounds, making a total of eighty-eight pounds of seed per acre.

Sometimes a farm contains a considerable amount of comparatively rough land, or fields which lie at a long distance from the buildings, and the owner is anxious to use a mixture of grasses and clovers which will make a permanent pasture. From twenty years' results in testing different varieties of grasses and clovers, both singly and in combination, we would suggest the following mixture, for permanent pasture on an average soil, Orchard grass, 4 lbs.; Meadow fescue, 4 lbs.; tall oat grass 3 lbs.; timothy, 2 lbs.; meadow foxtail, 2 lbs.; red top, 2 lbs.; alsike clover, 2 lbs.; and white clover, 1 lb.; thus making a total of 24 pounds of seed per acre. Some of these varieties produce grass very early in the spring; while others are later and furnish a good bite during the hot dry weather which occurs frequently in the months of July and August. The seed can be sown in early spring either with or without a grain crop. Such a mixture as this, when once well established on suitable land, should form a pasture abounding in growth, excellent in quality, and permanent in character.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

To Editor Napanee Beaver.

Dear Sir,—The reply of Mr. Wilson, M.P., to article in the "World" Week's re Canadian attitude to the United States, voices well the large majority of thought of the Canadian people. We are by no way anxious or desirous of imbibing all the grand and glorious principles of our American cousins, while mostly consists in plants, that "we are the people of morality, laws, wars, education, etc. Little short of perfection, in every good way and walk of life, indigestible and will produce nausea.

It surely is to be proud of our own to cry it up, but that is not always good first. The Hon. Edward Blake advocated 'Canada for Canadians.' Would it not be well to follow such good advice? If our friends to the South desire more territory, there are islands yet to be had by conquest and their control and management of them will be like a school to Great Britain, which she will not dread ily follow.

Leave us, a poor, miserable, know nothing, plodding slow crew of Canucks to paddle our own canoes.

Apologizing for taking up space, and thoroughly endorsing the sentiments of the Hon. Member for Lennox.

Yours truly,
NANCY BLINKS.

The Yellow Holly

BY FERGUS HUME.

"Jealousy, Mr. Brendon, sheer jealousy. I heard her talking of you and wishing to marry you. You see, I love her."

"So she told me."

"Quite so, and she informed me that she had informed you. Well, I was a trifle jealous, as I'd lay down my life to make that lady Mrs. Bawdsey. But when I learned that you admired and were almost engaged to Miss Ward"—

"You seem to know a great deal about me," said Brendon, nettled.

"I made it my business to find out, sir."

George looked at him helplessly. He found it difficult to understand what all this meant. "Of course I know, from what Lola said, that you are a private detective," he remarked, with hesitation.

"Vidocq & Co.," said Bawdsey, blankly, "23 Augusta street, Strand. That's me, Mr. Brendon, but you needn't mention it in this shanty."

"Will you answer a few questions, Mr. Bawdsey?" asked George.

"Yes. Fire ahead."

"You are a private detective?" asked George.

"That's so. Vidocq & Co.—an attractive title, I guess."

"And you were employed by Lola to watch me?"

"I was. Love will do anything for the object of its affections."

"Humph! There are different ways of looking at that. But you were also engaged by Lord Derrington to watch me."

Bawdsey did not display the least surprise. "That's very creditable to your observation, Mr. Brendon. It's true."

"How did Lord Derrington find out that I was passing under the name of George Brendon?"

"Well, sir, if you will subscribe advertisements in the paper asking about the celebration of the marriage of Per Wyvern and Miss Rosina Lockwood I'm afraid you'll be dropped upon."

"And you looked me up?"

"Quite so. I have had you under observation for the last six months. Any questions to ask?"

"Only one," replied George. "Will you tell me exactly what you are doing here?"

Certainly. You shall have the whole story, Mr. Brendon, but in the first place I shall ask you a question in my turn. Do you know why I asked you to come and see me today?"

Brendon shook his head. "I have not the least idea," he confessed.

"I'll enlighten you," was the other man's reply. "To warn you that you are in danger of arrest."

"I in danger of arrest?" George jumped up. "What do you mean?"

"Oh, my meaning is clear enough. There is a chance that you may be accused of having murdered Mrs. Jersey."

George dropped back into his chair with a white face. "You must be mad to say such a thing. Who accuses me?"

"Lord Derrington."

"On what grounds?"

"On certain information he obtained from Mrs. Ward. She is your bitter enemy. You see, Mr. Brendon, it is not her game that you should marry the daughter. Mrs. Ward knows that you are a clever man with a will of your own and that she will not be able to twist you around her finger, which is what she wishes to do with any son-in-law who may come her way. She will stick at nothing to get you out of the way."

"But she doesn't know that I claim to be Lord Derrington's grandson?"

"Indeed, she does," replied Bawdsey quickly. "Derrington told her all about it."

"Why?"

"Now, that," said Bawdsey, shaking his head and looking puzzled, "is one of the things I can't make out."

George thought for a moment. "I was at Mrs. Ward's the other evening," he said slowly. "Lord Derrington was there. Did he know then that I was his grandson?"

"He did. He has known ever since you put the advertisement in the paper and I looked you up."

"And Mrs. Ward knew also who I was?"

Bawdsey nodded. "Yes. And after that evening she came to see Lord Derrington to suggest how you should be got rid of."

"Ah!" George was now perfectly

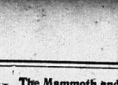
The Mammoth and the Mosquito



What has come to pass in thousands of years seems hardly credible. Man, a weakling in comparison to modern man, was able to conquer the huge monsters of thousands of years ago, such as the Mammoth, and to-day they are dead forever, yet the mosquito and fly have never been conquered. It is now time for the scientist to devise methods for killing the mosquito and fly, so that they will go to join the mammoth and the monster lizards. The mosquitoes and flies are dangerous enemies of man because they spread contagion. The mosquito often carries the germ of malaria with his bite. The fly rapidly spreads germs of disease over our food. These bacterial germs, ever hunting for the weak spot, find a place in our blood, and then we suffer from grip, catarrh, consumption or malaria.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., says: "There would be no grip epidemics, the germs of consumption, or malaria would find no place in the human economy, if the blood were pure, if the lungs, heart and other organs were fed on good blood. Poisons should not be allowed to accumulate in the body; to be safe it is best to take a gentle laxative at least once a week." Such a vegetable laxative as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets contains nothing which could harm the system.

For putting the blood in order, and as a tissue-builder and tonic for those weakened by coughs, colds, catarrh, grip, nothing will build one up quicker than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This is a medicine made entirely of roots and herbs, without the use of alcohol.

co as he saw that Bawdsey, being so frank, was ready to be his friend. "A d how did she propose to do that, Mr. Bawdsey? By having me arrested"—

"With the alternative that you should give up all attempts to prove your birth and go to Australia."

"And surrender my claim to Miss Ward's hand?"

"Of course. It's a case of threatening Mr. Brendon."

"Was Lord Derrington agreeable to this suggestion?"

"Yes. He hates you and told me to see you and put the matter to you. You have a week to think it over, and at the end of that time, Mr. Brendon, if you don't leave England you will be arrested."

"No," replied Brendon calmly, "I will not be arrested. Setting aside the fact that there is no evidence which implicates me in the crime, Lord Derrington, for his own sake, will not have his grandson arrested and his dirty linen washed in public. Whether there was a marriage or not, I am his flesh and blood. What's your game?"

"I can't say, sir. He never explained, but he does hate you."

"Humph! I see no reason. A man can't help his birth, but I am quite as presentable as Walter Vane."

"Much more so," said Bawdsey quickly. "He is a fool and a miserable little beast. He sent a bracelet to Miss Velez."

"Oh, and naturally you think the worst of him. Well, it is no use my conjecturing the reason of Lord Derrington's dislike, but I can well understand why Mrs. Ward wishes me out of the way. On what grounds does she accuse me of being concerned in this crime?"

"On the strength of a story related by a friend of yours, Hyde"—

"I knew it," interrupted Brendon, starting up and beginning to pace the room. "That was why she asked Leonard Train to dine with her."

"She got out of him that you had been in the sitting room of Mrs. Jersey at midnight."

"That is untrue," began George vigilently, when Bawdsey stopped him.

"So it is, to Mrs. Ward, to Lord Derrington and to the public, but, so far as I am concerned, Mr. Brendon, it is a fact. You were in Mrs. Jersey's room about the time she was murdered."

"How can you know that?" asked George quickly and very pale.

"Oh, I can prove it easily enough, and I will soon. But confess."

"That I did not murder the woman? No; I never laid a finger on her."

"I believe that," said Bawdsey. "If I thought you were guilty I should—no, not even then. You saved my life, and I'm grateful."

"I believe you are my friend," said George gloomily, sitting down.

"You would have been arrested by now were I not, Mr. Brendon."

"No. I tell you neither Mrs. Ward nor Lord Derrington will go so far. They will try to intimidate me, but they won't succeed."

"You'll fight them?"

George set his face. "While there is breath in my body."

"I knew you were a plucky one," said Bawdsey admiringly, "but you should be aware that your position is perilous."

"One moment," said Brendon. "Why does Train believe that I was in Mrs. Jersey's room?"

"He found beside the table a yellow holly berry, and you wore"—

George started. "I did—I did," he muttered. "I must have been brushed off the sprig when I stooped to touch her."

"Ah!" said Bawdsey in a voice of triumph. "Then you admit you were in the room?"

"Yes, to you, but to no one else."

"I'm glad you trust me so far," said Bawdsey, genially. "Your confidence is not misplaced, Mr. Brendon. And you saw Mrs. Jersey?"

"I saw her body. She was dead."

"At what time was that?"

"About 12 o'clock."

"Why did you not give the alarm?"

"What?" George smiled derisively. "You think I should have put the rope round my neck?"

"No, but—well, no matter. We can talk of that later. But as to getting out of this room, when the door was locked?"

"I didn't get out of this room, Mr. Bawdsey," I"—

"Wait a bit. Come into the room you slept in," said the detective, leading the way. "I have made a discovery."

The bedroom was in the same condition as when Brendon had last seen it, with the exception that the wardrobe was moved, and placed by the door at the back, which divided the room from the passage, appeared a blank, but on touching a spring a masked door opened. Shelves were within, and it was evident that this door formed the back of a cupboard that was in the passage—a cupboard used by the housemaid, as was apparent from the dust shovel and brooms lying within it. For a moment Bawdsey left the door open and looked at Brendon with quiet triumph. Then he snapped the door to and the wall appeared in its former blank condition. No one, without making a close examination, would have suspected the presence of that secret door. "A housemaid might open the cupboard door in the passage at any time," explained Mr. Bawdsey, accounting for his action, "and it would never do for her to look through the back of the shelves into this room. She might talk, Mr. Brendon, and then there would be trouble. Yes"—Bawdsey rubbed his nose and looked at the astonished George—"I am sure there would be great trouble."

"I congratulate you on your cleverness, Mr. Bawdsey," said Brendon when he had somewhat recovered. "You have discovered my secret. I should like to know how you discovered it."

"Well," said Bawdsey, pushing the wardrobe back to its place with an effort, "you see what I found through the advertisement that George Brendon was the grandson of Lord Derrington I told him of it. He related your history."

"Including the murder of my father?"

"Yes, including that," replied Bawdsey, with a queer expression, "but that has nothing to do with the matter in hand, Mr. Brendon."

"I'm not so sure," retorted George. "I should not be at all surprised to find that Mrs. Jersey was murdered to keep her quiet on that point."

"How do you make that out?"

"Well, she was in San Remo at the time my father was murdered. She loved him, and I dare say, in spite of having been discharged, watched him. She might know who the lady in blue—But I forgot, you are ignorant of all these things."

"Not at all. Don't I tell you that Lord Derrington told me the whole story? I see what you mean, but I think that Mrs. Jersey might know who killed your father, and for the sake of shutting her up the assassin committed the second murder."

"That is my idea," said George coolly.

"It's ingenious, but it won't hold water. However, we can talk of that on another occasion. In the meantime I wish to tell you how I discovered the secret door."

"There's no need to. Derrington told you that I knew this house, as my grandfather had brought me up in it. You, however, in making Mrs. Ward that I had passed a night here and learned through her, by means of Train, that the yellow holly berry had been found in the woman's sitting room, you set to work to find out how I escaped from this room. You knew that Train had locked the door."

"Yes," answered Bawdsey, "he told Mrs. Ward that."

"He seems to have told her everything. However, to make a long story short, you hunted for an exit and you found it."

"That's so," replied Bawdsey quietly. "And now we had better return to the sitting room and talk over the matter quietly."

"One moment," said George, "have you told Lord Derrington or Mrs. Ward of this discovery?"

"No, and I won't tell them, either. I wish to get you out of trouble, Mr. Brendon. They haven't the least idea that you could leave the room, and the impression with them is that Train is screening you. If I am to help you I must know all."

"Then you shall know—whatever I can tell you." George hesitated, and Bawdsey guessed that he was not going to be so frank as was necessary. However, he made no remark, and Brendon continued: "I came to this house to see Mrs. Jersey and get the truth out of her. It was my intention to speak to her the next morning, but even, in the drawing room she stated that she wished the company to dispense at 10 o'clock, as she had business to attend to. Also, she came up to this room to see if I and my friend were in bed at 11. I guessed that she intended to see some one, and, wondering if the expected person had anything to do with my business, I determined to sit up in my room all night. When Train was asleep I locked my bedroom door and made use of the cupboard. As a boy I discovered the cupboard, and I am ashamed to say that I sometimes made use of it in my teens to go to the theater unbeknown to my grandfather. On that night I used it again and went to the sitting room of Mrs. Jersey. It was about 12 o'clock. The door of the room was closed. I opened it and saw her sitting at the table, dead, as she was discovered in the morning. In stooping over her to see if she still breathed the berry must have fallen."

"What did you do when you found that the woman was dead?"

"I returned to my bedroom and said nothing about it. You see, since I wanted something from Mrs. Jersey, and that desire might have come out in the evidence, there was every chance that I would be accused of having murdered her. There was certainly motive enough."

"I don't agree with you," replied Bawdsey; "however, I quite understand that under the circumstances you lost your nerve. You returned to your room and expressed suitable surprise the next morning."

George nodded. "Quite so, and then Train's having locked this door made me think that all was safe. Had he not told"—

"Oh, he has told very little," rejoined Bawdsey. "After all, nothing can be done if I hold my tongue."

"Nothing will be done in any case," said George grimly, "but I thank you for warning me, Mr. Bawdsey. What are your plans?"

"I have none at present. Lord Derrington asked me to watch you."

"That you certainly have done, and if you choose you can go on watching me. But why do you stop in this house?"

"Oh, I knew Mrs. Jersey some years ago and returned here for old times' sake."

George shrugged his shoulders. He felt convinced that Bawdsey was not speaking openly. But then Brendon, on his part, had held something back. Neither man was sufficiently sure of the other to be perfectly frank.

George rose to go.

"Well, how do we stand?" asked Bawdsey.

"Much as we did before," replied George, "save that I know you will hold your tongue and not get me into trouble."

"I shall certainly do that. But remember Mrs. Ward."

"Lord Derrington can stop her mouth."

"Ah, but will he?" asked Bawdsey dubiously.

"I shall call on Lord Derrington and see," answered Brendon, and, with a nod, left the room.

CHAPTER XII.

ORIGINALLY Lord Derrington had started life with a sufficiently imperious will, and, thanks to his position as a titled and wealthy orphan, had been enabled to exercise it at a very early age. The habit of seeing every one terrified at his mere glance grew upon him, and he became unbearable not only to live with, but even to meet. His wife, after presenting him with two sons, had died gladly, seeing no other way of escaping her tyrant, and the report went that he had browbeaten her out of existence. Derrington would have carried matters to the end of his boys, but he could find no one willing to endure his yoke. Consequently he became one thing of a woman hater and entered the political world. In this he met with a certain amount of opposition, which did him good, and might have trained him into a moderately decent member of society but that his reformation was cut short by his being appointed ambassador to a prominent European power. Here his temper had full swing, and he bullied everybody for three years. At the end of that time he nearly caused a war and was recalled. There were some talk of his being appointed viceroy for India, but those in power had sufficient pity on the country not to send him.

Failing, from his reputation, to get another appointment, Derrington took to quarreling with his sons. Percy, the elder, had a spice of the paternal temper and refused to submit. Consequently he was forbidden the house and received his inheritance in the old man's eyes by marrying Rosina Lockwood. The younger Vane was a fool and completely cowed by his terrible father. He married an equally meek lady, and the two were crushed by the old tyrant. Finally both died as gladly as the late Lady Derrington had done and left Walter Vane to carry on the title. The old lord detested Walter as a milksop, but he refused to acknowledge Percy's offspring for the fool to be cleverer than sheer hatred of Brendon's father.

The meeting with George at Mrs. Ward's had touched the old man deeply. He had never set eyes on Percy's son before, and had no idea that the young fellow was so handsome and clever. Derrington felt that he could take some pride in George as a man who would not permit himself to be bullied. He had as strong a will as his grandfather, and the older man respected him. Moreover, George's refusal to accept an income when he took a feigned name and his determined fight for his birthright pleased the despot. "But for his pride and hatred of the father, Derrington might have acknowledged the marriage." He knew in his own mind that such a marriage had taken place, and that George was legitimate, but he did not know where the ceremony had been celebrated. The sole evidence he possessed was a letter, written by Percy from Paris, stating that he had married Rosina Lockwood. Derrington at the time paid little attention to the fact, and had never thought of inquiring about details from his son, and of course when Percy died it was too late. Mrs. Jersey knew, and Mrs. Jersey had made use of her knowledge, but she never told Derrington anything. Had she done so, her hold over him might have waxed feeble, although owing to her knowledge, and to the old man's determination not to acknowledge George, it could not be done away with altogether.

One afternoon when a card was brought to Derrington he nearly jumped from his seat when he read the name of George Brendon. At first he was inclined to tear up the card and send the pieces out to the insolent young man who dared to trespass on his privacy. But on second thoughts he decided to accord him an interview. He knew that by this time Mr. Bawdsey must have informed George that his grandfather knew him as Brendon, and the old autocrat wished to see for himself how he would behave as pluckily at their second interview as he had done at the first. Moreover, he could not forget the good looks and clever conversation of the young man. It would be absurd to say that Derrington's heart yearned over this unacknowledged heir of the family tree, for according to common report he had no heart. But he certainly felt an unwonted emotion when Brendon, tall and handsome, composed and ready for battle, stepped into the room. Derrington knew that the young man was ready for battle, for he saw the light of war in his eyes.

When the door was closed and the two men alone Derrington took his station on the hearth rug with an imposing expression of countenance. He waited for George to open the war of words, and rather enjoyed being waited in silence. George was not at all embarrassed. He knew perfectly well that he had a difficult task before him and did not shrink from it.

"I am sure you are not surprised to see me, Lord Derrington," said Brendon, fixing his eyes fixed on the old man's grim face.

"Not half so surprised as you were at seeing Bawdsey," said Derrington, not to be outdone in coolness.

George smiled. "I was not at all surprised at seeing the man," he said calmly. "It was my luppy but to resene him from an accident, and it was my intention to call on him."

"For what reason?" asked Derrington, who saw no help betraying astonishment in spite of his self control.

"You must excuse my not answering that question."

"Oh, certainly," replied Lord Derrington, with ironical politeness, "but you are not so diplomatic as I thought."

"Because I decline a reply?"

"Because you allow me to see that you are on good terms with the man I employ. A clever diplomatist would have allowed me to think that Bawdsey was hostile and so have used the man against me."

"There is no need for me to stoop to such crooked ways," said Brendon, with some scorn, "and I always find the truth tells in the long run."

Derrington sat down and leaned his elbow on the table. His temper was rising, as he was not accustomed to be treated in this offhand way. "Come, sir, let us understand one another. State the situation so as to clear the ground for a proper argument."

"Certainly," said George, with frigid politeness. "You know who I am, I understand."

"No, I don't. So far as I know you are George Brendon. I met you at Mrs. Ward's, and"—

"And were good enough to hold a long conversation with me," finished George smartly. "I see, sir, it is necessary for me to be explicit."

"It's the best course," rejoined Derrington, looking at him with hard eyes and secretly admiring his self control.

"Then I have to state that my name is George Vane, and that I am the son of Percy Vane and Rosina Lockwood."

"Indeed! What proof have you of this?"

"The evidence of my nurse, Jane Frazer, who brought me up after my father, your eldest son, was alive. The testimony of my former guardian, Mr. Ireland, who took charge of me after the death of my parents. Finally, my certificate of birth, which I will show you whenever you choose."

Derrington was astounded by this calm answer. He would have blustered, but George's politeness gave him no chance of losing his temper, and without that it would not blow up. "You seem to be well provided with proofs," said he grimly. "Let us admit, for the sake of argument, that you are my grandson. But the marriage"—

"Ah, that is the difficult point! And it is unpleasant for me to talk of the fact, and crowned his injuries to the old man's eyes by marrying Rosina Lockwood. The younger Vane was a fool and completely cowed by his terrible father. He married an equally meek lady, and the two were crushed by the old tyrant. Finally both died as gladly as the late Lady Derrington had done and left Walter Vane to carry on the title. The old lord detested Walter as a milksop, but he refused to acknowledge Percy's offspring for the fool to be cleverer than sheer hatred of Brendon's father.

A CHICAGO ALDERMAN OWES HIS ELECTION TO CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Rosencic, 120 Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago, during a political campaign, I caught a cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my eyes when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on taking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale at The Red Cross Drug Store.

NEWBURGH.

The light snow fall on Friday night was sufficient to delay the R. of Q. Ry. train a few hours on Saturday morning.

On Thursday morning Mrs. Anne Jane Dunn died at the residence of her son, John Dunn, Richmond, after an illness of five weeks, with pneumonia. The late Mrs. Dunn was born at Port Rush near Londonderry, Ireland, nearly 67 years ago. Her maiden name was Dunlop. When the subject of this sketch was ten years old the family came to this country; settling in the Hinch settlement, north of this village, in 1838. Mrs. Dunn was married in the R. C. Church, Centre-ille, to Henry Dunn, who preceded her into eternity ago. 8 children blessed the union, three of whom are living, John, near Desmond, and Thomas and William, of this village. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. Harvey Poul. Camden, and four brothers, William Dunlop and Thomas Dunlop, Camden; John Dunlop, Wilcomsh, and Joseph Dunlop, Philadelphia, N.Y. The late Mrs. Dunn during her lifetime made a large circle of friends who deeply regret her demise. Naturally, of a bright happy disposition her smiling countenance always made her a welcome guest. About five weeks ago she went to the west for a visit. While there she was taken with pneumonia from which she never recovered. In spite of all that loving hands could do the medical skill of the grand l, sank and on Thursday at the bright winter morning was breaking, her spirit "stole away home." The funeral service was held in St. John's church on Saturday afternoon. The church was crowded by a large concourse of friends and neighbors who had come to pay their last respects to one beloved by all who knew her. Rev. C. B. Boys' Clothing, By far the Most Completely Stocked Store in Town.

Judging it by that single standard, there isn't a gathering of Boys' Clothing in town to match it in completeness. We've heard mothers complain of the over-attention to girls' apparel and the neglect to boys. But this gathering of new Spring Clothing silences that argument in a twinkling.

There are at least twenty-five styles of Children's Suits alone—Buster Brown, Rice Sailor Suits, Little Japs, Norfolks, Pleated Suits with lots of little kinks of trimming and tailoring.

CHILDREN'S SUITS—ages 2 1-2 to 10—prices $1.50 up to $5.00.

BOYS' KNICKER SUITS — ages 28 to 34 — three pieces, also two-piece Norfolks; prices $3.00 to $7.50 — bealties at from $5.00 to $7.50.

BOYS' ODD KNICKERS—LION BRAND — Every strain possible in Boys' Knickers, from double seats and knees. They are also guaranteed all wool. Prices—

Spring Suits and Top Coats for Men and Youths.

We've very important news touching this clothing store, this MAN'S STORE and its touch on you—but we have not space for it. We would ask you to come to us as though by our readiness to serve you in all lines. Our stock is very stylish this year—but we have not neglected quality for the sake of style. We have chosen such lins for some intrinsic merit. It must be worth the money or we would not allow it in our stock.

A Special in Men's White Unlaundried Shirts.

You know how difficult it has been lately to get even a half way decent looking Shirt (Unlaundried) to sell at 50c. We, this week, ran across a little lot that is as good as any 75c Shirt we have seen in the market for 6 months. It is reinforced front and back, pocket button hole in the back, endless sleeve, special heavy material, sizes 14 to 17. While they last our price will be 50c each.

All Men's and Boys' Winter Clothing Must Go.

We haven't a Man's Fur coat left. We don't want a Man's or Boys' Overcoat left. For that reason we are offering them at ridiculous discounts. Some say, why it would pay you better to carry them over. But it would as far as dollars and cents is concerned, but we make it an absolute rule to carry nothing over that we can help. Come and see what we are doing.

The Mayor and Councillor Williams waited on the municipal council of North Fredericksburgh on Monday last, asking aid for the proposed canning factory at Napanee. They were given a cordial reception. The members of the council were of the opinion that a by-law to raise the proposed amount would not carry, and thought taking subscriptions from those who would be benefitted the better way. To show their interest in the scheme, the reeve, four councillors and the clerk each subscribed $5.00, and three others present each gave a like sum, making in all $65. It was the opinion of the members of the council that $300 could easily be raised by subscription in the Township.

The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wright was the scene of a very pleasant social gathering on Saturday last, when about twenty of their friends took them by surprise. The evening was spent in games and music, and after the dainty refreshments provided by the guests had been served the company joined hands and sang, "Auld Lang Syne", and "God be with you till we meet again." Farewells were spoken with much regret on either side. Mr. West is one who will be much missed in the community.

"Have by some surgeon, Shylock on thy charge, to stop his wounds lest he do bleed to death." People can bleed to death. The loss of blood weakens the body. It must follow that gain of blood gives the body strength. The strengthening effect of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is in large part due to its action on the blood-making glands and the increased supply of pure, rich blood it produces. It is only when the blood is impoverished and impure that disease finds a soil in which to root. The "Discovery" purifies the blood and makes it antagonistic to disease. When the body is associated, the lungs are weak, and there is obstinate lingering cough. "Golden Medical Discovery" puts the body on a fighting footing against disease, and so increases the vitality that disease is thrown off, and physical health, perfectly and permanently restored. It has cured thousands who were hopeless and helpless, and who had tried all other means to cure without avail.

Thirty-one one-cent stamps to cover expense of mailing and customs will obtain a copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, in paper cover. Send fifty stamps if cloth binding is preferred. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

Public expectoration is against the common law, against the laws of health also. When the throat tickles, that's the time you need "Catarrhozone"; it soothes away the irritation, cuts out the phlegm and loosens the tight feeling. You'll quickly cure that catarrh or throat trouble with Catarrhozone. It positively prevents new attacks and cures catarrh forever and for all time to come. Don't take our word for it, try Catarrhozone yourself. Once used you'll be delighted with its pleasant and helpful influence.

DR. MACKAY'S SPECIFIC

For the Treatment of

ALCOHOLISM

USED IN CONNECTION WITH THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC PROHIBITION SYSTEM WITH UNVARYING SUCCESS.

The City Council of Montreal has endorsed this marvellous remedy, and the Health Committee of Montreal recently voted $500 to defray the expense of placing the medicine in each of the City Hall Stations, for prompt application of the Treatment to bad cases will prevent the fatalities continually occurring in the cells.

No Sanitarium is required. The Treatment can be taken at home. No special diet required. The desire to drink is simply necessary and spirits a aided for a few days.

This medicine is now within the reach of all, the price having been reduced. The wonderful results obtained within the worst class of drunkards coming before the Judges of the Recorders Courts in Quebec and Montreal warrant the statement that the disease of Drunkenness can be cured—readily and surely—under ordinary circumstances and with the treatment based upon the part of an inebriate

This treatment is simply the medicine of the medical profession—the only secret is as to its administration

Dr. Mackay's discovery is the result of 25 years of practice as a specialist and expert. He is a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the Province of Quebec

The Government of Quebec through the Judges ordered over 500 boxes of the medicine for the prisoners appearing in the Courts in 1902—1903. Reports establish 80 per cent of cures with these cases.

With the public an official endorsation and the record of results published it is unnecessary to waste money experimenting further. All communications private

YOUTH AND FRESHNESS

MAY BE RETAINED BY THE SPIRIT THOUGH BODY GROWS OLD.

HOW TO RENEW OUR DAYS

Daily Association With Young People, Especially With Children, Is Essential In Many Ways to a Man's Development—How It Keeps a Man's Heart Young and Teaches Him to Live the Loving Christ Life.

Brooklyn seventh Sunday of Pastor Chas. Sala, in the year 1903, by Frederick Diver, of Toronto, at the Dept of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 5.—The secret so long sought by the ancient alchemists is the topic discussed by the preacher in this sermon, in which he shows how, though the body may grow old, the spirit may retain its youth and freshness. The text is Isa. lxv. 5, "When my children were about me."

Misfortunes are generally gregarious. They are not recluses. They live not a hermit's existence. Like the beasts of the fields or the birds of the air or the fish of the sea, they browse in herds or fly in flocks or swim in schools. If one surveys upon the edge of our homes others often follow in with great rapidity, as do the April showers when "the clouds return after the rain." They pile themselves upon each other in great drifts, as do the snowflakes. They tell their death knells in chorus. As "nothing succeeds like success," so "nothing destroys like misfortune." Where there is one emissary of destruction roaming there are, as a rule, many emissaries treading closely upon its heels. Even when they are small and insignificant they cripple us by the persistency of their attack. Naturalists tell us that the small, insignificant humming bird sometimes alights upon the head of a full-grown bull in the open prairie, mighty eagle. There he sits and pecks and picks no matter how great the king of high his huge winged carrier may fly. There he sits and pecks and picks until, after annoying the bull's small beak in the brain of his gigantic foe, who could crush him as easily as a hawk might kill a sparrow, he finally could only get at him. Trouble is like unto the humming bird. With its small bill it pecks and picks at us. It drives in blow after blow until at last our strength succumbs under the continuous impact of the blows.

When trouble struck the grand old patriarch, Job, it hit him again and again. First came financial trouble, then domestic, trouble, then physical trouble. It was pain in the head, pain in the heart, pain in the limbs, pain in the back and pain everywhere. Then "what happened?" Then came to poor comfort from his reminiscences. Job looked back upon the scene of the happiest times of his life, when the wreckless of drunkards coming before the Judges of the Recorders Courts in Quebec and Montreal warrant the statement that the disease of Drunkenness can be cured—readily and surely—under ordinary circumstances and with the treatment based upon the part of an inebriate

Los Angeles, Cal., March 5.—The secret so long sought by the ancient alchemists is the topic discussed by the preacher in this sermon, in which he shows how, though the body may grow old, the spirit may retain its youth and freshness. The text is Isa. lxv. 5, "When my children were about me."

Misfortunes are generally gregarious. They are not recluses. They live not a hermit's existence. Like the beasts of the fields or the birds of the air or the fish of the sea, they browse in herds or fly in flocks or swim in schools. If one surveys upon the edge of our homes others often follow in with great rapidity, as do the April showers when "the clouds return after the rain." They pile themselves upon each other in great drifts, as do the snowflakes. They toll their death knells in chorus. As "nothing succeeds like success," so "nothing destroys like misfortune." Where there is one emissary of destruction roaming there are, as a rule, many emissaries treading closely upon its heels. Even when they are small and insignificant they cripple us by the persistency of their attack. Naturalists tell us that the small, insignificant humming bird sometimes alights upon the head of a full-grown bull in the open prairie, mighty eagle. There he sits and pecks and picks no matter how great the king of high his huge winged carrier may fly. There he sits and pecks and picks until, after annoying the bull's small beak in the brain of his gigantic foe, who could crush him as easily as a hawk might kill a sparrow, he finally could only get at him. Trouble is like unto the humming bird. With its small bill it pecks and picks at us. It drives in blow after blow until at last our strength succumbs under the continuous impact of the blows.

When trouble struck the grand old patriarch, Job, it hit him again and again. First came financial trouble, then domestic, trouble, then physical trouble. It was pain in the head, pain in the heart, pain in the limbs, pain in the back and pain everywhere. Then "what happened?" Then came to poor comfort from his reminiscences. Job looked back upon the scene of the happiest times of his life, when the wreckless of drunkards coming before the Judges of the Recorders Courts in Quebec and Montreal warrant the statement that the disease of Drunkenness can be cured—readily and surely—under ordinary circumstances and with the treatment based upon the part of an inebriate

EXPRESSIVE NAME FOR INDIGESTION.

Wallace's Red Cross Drug Store Has a Simple Remedy That is Guaranteed to Cure the Trouble.

No one word better expresses the condition of the sufferer from weak stomach or indigestion than "misery." The stomach is weak and cannot digest the food, so that there is no appetite, there are pains and griping in the stomach and bowels, the head aches, dizziness and the misery goes to every organ.

Strengthen the stomach and the digestive system, the use of Mi-o-na. This is the only stomach remedy known that gives relief by strengthening the stomach and digestive organs. It is this principle that makes it a certain cure for indigestion. Other medicines may give temporary relief by helping digest the food, but they do not strengthen the stomach, and the trouble goes weaker and weaker all the time.

T. B. Wallace, the reliable retail druggist, has so much confidence in this remarkable remedy that he guarantees a cure, or the money will be refunded. Mi-o-na costs but 50 cents a box and is so sure and strong guarantee given with every box.

Mi-o-na is in tablet form and should be taken before meals. Other remedies for stomach troubles and indigestion are often taken after the meals and decompose the good food eaten, but Mi-o-na used before eating strengthens the stomach, soothes and heals all irritation and inflammation, purifies the blood, and puts the stomach in such a healthy condition that it will take care of the food itself and there will be no pain and suffering.

grandchildren come home and live with us, or, if we have no married children of our own, by borrowing the children of some neighbors, thus enjoying and loving them as we would our own; by firmly and deliberately making a vow with ourselves and with God, that as long I may live to be sixty, seventy, eighty, ninety or a hundred years old, I will never allow myself to outgrow my fondness for little children, and my sympathy for little children and sorrows, and my unceasing desire for their daily companionship.

Daily association with young people, especially with children, is essential in many ways for a man's development. It keeps his heart young. Yes, it does more than that. It teaches him what should be his attitude toward Christ and toward his fellow-men. Some people cannot understand what this educating power over a child's life is upon a matured man. Why? and sorrow, as us, they have not placed themselves under the tutelage of children. Some months ago I hired a big wagon. I put into his wagon not only my own children, but I went around and called the neighbors' houses and piled in some of theirs. I was he only grown person among them. We took a big outgrow my load and started for a picnic ground, about fifteen miles. Then, at the head of my cohort of little ones, I proudly marched into a restaurant and ate the ice cream before we started back. As I went in a gentleman standing upon the sidewalk, said: "Have a little pity you! What have you got there—an orphan asylum?" "No," I answered; "I have no asylum. I have a lot of uncherubs who are making me love God and love mankind, and love life and love everything God has made upon His beautiful earth."

When we took that long ride I was the greatest winner. When those little babies began to sing I found myself singing in spite of myself. Then we talked and asked questions, I found myself saying to myself: "Yes, just as these little children are wondering about causes and effects which are plain to me, I am wondering about troubles in this world, the causes of which are plain to God, and will yet be made plain to me. All that I must do is to wait, and God will explain all." When the children became hungry, I found myself becoming hungry. When they had their little differences and quarrels I found myself the peacemaker, which taught me a good lesson—how to be a peacemaker among the big boys and girls called grown-up men and women. And, my friend, if you ever want to have that old withered heart of yours beat and throb with happiness, this is what you need to do. Get a lot of little babies, the boys and the girls of your neighborhood, together, pile them into a wagon if you can get a big one, and leave your wife and the nurse at home, or at least make them ride along in another vehicle, and then, in the name of God, you go forth and learn one of the mightiest lessons of life—how to keep young by keeping close to Jesus and the sorrows of the young.

Do you know how Thomas Chalmers was able to accomplish his great work of life? He always kept his heart young and fresh and warm by daily associating with the young. His daughter, Helen Chalmers, told my father that during the days when the Free Church controversy he would spend part of each day in playing with the children in the nursery and talking and sought the companionship of the young. He continually had his children or other people's children about him. And more beautiful word picture was ever drawn by an author's pen than if description of that love by John Brown. In that essay the great author of "Kenilworth" is pictured standing out in the snow and the sleet to his neighbor's homes, and there bundling up Marjorie Fleming, a little girl of five or six summers. In her shawl or his cloak he carries her back to his study. There, while his pen runs rapidly over the pages of his immortal books, Marjorie chatters on. Study Eugene Field and his love for little children. Study the lives of our great authors like Longfellow and our preachers like Beecher and our mechanics like Stephenson and our electricians like Morse, and our editors like Greeley, and our statesmen like McKinley—you will find that, without exception, they kept young by keeping in touch with young people.

If I did not have any babies of my own I would adopt some. No man can defy the inroads of time unless he continually associates with the young folks. "What would an engine be in a ship if it were lying idle in the harbor?" said Beecher. "It must be fastened to it wheels and screws before it can propel the vessel. Now, a childless man is like a loose engine. A man must be bolted and screwed to the community before he can work well for its advancement, and there are no such screws and bolts as children." That is true. There is no screw or bolt that holds man to the duties of life firmer than the children. And I hold that other than the Mr. Beecher. I hold that there are no influences more effectual to keep us young while we are transforming those duties than these same little ones. The best way to see the sunbeams dance is to watch them through the dancing eyes of a little child. The best way to smooth out all the wrinkles of old age is to turn them in the dimpled cheek of a smiling baby girl. The best way to send the blood coursing through the withered arteries of threescore years is to play "blind man's buff" or hide and seek with the boys and girls after the supper table is cleared and the school lessons have been learned. The best way to grow young is to associate with the young. God pity you if you cannot find any enjoyment in the society of your wife or partner until before the life-giving rays of May or June.

This mental and physical depletion which comes from being satisfied with a past success cannot be better illustrated than by some of the institutions of our old colleges. Now, the college faculties of both east and the west were originally made up of picked men. The presidents and trustees of those institutions in the early case selected the very brightest and best students of their classes. They were the honor men of the colleges who were asked to fill the honored professorial chairs. But, marvelous to say, although the colleges multiplied and the institutions in my day had been recruited from the brightest men, yet almost without exception these professorial chairs in my day had been recruited from the brightest men, yet almost without exception these professorial chairs in my day had been recruited from the brightest men, yet almost without exception these professorial chairs

Deacon Jones—What do you think of the proposition that women remain silent in church.

Dr. Mc. Wise—Think of it? Why, it is the most absurd thing I ever heard of! Why they think the women come to church for, anyway?

Many inherit weak lungs, and as disease usually assails the weakest part, these persons are continually exposed to attacks of cold and pulmonary complaints. The timely use of Hagyard's Pectoral Cough Syrup will be found a preventive and a protection, strengthening the organs so that they are not liable to contract pneumonia, consumption or abcess. Remember the "Pectoral Syrup" is cheap and good.

"No," said the doctor, "I can't make anything out of his case at all. It bothers me."

"Why," replied his wife, "I thought it was only a simple case of—"

"Exactly. That's why I can't make anything out of it."

If so, your stomach is out of order and you need medicine. But you do not like medicine. Woodsie—Is your dog a setter?

Boggs—Well, I should say he was. He never gets out from under the stove all winter.

The Most Popular Pill.—The pill is the most popular of all forms of medicine, and of pills the most popular are Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, because they do what it is asserted they can do, and are not put forward on any fanciful claims to excellency. They are compact and portable, they are easily taken, they do not nauseate nor gripe and they give relief in the most stubborn cases.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chambers,
Monday, March 6th, 1905.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor Lowry presiding.

Members present — Couns. Kimmerly, Normile, Meng, Graham, Williams and Simpson.

Minutes of the last regular and special sessions were read, and on motion were approved.

A communication was received from Chas. P. Roland, St. Catharines, stating that there were a number of manufacturing concerns who wished information in Canada, and enclosed blank forms for answers to questions. Filed for future reference.

The report of the Finance committee and Treasurer's statement for February were received. Regarding the remitting of taxes re Dominion Rock Drill Works, Rev J. R. Cotton, E. H. Edwards and F. Walker, the Council had not the power to do so, and it was recommended that the matters in question be referred to the Court of Revision.

Coun. Kimmerly, Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee, said that there was little to say at present regarding the trip to Toronto, re electric light question. The bill of particulars is being prepared to go before the Legislature at its coming session and the chance for special legislation to allow the town of Napanee to instal its own lighting system were explained. He also visited a fire hall while in Toronto and asked particulars about fire hose. At the hall the 4th Chief of the Toronto Fire Brigade told him that Keystone hose was undoubtedly the best, and it was be per foot cheaper than Paragon. After considerable discussion, it was moved by Coun. Meng, seconded by Coun. Normile, that we buy 300 foot of Keystone hose. Carried.

W. S. Herrington, K.C., was present and after a few remarks, read the following letter from Mr. Harvey Warner:

Napanee, Feb. 28th, 1905.

To the Mayor and Council. of the Town of Napanee.

Gentlemen,—I have pleasure in enclosing you herewith a deed of that property on the corner of Dundas and Robert streets, which has been partially fitted up by me to be used as a public park.

I also enclose you my cheque for eight hundred dollars, the proceeds of which I desire may be used in completing the park by leveling and seeding it and setting out such trees and shrubs as may be desirable. Also to erect a band stand and provide seating capacity for one hundred people. The balance, if any, to be applied towards the maintenance of the park in proper condition.

I do not want in any way to restrain the action of the council as to the manner in which it shall be fitted up, but would suggest that for the first year at any rate the Council appoint two commissioners to act in conjunction with Mr. Walker in completing the Park. My reason for naming Mr. Walker, is that he has had the only absolute plan and already mapped out plans which meet with my approval, and I think will meet with the approval of the Council. As to the future management of the park, I leave the matter entirely in the hands of the Council, feeling assured that the representatives of the people will take proper steps to maintain the park in such a manner as to give satisfaction to the citizens of the town, and the greatest benefit possible that can be derived from it.

I have the honor to remain,
Yours very truly,
HARVEY WARNER.

In response to the above letter and gift the following resolution was unanimously approved:

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Williams, that Mr. Harvey Warner has delivered oyer to the Municipal Corporation of the Town of Napanee a deed of that lot on the corner of Dundas and Robert streets, in the Town of Napanee, to be used for all time, as a Public Park for the benefit of the citizens of the Town of Napanee, and the said park not being completely laid out, arranged and beautified, Mr. Harvey Warner has also presented to the Corporation of the Town of Napanee the sum of eight hundred dollars to complete the laying out and beautifying the said park, and has expressed in a letter therewith, a desire that councilors be appointed to carry out the work of laying out and completing the said park, with certain suggestions as to the same which thinks this ought to be done. Be it resolved that the Municipal Council of the Town of Napanee receive the title of the said park and the said donation of eight hundred dollars and assume the trust of properly fitting up, laying out and completing the said Park, and maintaining it in a proper and suitable manner for all time in the future at the expense of the Corporation of the Town of Napanee, as a Park or recreation grounds for the citizens of the said Town. Be it further resolved that the said sum of eight hundred dollars be placed in a bank in accordance with the suggestions of the said Mr. Harvey Warner, and to be used for that purpose and not for any other. And further resolved that this council pass the necessary By-law to carry into effect the terms of this resolution and the suggestions contained in Mr. Warner's letter, and as a slight recognition of the philanthropic gift, this Council shall, in the said By-law, designate and name the said Park as "The Harvey Warner Park." Be it further resolved that the Council on behalf of the citizens of the Town of Napanee, do take this opportunity to express their appreciation of the thoughtfulness which prompted this kind act, and do also request the Clerk to convey to Mr. Warner their deep sense of gratitude to him for this generous gift, which is most characteristic of the donor, who has won for himself by his many acts of liberality and charity a warm place in the hearts of all classes in this community.

Considerable discussion took place in the light question and Coun. Meng did not think by-law for $35,000 to instal plant would pass. Coun. Kimmerly did not think it would cost over $25,009, and all agreed that it would be a good thing for the town. The special committee then left and leave the rest to the ratepayers.

Coun. Meng, Chairman of the Poor and Sanitary committee said that had been an extremely hard and expensive winter in his department.

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Williams, that we place another hydrant on West street at or near Mr Geo. Lamy's corner. Referred to Street committee to report.

Moved by Coun. Meng, seconded by Coun. Graham, that the Treasurer be authorized to notify all parties indebted for taxes in the Northern Ward and sewer up Piety Hill, that the accounts must be paid at once. Cd. Moved by Coun. Normile, seconded by Coun. Graham, that $25 be placed in the hands of the Poor and Sanitary committee. Carried.

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun Graham, that a public meet ing be called for Thursday evening, March 23d, at 7.30 o'clock, for the purpose of giving the ratepayers an opportunity of discussing the lighting question by-law. Carried.

Mr. J. Stevenson was hunting a market. He pays $30 a month for privilege and collects toll, etc. He said this had been an extremely severe winter, and he had only made $11 over and above rent since Jan. 1st, and asked that the Council remit one month's rent. On motion of Couns. Normile and Meng the above request was complied with.

Moved by Coun. Meng, seconded by Coun. Simpson, that the first payment of $25 to the Napanee Band, in compliance with resolution of last year, be paid. Carried.

A Pleasant Medicine Which All Children Will Take Readily

You do not have to coax and threaten to get the little ones to take Baby's Own Tablets. The ease with which they are given is compared with liquid medicines will appeal to every mother. None is spilled or wasted; you know just how much a dose has reached the little stomach. As a remedy for all the ills of babyhood and childhood arising from derangements of the stomach and bowels Baby's Own Tablets have no equal. Mrs. E. A. Jewers, Mitchell Bay, N.S., says,—"I think the tablets a blessing to both mother and children as I find them a certain cure for all the ills to which little ones are subject. I do not know how I could get on without them." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"I have been eating onions," confessed the pretty girl in the dim parlor.

"Then I will tell you a ghost story," whispered the waiter.

"But why a ghost story?"

"Because it will take your breath away."

FENCE WIRE SHOULD NOT BE TAXED.

The Dominion Government did a good thing for the farmers of Canada when it placed certain grades of fence wire on the free list a few years ago. Since then galvanized smooth wire Nos. 9, 12 and 13, which are most used in farm fencing, has been kept down in price to a place which enabled thousands of farmers to replace old unsightly, wasteful wooden fences with neat, new wire structures, thereby improving their own property and enhancing the value of the surrounding neighborhood. Now it transpires that the pressure is being brought to bear upon the Government to go back to the old order of things by re-imposing customs duty on these grades of wire. That change would work serious injury to the farming community, admits of no argument. At present, practically none of the grades of wire on the free list are manufactured in Canada, so that any duty that would be put on the wire would prove an equal tax upon the consumer—the farmer. A tariff of say 25 per cent. would undoubtedly enhance the cost of fencing fully ten to fifteen cents per rod. This would mean that the owner of a medium sized farm would have to bear an extra tax of from $150 to $200 for his farm. Were fencing an unimportant matter there would be no reason for alarm, but with the growth of the old fences, and the increasing attention to stock raising, new fencing is an absolute necessity.

In the older parts of the Dominion the improvement of farm buildings and the construction of new fences have been making very rapid strides during the past few years, and it would prove a very unfortunate matter if a check were given to this much-needed advance by the imposition of a tax that could only operate to fix to the farmer and at the same time hamper the Canadian manufacturers of fencing with any wire as a raw material. Rather than hamper farm improvement, and demoralize an industry important to agriculture by placing wire which is now admitted free of duty on the dutiable list, it would be much better to wipe out the present tariff of 20 per cent. on Nos. 7 and 8 wire, which would enable farmers to get a stronger style of fence without increasing the cost.

About a year ago Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was attacked by the mania for motoring. His sweet-faced old mother, like all good mothers, thinks her son has not yet grown beyond need of her protecting care. Knowing through the newspapers that motoring is a perilous pastime, she decided that when Sir Arthur went for a spin she would go along. So she bravely climbed up on the front seat beside him in the early days of his guiding the machine for himself, because, she said, she knew "the would never do any reckless driving when he had his old mother with him."

A SAFE COUGH MEDICINE FOR CHILDREN.

Nine Nations

Now Use Liquozone. Won't You Try It—Free?

Millions of people, of nine different nations, are constant users of Liquozone. Some cease using it to get well; some to keep well. Some to cure germ diseases; some as a tonic. No medicine was ever so widely employed. These users are everywhere; your neighbors and friends are among them. And half the people you meet—wherever you are—know some one whom Liquozone has cured.

If you need help, please ask some of these users what Liquozone does. Don't blindly take medicine for what medicine cannot do. Drugs never kill germs. For your own sake, ask about Liquozone; then let us buy you a full-size bottle to try.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving in thousands of different cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 29 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for the disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissue, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All the medicine you do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And the symptoms which cause distress are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

A Buffalo Lady Says.—Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill Differs from the old Methods in Medicine as Day from Night.

Mrs. J. H. Reborn, of 169 Landon St., Buffalo, N.Y., says of Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill, after a 6 days Treatment:

"I was so different to anything else I ever used—Anti-Pill is so mild and gentle that I never thought it would cure my chronic Constipation, but it did.

"Soon after the birth of my first child, 14 years ago, Constipation became troublesome. I used everything I heard of, but temporary relief was all I got. I must have used fifty different medicines in that time.

"I finally got very bad and at times I would lose all desire for food, and what I did eat would distress me terribly. I had headache, bloating, bearing down pains, backache, and not sleep well, easily tired and never felt quite right.

"From the very first dose of Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill I got relief. I improve. Now I am well. It is wonderful.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE

Moved by W. A. Baker, Esq., seconded by R. W. Longmore, Esq., that we, the directors of the Lennox and Addington Mutual Fire Insurance Company, desire to express their deep pain and sorrow at the sudden death of their esteemed colleague, Mr. I. F. Aylsworth, and tender their sympathy to the bereaved family.

We appreciate the very valuable services rendered to the Insurance Company during the thirteen years of which he was a director, never having missed a session in all that time. He always gave the best of his talents to the matter in which he was engaged, and qualified himself in a manner that made his counsel especially valuable.

He had just entered upon his second term as President, which position he filled most efficiently. Always prompt in attendance, careful in detail, urgent in the despatch of business, his heart was for the progress, development and best interests of the company.

We feel that his death is a great loss to our company which he has served so efficiently and well the many years of which he was a director, and that we should express our regret at his death and our estimate of his worth.

That a copy of this resolution be sent to the family and press.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.

The friends of Thomas J. Edwards, of lower Wyoming avenue, Pittston, Pa., will be pleasantly surprised to learn of his marriage, which took place on Saturday evening 25th Feb, the bride being Miss Armina Allen, of Napanee, daughter of our esteemed townsman Mr. Wm. Allen.

The ceremony was performed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Edwards, on Wyoming avenue, by Rev. H. P. Walter, rector of St. James Episcopal church. The bridesmaid was Miss Margaret Allen, of Napanee, Canada, a sister of the bride, while the best man was Eugene T. W. Jenkins. Mrs. Ruth Koch played the wedding march. Other friends present at the wedding were Miss Emma Jenkins, Mrs. H. P. Walter and John S. Edwards. A fine collation was served by Mr. Thomas Edwards. The bridal couple visited New York and were in Washington in time to witness the inauguration of President Roosevelt on Saturday last.

FARM HELP.

Staff Captain Patterson, of the Salvation Army Immigration Department, Toronto, who is making a tour in the interests of immigration work, called at the office of The Beaver on Monday. The Salvation Army are bringing out a large number of desirable immigrants this spring from England, Ireland and Scotland, comprising mechanics and farm laborers and composed of married and single men, a good number of whom coming from agricultural districts in the Old Country, should make good farm hands. The reason the Salvation Army is bringing these out is owing to the great distress and poverty in the old land at the present time, and are anxious to place them with manufacturers and farmers. Those desiring good help this incoming spring cannot do better than to apply to the Editor of The Beaver for particulars and application forms which will be sent promptly to Commissioner Coombs, of the Salvation Army Toronto, and the immigrants will be sent direct to the applicant's address free of charge. In filling out the forms kindly write in the date when the help is wanted so that they can be sent out as near the right time as possible. Applications should be made as early as possible, so as to secure the class of help desired, and also enable those in charge to carry on the work promptly and efficiently.

CRYSDALE—ABRAMS.

A quiet and pretty wedding was celebrated at the residence of Mr. D. T. McLean, 84 Hornby street, Vancouver, B.C., at 11 o'clock on Wednesday, 22nd Febr., the contracting parties being Mr. H. F. Crysdale and Mrs. Abrams, both of whom are widely known and highly popular with a large circle of friends in Vancouver. The bride was beautifully gowned, and on entering the drawing room on the arm of her brother, Mr. A. A. Richardson, the strain of the wedding march announced the ceremony. The Rev. W. E. Prescott, M.A., read the marriage service, and after the happy couple had been pronounced man and wife, the guests assembled in the home to them in the dining room, which was brilliantly lighted and brightened by flowers. After briefly fast the health of the bride and groom was proposed, to which Mr. Crysdale made a happy and appropriate reply. The wedding presents were numerous and beautiful, fitting testimonies of the esteem of friends. Miss Kathleen McLean, the pretty little niece of the bride, assisted her aunt as maid. The happy couple left by the Princess Victoria and will spend the honeymoon in California. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. D. J. MacLean, Mrs. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. William Lewis and Miss McCodwell (Nanaimo), Mr. and Mrs. Richardson, the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Prescott, Mr. and Mrs. Horner, Mr. A. Crysdale, Miss Crysdale, Mr. and Miss Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. George Dawson, Mr. H. J. Duncan and others.

CANNING FACTORY NOTES.

A public meeting will be held in the town hall on Thursday evening, March 23d, at 7:30 o'clock, for the purpose of giving the ratepayers a chance to discuss the question.

Mr. Carson agrees to erect a plant to the value of not less than $15,000, and pay out not less than $8,000 per annum in wages. The town will greatly benefit by that amount of wages. The factory will not only employ a large number of hands, but the fact that $8 000 more money will be put in circulation will be a good thing for Napanee generally.

The farmer who will grow fruit and vegetables for the factory, will be a large gainer by the enterprise. He can load his wagon with corn or pea, etc., draw it to the factory, unload, get his money and go home happy. The simple fact of dealing direct with the manufacturer will bring his losses from imperfect goods down to a minimum, as the produce will only be handled by himself (not having to be shipped) and the farmer knows how to handle it properly.

AT HOME.

The Eastern Methodist Mission Circle will give an at home at Mrs. Stuart Daly's, Friday afternoon March 17th from 3 to 7 p.m. Handkerchiefs for sale. Refreshments served. Admission 10c.

WHAT CAUSES APPENDICITIS.

The commonest cause of appendicitis is constipation. When you require physic don't use cheap drastic pills—get Dr. Hamilton's Pills which strengthen the stomach, regulate the bowels and prevent any tendency to appendicitis. In one day you'll feel the tremendous benefit of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. By purifying the blood and cleansing the system they prevent headaches, dizziness and drive away weariness. No medicine so successful as Dr. Hamilton's Pills, sold everywhere in 25c boxes with yellow cover; get the genuine.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON

The Merchant Prince of England

The first time that Sir Thomas Lipton came to America was in 1865 as a stowaway in an old-fashioned little tramp steamer, and when the vessel neared port he was busily engaged in shoveling coal into the furnaces. The latest time was in 1903, when a whole nation held him in honor as a valiant and true sportsman, making his third brave but vain attempt to take a silver cup back to England. On this occasion he lived like a prince on the steamer "Erin," surrounded by his fleet of thirty-three boats—steamers, houseboats, barges, tugs, cruisers, steam launches, gigs, jolly boats and dingies—maintained at his expense and manned by over two hundred men.

Sir Thomas was born in Ireland, but spent his early years in Scotland; his education was a hurried, unconventional, picked-up variety, and at fifteen, with rosy dreams, he ran away from home, smuggled himself into a steamer and came to New York. His eight dollars did not last long, and after working in the rice fields of South Carolina, driving a street car in New Orleans, canvassing for a crayon portrait concern, stoking rides on freight cars, and making a day-by-day living as best he could, went back two years later to Glasgow, empty of purse but rich in experience.

The prodigal was received with open arms, and with £100 of his father's savings, he opened a little meat and provision store. He introduced American ideas, worked, as he says, "twenty-three hours a day," and advertised to the limit of his ingenuity. One day, seven of the leanest, gaunt, longest men in the kingdom paraded the town in Indian file, bearing on their backs the legend: "We are going to Lipton's." Next day, seven of the fattest men that could be found, walked the streets proclaiming in large letters: "We have been to Lipton's." Meanwhile, the proprietor slept under the counter.

This little shop in High street was the beginning of Lipton's 500 stores throughout England, his fruit farms in Kent, Scotland and Ireland, his finest ten plantations in the world in Ceylon, his curing factories in Liverpool, his candy manufactory in London, his fruit trees in Georgia, and his other vast industries, giving employment to ten thousand people, and having made for their owner a fortune of $50,000,000 and an income of $7.50 a minute. He gave £25,000 for the Jubilee Memorial dinner to the poor of London, and his check seemed little to him when his eyes filled with tears at the sight of 310,000 poor people eating as his guests. Not till later did the world learn that it was his gift; for to-day he only loaning he never advertises is his charity.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by W. C. Mack, at the Department of Agriculture.

"SAVED MY LIFE"

—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does it does through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture is in the form of a label in the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

READ THIS CAREFULLY.

We are in receipt this week of an illustrated edition of "The Canadian Mute," a paper published to teach printing to some pupils of the institution for the deaf and dumb at Belleville. This edition also combines illustrations of the Ontario Institution for the Blind at Brantford. The paper is well printed and a perusal of its pages makes one marvel at the proficiency a scholar attains at either institution. It is no longer necessary that because a child is blind or deaf and dumb that an education is denied him. At the Belleville institution a pupil can learn to be a carpenter, shoemaker, printer, or to become useful around home in sewing, knitting, laundry work, cooking, etc. The Brantford Institution for the Blind teaches piano tuning, cooking, sewing, knitting, singing, etc. If any father, mother or guardian of a child can take advantage of these schools, as they are maintained by the Provincial Government. If any reader of The Beaver knows of a child in this section who is the victim of any of the above afflictions, they should write to Mr. R. Mathison, Superintendent of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, Belleville, Ont., or to Mr. H. J. Gardiner, Principal of the Institution for the Blind, Brantford, Ont.

In last week's Beaver the admirable sketch of Miss Helen Keller and her attainments, shows what may be accomplished in the education of our blind and deaf mutes.

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS.

On Tuesday evening, February 28th, about forty ladies and gentlemen assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John E. McAvoy, Maple Grove, to make their address, previous to their departure for their new home in Napanee. The presents were a china dinner set and set to Mrs. McAvoy, a handsome oak chair to her husband, and a parlor lamp to Master Arthur. The following address was read by Miss Beatrice Keenan:

To Mr. and Mrs. John McAvoy,

Strathcona.

Dear Friends and Neighbors,—It is with profound regret that we have assembled here this evening, to bid you farewell on this sad occasion of your departure from our neighborhood.

During your residence among us you have won a number of sincere friends, who will ever cherish the remembrance of their association with you. We have found you ever ready to console us in hours of affliction and to rejoice with us in time of joy, especially in song and kind and obliging neighbors.

We cannot find words adequately express our sorrow at losing you, but we must not harbor such selfish sentiments, as our loss will be others' gain. In your new home and among your new acquaintances we trust that you may still retain a loving regard for your faithful friends at Maple Grove. And as in coming, you every possible success, freedom from all evil, health, society, and many years of happiness.

As a slight token of our love and affection, we beg you to accept the accompanying gift, and set of china, and trust that they may be a pleasant souvenir of your many friends.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors in this vicinity,

Mrs. Stewart Weese,
Mrs. James Ackerman,
Mrs. John Jones.

Mrs. McAvoy arose and in the following words expressed her appreciation of the gifts:

Dear Friends and Neighbors,—This assembly here to-night is quite unexpected, and my feelings will not permit me to express in words the thanks I feel we owe you for your kindness this evening and during the years that we have spent among you. The beautiful presents are very acceptable, and we will ever appreciate them, not alone for their value but as tokens of your thoughtfulness and esteem. And in the future when seated at our home I may be or what new friends we may make, I will assure you I shall never forget the neighborhood and our kind friends at Maple Grove.

We hope that we also shall be remembered by you and that you will visit us in our new home where you shall always receive a warm welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McAvoy.

The guests departed at twelve, after spending a sociable and pleasant evening with their amiable friends.

THE CHURCH AS A SOCIAL MEDIUM.

Esperance Goodlove, speaking of society as it concerns business women, in the New York Ledger, says for April, says that where society as it is generally known is not possible, and also where it is judged all but impossible to many, business women do indulge in torture there or things which are not to their nature, and which will do the women in the long run for society if they are so approached by circumstances books; concerts and churches, although she deprecates making use of the latter solely on account of its social advantages. Of churches she remarks, "Let her" (the busy business woman), "seek first clergymen whose preaching helps her, whose spiritual inspiration assists her to bear the sorrow of lonesiness, and by some miracle, human or divine, she will often find the loneliness superseded by kindly acquaintances."

A SABBATH MORNING IN ST. PETERSBURG.

(22d January, 1905.)

The scene—a Russian city;
A winter scene in the main,
A brilliant Sabbath morn,
With light and sublime;
The sale—a tale of carnage,
Tyranny, and crime.

The gloom of the past had darkened
The light in many a home;
Happiness and contentment
Were not on the streets to roam—
For defeat was the dismal banner
That waved over the city's dome.

Defeat and loss of prestige
Had made Russian rulers blue;
Tyranny and crime
The course they would pursue—
A plan the evil minded
Ever try to carry through.

Oppression in that country
The poor, the weak well know;
Insults and persecution
Were dealt with many a blow;
Kindness was a weapon
Men in power did not show.

On the Sabbath morn in question,
At the solemn hour of ten,
A procession formed, consisting
Of twelve thousand men,
Twelve thousand I'm told,
Twelve thousand workingmen.

A priest was there to lead them—
Their rights to have and hold—
And they followed peacefully,
Without a sign of fear,
Trusting that their Czar would see them,
And their petition hear.

They marched in peaceful order,
Unarmed for any fray,
But the troops were there prepared
To stop them on their way:
"Kill without mercy," was the order
On that fateful day.

Without mercy—shot and shell
Were the deadly deeds of morn;
Without mercy—swords and bayonets
Put an end to many;
Without mercy—it were better,
Better he had not been born.

It was like the days of Nero—
Of all tyrants he was first—
And it seems, that day, in Russia
Tyranny had reached its worst,
As the Crossacks rushed upon them
With a Nero's thirst.

Ere the sun had set that evening
Thousands lay in torture there;
Thousand had the streets had fallen,
With death's vacant, sightless stare;
And the snow with blood was crimson,
Where before it was pure and fair.

Oh! the victims that were gathered
As the shades of night drew near,
Mangled forms of men and women,
And of little children dear;
Night winds could not drown the wailing,
Nor could darkness hide the tier.

And throughout the land of Russia
Vengeance is the cry to-day,
Vengeance, that seems a coward's effort
To appease, and to allay,
For the deadly wrongs inflicted
On that fatal Sabbath day.

The Yellow Holly

BY FERGUS HUME.

"By no means," said Brendon quickly. "I should not think of doing such a thing. But I do say you were in that house after 11."

"I was not," panted the old nobleman, savagely, and he glared at his grandson with bloodshot eyes.

"You were," insisted Brendon. "There is no need to tell you how I got out of my bedroom unbeknown to Train, but I did. I came downstairs to see Mrs. Jersey at half past 11 or thereabouts. I crept down the stairs and saw you standing in the room in the hall lamp. You had on a fur coat, and I recognized you by your unusual height; also by the color of your coat. Some months before you wore that coat—it is a claret colored one trimmed with sable—at a race meeting. You were pointed out to me, and it was the first time I had set eyes on you. It was you in the hall."

"Did you see my face?" asked Derrington.

"No. But the coat and the height and my knowledge that you were connected with Mrs. Jersey—"

"I wasn't connected with the jade!" flashed out Derrington. "She came to me years ago and said she could prove the marriage. I tried to get out of her the name of the church where it took place. She refused to give it and said if I did not pension her off she would go to your guardian, Ireland, and get him to help her to prove that you were legitimate. I hated your father, sir, and so to your mother!—"

"No," cried Brendon, rising, "not a word against my mother."

"Only this, that she was not well born—the daughter of a music master, not the wife for my son."

"She was his wife, however. Leave my mother's name out of it and go on, sir. You say that Mrs. Jersey could have proved the marriage."

"Yes," growled Derrington, rather cowed by Brendon's manner. "I did not wish her to do so, for the reasons I have stated."

"Very unworthy reasons," said George.

Derrington looked as though he could have struck George. "Never mind that," said he, controlling his temper. "I bought that house from your mother's father—the music master," he sneered, "and gave it to Mrs. Jersey rent free. I also allowed her an annuity. She held her tongue for many years. Then she saw that confounded advertisement that in the papers and threatened to tell your mother on the chance of getting more money out of you when I was dead. I refused, and she then told me that she had written out a confession—"

"I thought as much," interrupted George. "But that has been stolen."

"By whom?"

"By the assassin."

"And who is the assassin?"

"I can't say. But it was the fact that confession. Either you or I will learn who killed Mrs. Jersey."

"Why you or I?"

"Because we alone can make use of the confession and pay money for it. The thing would be of no use to any one else. But I now understand Mrs. Jersey's position in the house. Were you in it on that night?"

Derrington looked at Brendon and hesitated. Then in strange contradiction to his usual manner he turned away his face. "I decline to answer that question," he growled.

"But I saw you," persisted George.

"You saw—There's nothing more to be said. Hold your tongue."

"Willingly," said George politely, "if you will silence Mrs. Ward."

"I have no influence with the woman."

"Oh, I think so. She wishes Dorothy to marry my cousin."

"Your cousin!"

"Can you deny the relationship?"

Derrington shirked the question by asserting to Brendon's surprise that may be able to make Mrs. Ward hold her tongue," he growled.

"I am quite sure she will do anything you tell her in the hope that you will approve of a match between my cousin and her daughter."

"And you want me to approve?" sneered the old man.

"As to that, it matters little. Mrs. Ward wishes Dorothy to be Lady Derrington and to have a very excellent income. Whether she marries me or Vane, it comes to the same thing. I can't understand Mrs. Ward's dislike and mischief making, since that is the case."

"I can," snapped Derrington. "You are too clever for her, and Walter is a fool."

"Perhaps so. However, as I shall marry Dorothy it doesn't much matter."

"How can you marry her, situated as you are?"

"I shall be George Vane some day, sir, and then Dorothy will be my wife."

"I believe she will," muttered Derrington, looking at the firm face of the young man. "Humph! So you intend to look for the certificate of marriage?"

"No; for the confession of Mrs. Jersey, afterward for the church which will be mentioned in that confession. The register will prove the marriage without the necessity of the certificate."

"How will you set to work to get that confession?"

George wrinkled his brows. "There is only one way, sir. I must find out who killed Mrs. Jersey. If you can help me—"

"I can't. I know no more who murdered the woman than you do."

"Yet you were in the house on that night."

Derrington grew wrathful. "Don't talk rubbish, sir. If I was I should not mind admitting the fact. As it is"— He broke off, gnawing his lip and avoiding Brendon's eyes.

CHAPTER XIII.

DOROTHY was by no means of a jealous disposition. Moreover, her love for George was so deep and pure that she trusted him entirely. Nevertheless, having learned from the few words dropped by Vane that Brendon knew Lola, she felt desirous of seeing the woman. That Lola was her rival she never for one moment believed, for the fact remained that Brendon's name was coupled with that of the dancer, and this incipient scandal annoyed Miss Ward.

There was no need for her to ask George why such a report should prevail, for she knew that he would be able to explain in a satisfactory manner, and, trusting him already, it was useless to demand details. Her feelings would remain the same after the telling of his story as they were now; therefore she avoided the disagreeable subject. Nevertheless, she was woman enough to desire a sight of Lola, and induced her mother to take her to the music hall. Mrs. Ward was very pleased to do so, but she was too clever to hint that she guessed Dorothy's reason for making this request.

"Certainly, my dear," she said briskly. "I am very glad that you are coming out of your shell. Men hate a woman who can't talk of everything, and nothing is talked about but Lola."

"I must educate myself to please men, then," said Dorothy dryly. "I may as well begin with the dancer. On what night can we go?"

"Oh, Friday will do. Mr. Vane has invited us to dine at the Cecil, so I'll ask him to get us a box."

Dorothy would rather have gone with any one than Vane. Men hate a woman who can't talk of everything, and nothing is talked about but Lola. However, there was nothing for it but to accept, since she had brought it on herself. With a smile which encouraged her mother to think she would behave sensibly toward Vane, she agreed to the proposed dinner party and accompanying, and Mrs. Ward wrote a note at once.

"I hope when she sees Lola, and hears the stories about that Brendon man, that she may refuse to have anything more to do with him," was Mrs. Ward's remark as she sealed her note. "I don't want to get the Brendon man into trouble by having him arrested for murder. And I don't think Derrington would let me if I did wish it."

Her last speech was prophetic, for the next day Lord Derrington paid a visit to Curson street and had a short interview with Mrs. Ward, the gist of which was that she must hold her tongue.

"Brendon called to see me the other day," explained Derrington, looking grim, "and he showed me plainly that he had nothing to do with the matter."

"But how about the holly berry?"

"That is easily explained," replied Derrington, who, anticipating the question, had prepared an answer. "Brendon was one of the first to see the body, and in touching it the berry fell from the sprig. Afterward—mind you, afterward—Mr. Train found the berry and, not knowing that Brendon had seen the body that morning, thought he had been in the room on the previous night.

"It's sure he was," insisted Mrs. Ward.

"You are sure of nothing of the sort. Brendon could not have got downstairs without the connivance of Train, and you heard what Train said."

Then he asked after a pause, "Why did you tell Dorothy to give the sprig of holly to Brendon on that night?"

Mrs. Ward shrugged her shoulders and looked down nervously. "Oh, it was the merest kindness on my part," she said, trying to speak quietly. Derrington contradicted her at once.

"It was nothing of the sort," he declared, with roughness. "You wished him to have the yellow holly in his coat when he saw Mrs. Jersey so that the woman might betray herself."

"I know nothing about Mrs. Jersey at the time."

"Oh, but you did! With regard to the holly, you knew from me how it was used in connection with the death of my son at San Remo, and what I did not tell you you learned from other people. But how did you know about Mrs. Jersey?"

"That's my business," cried Mrs. Ward, becoming imprudent. "You are right about the holly. I sent to Pembershire expressly to get some. It was my intention to inclose a sprig in a letter to Mrs. Jersey so as to frighten her—"

"What good would that have done?" My business again," snapped Mrs. Ward, becoming double. "I had my reason for wishing to recall your son's death to her mind, and I knew that the yellow holly would do so most successfully. When Dorothy came from the park and told me that Brendon was to stop with his friend at Mrs. Jersey's boarding house, I thought that it would be better to let George wear the sprig. And I managed it in such a way that neither Dorothy nor George guessed what I planned the business. And I succeeded. Mrs. Jersey saw the sprig and nearly fainted. I knew then that—" Here she stopped.

Derrington saw that it was useless to question her further. She would only lie and had been telling lies, for all he knew.

"I shall ask you nothing more," he said, rising to take his leave. "You have some reason for all this intrigue, which I no doubt shall learn. Mysteries are matters little to me. I came merely to warn you that Brendon is to be left alone."

"To whom have you been arrested?"

"No. And, what is more, I won't have him spoken about in connection with that crime."

Mrs. Ward forgot her desire to conciliate Derrington, forgot her desire to marry Vane to Dorothy, forgot everything in a sudden access of rage. "I shall do what I choose!" she cried.

"No," said Derrington quietly and looking her full in the face. "You will obey me."

"Obey you, Lord Derrington?"

"Yes. I have tried to conduct this interview quietly, Mrs. Ward, and hoped that your wiser plan is to be silent, but"—

"I don't want hints. I wish for plain speaking," raged the little woman.

"How dare you address me like this?"

The old gentleman leaned forward suddenly and whispered a short sentence. Mrs. Ward's face, which had turned pearly white, and she tottered to a chair, closing her eyes as she fell into it. Derrington surveyed her with a pitiless expression.

"You will be silent about Brendon?" he asked.

"Yes," moaned Mrs. Ward. "I will say nothing."

At the meeting at the Cecil Mrs. Ward was herself again. She had taken a box for the music hall, and, led by Derrington, and when she saw him later treated him in her old manner. On his side the old gentleman made no difference, but he wondered how she was carrying herself so boldly. At once it occurred to his subservient mind that there was some reason for this defiant behavior, and he determined to watch her. For this purpose he joined the party.

"This is the first time I have been to a music hall for years," he explained to Dorothy. "But Walter has been talking so much about this new dancer that I felt I must see her."

"Why did you not dine with us at the Cecil?" asked Dorothy.

"I always prefer to dine at home, my dear, especially when I am alone. Men like not do for an old man to wag his gray beard uninvited among the young."

Meantime Mrs. Ward was chatting gayly to Vane's arm as a couple of office clerk who had formed a fourth at the Cecil dinner party. The box was filled and easily held the party. Mrs. Ward had a position directly in front, where she could see and be seen, but Dorothy kept herself behind the curtain. She had come to see Lola excellently, but did not wish to be recognised by any chance acquaintance. In an opposite box sat a red haired man in immaculate evening dress. Derrington recognised him as Bawdsey, but did not think it necessary to show his recognition. He sat at the back of the box near the door and the war office clerk and kept a watchful eye on Mrs. Ward.

That little woman sparkled like a diamond. She criticised the house, admired the decorations and applauded the comic songs. It might have been that this indifferent attitude was due of defiance, as she must have known that Derrington was watching her. But she acted her part consummately, and he could see nothing of her coolness. "What an admirable actress," thought the old lord, "and what a dangerous woman!"

The ballet set at the end of the first part of the programme. When the curtain rose Dorothy was so anxious to behold Lola, that she leaned forward so as to show her face to the whole house. Bawdsey saw her and put his glass to his eye. He smiled slightly, and Derrington wondered why he did so. But at that moment, and while the stage was filling with dancers, he arose to receive some newcomers. These were none other than Miss Bull and Margery, for whom Bawdsey had procured the box. The little old maid was whiter than ever and wore her usual gray dress. Margery was smartly gowned in green, and with her light hair and stupid red face looked anything but beautiful. She placed herself in the best position, being evidently directed to do so by Miss Bull, for that lady preferred the shade. At all events, she secluded herself behind a curtain and kept her beady black eyes persistently on the stage. On seeing that the two were comfortable, Bawdsey disappeared and did not return till the end of the ballet. Derrington saw all this, but no one else in Mrs. Ward's box took any notice. And why should they? Bawdsey and his party were quite unknown to them.

"You will be silent about Brendon?" he asked.

"Yes," moaned Mrs. Ward. "I will say nothing."

At the meeting at the Cecil Mrs. Ward was herself again. She had taken a box for the music hall, and led by Derrington, and when she saw him later treated him in her old manner. On his side the old gentleman made no difference, but he wondered how she was carrying herself so boldly. At once it occurred to his subservient mind that there was some reason for this defiant behavior, and he determined to watch her. For this purpose he joined the party.

"This is the first time I have been to a music hall for years," he explained to Dorothy. "But Walter has been talking so much about this new dancer that I felt I must see her."

"Why did you not dine with us at the Cecil?" asked Dorothy.

"I always prefer to dine at home, my dear, especially when I am alone. Men like not do for an old man to wag his gray beard uninvited among the young."

Meantime Mrs. Ward was chatting gayly to Vane's arm as a couple of office clerk who had formed a fourth at the Cecil dinner party. The box was filled and easily held the party. Mrs. Ward had a position directly in front, where she could see and be seen, but Dorothy kept herself behind the curtain. She had come to see Lola excellently, but did not wish to be recognised by any chance acquaintance. In an opposite box sat a red haired man in immaculate evening dress. Derrington recognised him as Bawdsey, but did not think it necessary to show his recognition. He sat at the back of the box near the door and the war office clerk and kept a watchful eye on Mrs. Ward.

That little woman sparkled like a diamond. She criticised the house, admired the decorations and applauded the comic songs. It might have been that this indifferent attitude was due of defiance, as she must have known that Derrington was watching her. But she acted her part consummately, and he could see nothing of her coolness. "What an admirable actress," thought the old lord, "and what a dangerous woman!"

The ballet set at the end of the first part of the programme. When the curtain rose Dorothy was so anxious to behold Lola, that she leaned forward so as to show her face to the whole house. Bawdsey saw her and put his glass to his eye. He smiled slightly, and Derrington wondered why he did so. But at that moment, and while the stage was filling with dancers, he arose to receive some newcomers. These were none other than Miss Bull and Margery, for whom Bawdsey had procured the box. The little old maid was whiter than ever and wore her usual gray dress. Margery was smartly gowned in green, and with her light hair and stupid red face looked anything but beautiful. She placed herself in the best position, being evidently directed to do so by Miss Bull, for that lady preferred the shade. At all events, she secluded herself behind a curtain and kept her beady black eyes persistently on the stage. On seeing that the two were comfortable, Bawdsey disappeared and did not return till the end of the ballet. Derrington saw all this, but no one else in Mrs. Ward's box took any notice. And why should they? Bawdsey and his party were quite unknown to them.

Dorothy could not say that Lola was handsome, but she had about her a wild grace which was very fascinating. When dancing she seemed to think of nothing but the revels in which she was engaged. She never cast a look at the house, and Dorothy noticed that. She was therefore somewhat surprised when, during the second scene, she saw Lola deliberately look in the direction of the box and stare at her piercingly for quite a moment or two. Rather confused by this sudden regard, the girl drew back. Lola noticed her no more, but continued to dance.

"Let us go now," said Dorothy, when the wild dance of Lola was at an end. "I wish I had not come."

She was interrupted by an ejaculation from her mother. Mrs. Ward also was standing up, but her eyes were fixed on Miss Bull. The little old maid, as though feeling the influence of that glance, slowly looked in Mrs. Ward's direction. The eyes of the two women met. From those of Miss Bull flashed a look of hate, and she withdrew behind the curtain of the box. Mrs. Ward was white and shaking. Clutching Vane's arm she signed to him to be taken to her carriage. "It's too much for me," she said, alluding to the ballet.

Derrington stood on the pavement when the brougham rolled away bearing the mother and daughter, both ill-at-ease both pale. He was alone, as Vane and the war office clerk were back again in the hall. "Humph!" said Derrington, his eyes fixed on the retreating carriage. "So you know that little woman who called to see me about the lease. I wonder how that comes about. Miss Bull knew Mrs. Jersey, and you, Mrs. Ward, sent that yellow holly. I wonder"— The old man stopped. He could not quite understand what Mrs. Ward was doing, but he repeated his former observation, "A dangerous woman," said he. "I shall speak to Bawdsey about her." And, making up his mind to this, he went in search of the detective.

All that night Dorothy was haunted by strange dreams, in which the figure of Lola played a prominent part. Usually calm and self possessed, Dorothy slept like a child, but the fierce music, the mad dancing, the knowledge that George knew her mother, caused her to sleep brokenly. She was up early, and after a breakfast that was a mere farce she took her way to the park. It was her usual custom to walk in a lonely part about 8 o'clock in the morning, but on this occasion she was at her usual early by half past 7. This was a seat under a large elm tree in the center of a wide lawn. Few people came there at so early an hour, and Dorothy often read over her lessons before returning home. In a mechanical manner she took a book out of her pocket and tried to read. But it was impossible. Before her inner vision passed the wild, flushed face of Lola Velez, and Dorothy could not drive it away. While endeavoring to do so she was once more set on the seat. Dorothy, rather surprised, looked up. She saw Lola staring at her intently.

The dancer looked pale and worn. About her there was none of the influence of the previous night. As the morning was cold, she wore a sealskin coat and toque, with a scarf of red silk twisted round her throat. This touch of color was all that was about her likely to suggest the foreign origin. With her pale face and piteous mouth and appealing eyes she looked like a broken hearted woman.

Lola began to speak without any preambles. "Mr. Bawdsey pointed you to me at the last night," she said in her imperfect English. "He declared you did wish early, and I be with my eye on your mansion since 6 hours—what you call o'clock. I see you come, I follow you, I am here, Miss Ward, I am here."

A CHICAGO ALDERMAN OWES HIS RE-ELECTION TO CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Sherwick, 220 Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught a cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was threatened with pneumonia. I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my ears when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council. This remedy is for sale at The Red Cross Drug Store. 9c

A pretty little romance attaches to the marriage of Miss Grace Macgregor who removed from Belleville to Vancouver a few months since, and Mr. Brown McTaggart of the latter place, which was celebrated last week. It seems that last year Mr. McTaggart dreamed that he was being married, and so charmed was he with his dream bride that he determined to find her if possible, a lady who closely resembles her. Some time afterwards he met Miss Clagg at the home of a mutual friend, and in her recognized the bride of his dream.

The past week has been an exciting one in the federal parliament. The whole country has been aroused over the education clauses of the Autonomy bill for the new provinces of the Northwest. Hundreds of petitions from both sides have been presented to parliament, and the Government is now disposed to haul in its horns. It is now said that the ministers finding it impossible to force the proposals through parliament, will abandon the attempt under cover of a plea that it is necessary to ensure a judicial pronouncement upon the constitutional questions involved.

WARDING OFF OLD AGE.

A famous French general, when asked how it was that he had such a erect carriage, replied that it was because he never poised nor touched the floor with his fingers three times every day. If he had acquired rigidity of limb or stiffness of back would do that, he would have had with it weak abdominal muscles, which result in portly corpulence. This partial congestion interferes with stomach digestion and with the action of the heart. The latter organ's power of the liver is lessened, autointoxication results, and arteriosclerosis or hardening of the arteries is the earlier day. But by keeping the spine flexible and the abdominal muscles strong the blood in the circulation is kept free and old age is held off.

A famous physician upon being asked recently what is the chief cause of ill-health, replied, "Thinking and talking about it." The answer is terse. The ceaseless introspection in which so many of the rising generation of the present day indulge is certainly wearing them out. When they are not worrying as to whether they sleep too much or too little, they are fidgeting over the amount of food they take or the quantity of exercise necessary for health. In short, they never give themselves a moment's peace."

—The Grand Lodge A. O. U. W. has decided to raise the rate of assessment all around to nearly the Hunter rates. This should put the order on sound financial basis.

For the Treatment of

ALCOHOLISM

USED IN CONNECTION WITH THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC PROBATION SYSTEM WITH UNVARYING SUCCESS.

The City Council of Montreal has enrolled this marvellously successful Temperance Committee of Montreal officially voted $200 to defray the expenses of placing the medicine in each of the city's 12 wards, as prompt application of the Treatment to bad cases will prevent the fatalities continually occurring in the streets.

No Sanitarium is required. The Treatment can be taken at home or office as desired required. The desire to reform is simply necessary and spirits avoided for a few days.

This medicine is now within the reach of all, the price having been reduced. The wonderful results realized with the worst class of drunkards coming before the Judges of the Recorders' Courts in Quebec and Montreal would seem to indicate that the disease of Drunkenness can be cured—readily and surely—under ordinary circumstances and with the reasonable desire upon the part of an inebriate.

This treatment is simply the medicine of the medical profession—the only secret is as to its administration

Dr. Mackay's discovery is the result of 25 years of practice as a specialist and expert. He is a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the Province of Quebec.

The Government of Quebec through the Judges ordered over 500 boxes of the medicine for the prisoners appearing in the Courts in 1903—Official Reports establish 83 per cent of cures with these cases.

With the public and official endorsation and the record of results published it is unnecessary to waste money experimenting further. All communications private

LIVE SORROW CRUSHES

MORE FORMIDABLE AND MORE AWFUL ENEMY THAN DEATH.

LAW OF LOVE IS UNEQUAL

One Who Makes Sacrifices Has Stronger Affection Than the One for Whom the Sacrifices Are Made—"A Foolish Son Is the Heaviness of His Mother," Saith the Preacher

Delivered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by Frederick Dewar, at Toronto, at the Dept's of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 12.—In almost every home throughout the land the topic chosen by the preacher in this sermon will be more or less familiar one. The text is Proverbs x. 1, "A foolish son is the heaviness of his mother."

Death is an enemy. The Bible distinctly declares it. I remember some years ago, when visiting one of the New England cities, this thought was impressed upon me as never before. A young man, a musical genius, had lately come from London and captured that whole city by his organ playing. He was to play that Sunday in the church where we were worshipping. The night before, coming home from practicing upon the king, he sat down to eat dinner with his wife and two children. Suddenly he began to gasp. A fishbone had caught in his throat. In a few minutes he was dead. The whole city was shocked at the awful tragedy. The church was draped in black. The organ was covered with crape. Among the robes of the dead man's friends his pastor preached a eulogy upon this young man's life from I Corinthians, xv. 26, "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." As the preacher uttered those solemn words they shot into the hearers' consciences, an axiomatic truth.

Oh, yes, death is an enemy. Death at times seems to be a cruel and a merciless enemy. It breaks asunder the marital bands. It lifts the little baby out of the crib and shuts it forever from our eyes by the closing of the coffin lid. It strikes down the strong man who is preaching God's word in the pulpit. It empties the office of the physician who is bending over the patient. It breaks asunder the pleading lawyer to the grave even before the murderer whom he had defended expiates his matter upon the gallows. Yes, death is an enemy. It snatches the mother away from the child just at the critical period when her presence seems to be essential for the moral life of her child.

Mr. Talmage, in preaching to that sermon in the far-off country of New Zealand I colloquized thus: "That widow is to-day mourning for her son. Had the child's sorrow can be more formidable and a more awful enemy than the sorrow of the grave. The fiendish acts of a dissolute, a debauched, a drunken, a cruel or an unfaithful son—under such a sorrow more heavily upon the wife's heart than the corpse of a dead husband. And by the same token I say that the sorrow of an undutiful or unfaithful son fall upon the parental heart with a more crushing weight than the agonizing sufferings of a father and a mother when their children are dying and die wrong. I include here the father's sufferings, as well as the mother's. The full wording of the verse of my text includes both parents. "A wise son maketh a glad father." That sentence, interpreted from the negative standpoint, means, "A bad boy maketh a sad father, and a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother."

Why sad? Why heavy? First because the true father and mother can never separate their joys and sorrows from the joys and sorrows of their child. Though a man may live after his right arm has been amputated, the hand and the arm cease to live as soon as the human body's leaden circulatories and the bones which unite them to the shoulder. But here nature seems to reverse the conditions of life. Though a child may live independent of his parent, a true parent can never live independent of his child. Even from the parental standpoint the parental life and the child life are not only bone of one bone and flesh of one flesh, but the existences are truly grafted upon each other. They derive their joys from the same source; their sorrows unite in both hearts beat as one; they are interdependent. Like the Siamese twins, they have the same blood circulating in their arterial systems.

From the standpoint of a child you may not believe this. You ask: Is not the love between parent and child a mutual love? Why, then, should its separation affect the one equally with the other? Oh, no! The law of love is unequal. The one that sacrifices has a stronger affection than the one for whom the sacrifices are made. I go into the sculptor's studio, and I say: "Thorwaldsen, why art thou bending so laboriously over that piece of cold marble? Has the stone a heart?" "Oh, no," answers the Danish sculptor, "it has not love for me, because it has a heart. I love it because I have put my heart into it in my effort to bring out the beautiful figure which there I see slumbering or beckoning to me from the cold stone." Why does the artist love the canvas and the composer his oratorio? Because their life's work has gone into the creations of those masterpieces of art or of music. Why did Christopher Wren's life seem to be anchored to St. Paul's Cathedral, and Isaac Newton's life to his laboratory? Because in these places these men spent most of their earthly existence in order to work out the problems of their lives.

Love is inspired by sacrifice. That is true. Then how can a true father and mother help loving their children? How can they ever cease to love them, bones from the joys and sorrows, the successes and failures of their children? Oh, how many sacrifices they have made! Was it ten years of sacrifice? More than that—for fifteen, for twenty years, forty years. For years and years the burden of raising their families pressed upon the father and mother. If I could take you back to your old homestead thirty years ago, I would find at you children sitting around the table on the farm unless we cut down our expenses? Then I will have to let you hired girl go and I will do the cooking and washing." "Well" said your father, "we must not economize on the children's education. We cannot preacher uttered those solemn words they shut into the hearers' consciences, an axiomatic truth.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS SICK?

Let your morning urine stand for 24 hours in a glass or vessel, and then if it is milky or cloudy, or contains a reddish brick-dust sediment, or if particles or germs float about in it, your kidneys are diseased. If the kidneys are well they filter just so much blood, but now in his old age are you still going to sin and have him harassed by remorse because he has been too kind to you?

It is natural to pass urine three times a day, but many who regard themselves as healthy are obliged to pass water six to ten times daily and are obliged to get up frequently during the night. They have sick kidneys and bladder and don't know it. Smith's Buchu Lithia Pills cure Rheumatism and all Kidney and Bladder diseases, and make new, rich blood.

We will send you a generous sample post paid free, together with our large book on the above mentioned diseases. Address, W. F. Smith Co., 285 St. James Street, Montreal, Canada.

trusted you, believing that you would do right. You see now, as they see, that it would have been better for you if they had been more strict and severe. But will you blame them for that? It was their love for you that was their fault. How have you repaid that love? Return, I beseech you, and by their forgiveness and ask God for pardon for your sins against him and them.

But there are many others for whom we sympathize with broken-hearted parents who are bearing the heavy burdens of wayward children. Many of these burdens are placed upon backs too weak to carry them and upon hearts too frail to endure the suffering. What makes a great deal of difference how a man can bear a burden, whether he is old or young, sick or well, tottering or straight limbed. You would not hitch an old horse up to a load he could easily have drawn in his prime. Neither is foolish son, should you make your parents, in their old age, bear the burdens of your sins.

How old are your parents? "Oh," you say, "father is about sixty years of age, and mother is about the same." You know when our parents married they did not do as many people of the present day. They did not wait until they had amassed a fortune. Then the daughters were ready to start with the sons at the bottom of the ladder to climb up. Therefore, they married when they were young. Once young together, now they have grown old together." And then your lip quivers as you say: "But mother is not as strong as she used to be, and that old pain has come back in father's heart. He had a fainting spell last week." Ah, yes, they are growing old together! Perhaps one of them is already gone. Is it not a mean act, an awfully mean act, on your part to take a broken-down woman or an old broken-down man and place upon them the burden of your unpardoned sins? They once carried you in their arms; now you ought to be willing to let them lean upon your arm. They once wiped away your tears; now you should be willing to wipe away theirs. They once lived and are still living to make you happy; now you ought to strive to make their last days happy. Do so, put that heavy burden of your wickedness upon their hearts. They are too old for such a burden. You have a Heavenly Father waiting. You have a redeemed earthly father and mother waiting to help lift from them the burden of their anxiety? Will thou not enhance their Heavenly joys by the assurance that thou art coming to complete the family circle around the throne?

Mrs. Ida Wagar spent Sunday the much like the past that I thought for an instant mother would be waiting for me in the front room to welcome me home from college. Just to the rear of the house was the old grapevine arbor built by Captain Spicer before he lost his wife and many sons, whom I can just remember. I had often taken my dessert of fruit there before I gathered the dinner bell. But, come, I must not linger outside. Here, let me take a peek in at the window. I wonder if yonder policeman will think I am a thief. He wears just the same kind of brass buttons as did the officer who used to chase me off the park grass when I was playing "hound and hares" with the boys up yonder walls a more like a trapeze performer than a hare scurrying for her burrow.

Up and through the house we went. Each room had for us a history. In each place we could see the living and the dead. Now side by side, Now a sister in her bridal robes, now a deathbed scene, now—but stop! I cannot go further. They wonder walls more than words can express. With us it was Jessie, De Witt, May, Edith, Frank, Daisy, Maude. With you it was Gertrude, Sarah, Carrie, William, John, Walter. Names different; scenes all the same.

That afternoon I went away from the old homestead with a sad heart. "All that scene of love gone forever!" I kept saying. "All gone, all gone!" Is it all gone forever? But that night as I sped on my way to my own home, where my wife and children were waiting to greet me, I was looking out of the train window. I had my cheek resting upon my hand. I know not whether I was asleep or awake, suddenly a strange vision came to me. I seemed to see the dear faces of my loved ones who are gone. Among the twinkling stars of the night I saw their bright eyes shed heavenly beams upon me. They seemed to say: "The past is not dead. We are going to have our reunions again. We will last week." Ah, yes, they are growing old together! Perhaps one of them is already gone. Is it not a mean act, an awfully mean act, on your part to take a broken-down woman or an old broken-down man and place upon them the burden of your unpardoned sins? They once carried you in their arms; now you ought to be willing to let them lean upon your arm. They once wiped away your tears; now you should be willing to wipe away theirs. They once lived and are still living to make you happy; now you ought to strive to make their last days happy. Do so, put that heavy burden of your wickedness upon their hearts. They are too old for such a burden. You have a Heavenly Father waiting. You have a redeemed earthly father and mother waiting to help lift from them the burden of their anxiety? Will thou not enhance their Heavenly joys by the assurance that thou art coming to complete the family circle around the throne?

BLOOD WILL TELL.

Rich, Pure Blood Will Drive Out the Most Obstinate Case of Rheumatism.

Growing pains, aching joints, stiffened muscles, tender, swollen limbs—that's rheumatism—a blood disease that causes excessive aging and crippples thousands. It is acid in the blood that causes rheumatism. Limewater will ease the pain temporarily—but they never cure. To cure rheumatism you must remove the acid in the impure blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills positively cure rheumatism, acute or chronic. They act directly on the blood, driving the acid out. They make new, warm, pure blood, and send it throbbing through the heart, and lungs and limbs. This new blood banishes every pain and pain-bringing good health and full activity. Mr. T. H. Smith, Caledonia, Ont., says.—"For a number of years I was badly troubled with rheumatism, and was so crippled up I could scarcely do any work. I tried quite a number of medicines but they did not help me. Then I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised for this trouble, and I got a number of boxes. Before the third box was used, found myself improving, continued to use the pills throughout the winter and they have completely cured me. I got so that I could work on the coldest days without a coat and not feel a twinge of the trouble. I have told quite a few of my neighbors about the pills and they are a popular medicine here." This is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, pure, warm blood that they have such great power to cure disease. They positively cure rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, partial paralysis, kidney and liver troubles, anæmia, and the ailments which women alone suffer from. The purchaser must be careful to see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" is printed on the wrapper around each box. If in doubt, either druggists or sent by mail at 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

What One Man Has Done

The Remarkable Achievement of a Remarkable Man—A Splendid Example of What Untiring Devotion Can do.

For years Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., studied the problem of how best to prevent and cure diseases. He was not satisfied with the methods in common use, for they left the condition of the mucous membrane, lining of the stomach, bowels and kidneys after effect invariably resulting in Catarrhal troubles.

Dr. Leonhardt therefore determined that to correct disorders of the stomach, bowels and kidneys he must produce an effective medicines containing absolutely non-irritating substances such as are found in the ordinary pill.

This work on the coldest days with the result he called Anti-Pill.

Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill will cure permanently any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Trouble, Biliousness, or Constipation.

They Are Carefully Prepared.—Pills which dissipate themselves in the stomach cannot be expected to have much effect upon the intestines, and to overcome costiveness the medicine administered must influence the action of these canals. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are so made. Under the supervision of experts, that the substance in them influenced to operate on the intestines, is retarded in action until they pass through the stomach to the bowels.

Ethel—Mamma, if a little boy is a lad, why isn't a big boy a ladder?

Mamma—Per the same reason, I suppose, that, although a little doll is a doll, a big doll is not a dollar.

Ethel, reflectively—That's so. My big doll was two dollars.

"What a nice little boy," said the minister, who was making a call, "won't you come and shake hands, my son?"

A Small Pill, But Powerful. — they that large of the powers of pill by its size, would consider Parmelee's Vegetable Pills of no backing. What is little among pills, what it lacks in size it makes up in potency. The medicine which it contains is put up in these small doses, because they are so powerful that only small doses are required. The full strength of the extracts is secured in this form and do their work thoroughly.

PRUNING FRUIT BUSHES

By H. S. Peart, B.S.A.

Among the things that should occupy the attention of the farmer and the fruit grower at this time of the year, one of the first in importance is the pruning of his fruit trees and bushes. In the farmer's garden the bush fruits are very generally neglected though the pruning which they require is simple in nature and can be done well comparatively little later. The following directions may serve as a guide for some who have bushes to prune this spring.

Raspberries—The pruning of raspberries may be summed up briefly as follows: Remove all the canes after fruiting; thin out the weakest of the new canes so that the row may not be too thick, say not more than one cane to about three and one-half feet, so that good strong lateral shoots may be developed near the ground. Strong laterals may be headed back about one-half. In some localities where there is danger of the canes being injured during the winter, it may be best to leave the pruning until spring but where there is no danger of injury from frost the work is as well done in the fall.

Blackberries or Thimbleberries.—These should be pruned much the same as raspberries except that the new canes should be left somewhat longer, four to four and one-half feet being considered about right. It is generally advisable to prune blackberries in the early spring, as the canes are liable to freeze back during the winter.

Gooseberries.—Without care gooseberries become badly mixed and this prevents the proper development and the easy harvesting of the crop. The fruit is borne on two year old wood, the year old wood, mostly, however, on the one and two year old wood. The aim should be to replace the three year old branches with good healthy new shoots every early each season. Six main branches, four of which may be replaced annually, is a good base from which to build the frame of the bush. Head back the new growth about one-third and keep the bush just open enough to permit the easy harvesting of the fruit. If opened up too much there is danger of the fruit being injured by sunburning.

Red and White Currants—Currants are borne on the short spurs arising from the old wood, and near the base of the new shoots. Two year old canes produce the finest quality and the largest quantity, but plenty of though some fine berries may be produced on the three year old branches. Train the bushes to six main stems, two of which may be removed each season and replaced by two vigorous young canes. All other young canes arising from the ground should be removed. Head back the two new shoots about one-half and all other new branches one-third. Keep the head of the bush open enough to permit of free circulation of air and to admit sufficient sunlight to ripen the fruit properly.

Black Currants—The treatment of black currants does not materially differ from that of reds. The fruit is borne on one year old shoots arising from older branches. As the bushes grow larger and stronger than the reds, it is well to leave about eight canes bearing two each season. Head back the growth severely to encourage the formation of many new spurs from the old wood for the production of fruit. Leave the head open enough to permit of free circulation of the air and the entrance of sunlight to the centre of the bush.

A Dangerous Habit.

Gladstone's Physician Gives Warning Against a Growing American Custom.

The growing habit amongst Americans of taking a mint tablet or some other so-called digestive after eating a hearty meal, is something that Sir Andrew Clark, Sir Gladstone's physician advises us strongly against, saying, "It is absolutely dangerous to take into the stomach remedies which are popularly supposed to aid in the digestion of food."

There is nothing known to the science of medicine that can perform the work of the human stomach. Drugs do not digest or assimilate the food. They simply decompose it. What can be more revolting or disgusting than the thought of taking something into the stomach that is going to turn the good food you have eaten into a mass of corruption.

The only way to overcome indigestion and its evil effects is to remove all irritation, congestion and inflammation from the stomach, liver and intestines, and Mi-o-na is the only agent known that will do this.

When a Mi-o-na tablet is taken before eating, the acrid juice of irritation and inflammation is removed from the stomach and digestive system, and the food that comes after is from the food all that goes to make good, rich blood, firm muscle, steady nerves and solid flesh and tissue.

If you suffer with headaches, indigestion, flatulency, spots before the eyes, vertigo or dizziness, palpitation of the heart, sleeplessness, or any stomach trouble, get a fifty cent box of Mi-o-na from Wallace's Red Cross Drug Store, one of our most reliable druggists, whose faith in the remedy is shown by his offer to return the money if Mi-o-na does not give complete satisfaction.

THE PEA WEEVIL.

Prof. Fletcher, entomologist at the Central Experimental Farm, made the welcome announcement to the Committee on Agriculture that the ravages of the pea weevil, which has caused a loss of $1,000,000 a year to the farmers, are last year very materially reduced in extent. He urged upon the farmers that if they would refuse to sow any peas which had not been fumigated and the weevil in the pea thereby killed this pest would disappear entirely from Canada next year. The loss from this staple crop by injurious insects be estimated at 10 per cent., a great portion of which might be saved by following the advice of the Agricultural Department based on the experience at the experimental farm. Farmers should also be warned a large annual loss which could be materially reduced by the adoption of precautionary measures.

We Paid $100,000

For Liquozone, Yet We Give You a 50c. Bottle Free.

We paid $100,000 for the American rights to Liquozone; the highest price ever paid for similar rights on any scientific discovery. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, in this country and others. We cured all kinds of germ diseases with it—thousands of the most difficult cases obtainable. We proved that in germ troubles it always accomplishes what medicine cannot do. Now we ask you to try it—try it at our expense. Test it as we did; see what it does. Then you will use it just as we do, and as millions of others do. You will use it, not only to get well, but to keep well. And it will save nearly all of your sickness.

Kills Inside Germs.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen gas does. It is a germ killer. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we sterilize every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact that gives Liquozone its worth to humanity. And that worth is so great that we have spent over one million dollars to supply the first bottle free to each sick one we learned of.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Elkhorn, Man.,
March 7th, 1905.

To Editor Napanee Beaver.

I thought I would write you a few lines concerning our own weather for the last three weeks it has been splendid. Indeed the Easterners have no idea of our beautiful spring climate. The thermometer has been 60 in the shade with the people down there are battling with cold weather and snow banks. The snow has now disappeared and wheels are put in motion. Crocuses, our spring flowers, are now in bloom. The land is about ready for sowing, and in some places farmers are now sowing. Fancy straw hats and parasols are being seen upon the streets. A number of prairie fires have been seen which are unusual for March.

Wishing your paper every success that it deserves, I remain

Yours respectfully,
MONA.

LEAVE WELL ENOUGH ALONE.

According to a well-founded rumor, the Dominion Government will during the next session be urged to reduce the customs duty on grades of fence wire which are now on the free list. That such a tax would prove a real boon to the farmers of Canada there is no doubt. In the older parts of the Dominion the old rail worm fences are being year by year replaced by wire fences, and also in the Great West, which is rapidly being settled, practically all the fencing is being done with wire. The cost of fencing of its many forms of construction. Were the kinds of wire most in use free from duty the saving to farmers would be considerable. Fencing material would be raised to that early the rate cent of the duty there can be no doubt. This would mean that a duty of 25 or 30 per cent would impose an extra tax of $150 to $175 on the fencing required for an average farm. Nor would the people of the community suffer only to the extent of an increased expense to those who have to buy fencing, for the general farm improvement would be delayed for many years, which would operate to the keeping down of the value of land. Rather than impose a protest on Nos. 9, 12 and 13, smooth galvanized wire, as was before proposed, it would be a much saner policy to remove the present duty of 20 per cent. on Nos. 7 and 11. If this were done, the revenue would not suffer, for these grades are not extensively imported, but if they were even a strong ef and more satisfactory fence could be obtained without enhancing the cost.

There are some women who seem to be perennially youthful. The young daughters are companions as well as children, and the color in the mother's cheeks, the brightness in the eyes, the roundness of her form, all speak of abounding health and freedom from care? She is at the middle age of life when so many women grow weak, nervous and faded, and yet time has only ripened her beauty. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the special remedy for the distinctly feminine ailments peculiar to the female system. It dries the debilitating drains, heals ulceration, and establishes regularity, firmness and vigor and imparts to the delicate female organs the power and vitality. Women who have used it for health and their beauty have been made "robust and beautiful" by the use of this marvellous medicine.

OPERA HOUSE, MARCH 23th.

The musical farce comedy "Maloney's Wedding Day," which will be presented at the Brisco Opera House, Napanee, on Monday, 27th March, has been constructed with the sole object in view of making people happy. The average life possesses enough sorrow and tribulation of its own, without sitting in a theatre to have it reproduced to the detriment of one's nervous temperament, tired brain or restful repose. This clever comedy presents a collection of comedians, singers and dancers who use every artifice in their humorous composition to make you laugh and that they have been successful is evidenced in the phenomenally laudatory notices they have received from the press everywhere. The comedy is liberally embellished with catchy songs and clever specialties.

"SAN TOY."

"San Toy," that alluring picture of the Chinese Court for which Sidney Jones furnished two dozen delightful musical numbers that fit in admirably with Edwardt Morton's clever lines, is coming to the Grand Opera House, Kingston, on Thursday, March 23d, and will be presented under the direction of John C. Fisher. James T. Powers, who originated the role of "Li," a rather unusual sort of Chinaman, in the production of the play at Daly's Theatre, New York, and played it during the season's run there, is making his first road tour in the part and has everywhere duplicated the success with which all the critics credited him when he was delighting Broadway audiences. Mr. Powers is surrounded with a capital supporting company of which George K. Fortescue, Margaret McKinsey, John Peachey, Nagle Barry, Florence F. Smith, Charles Arling, Marion Longfellow, W. L. Romaine, Emelie Wellington and Fred. W. Huntley are principals. The chorus has upwards of fifty members; there is a special orchestra and a bewildering array of expensive equipment in scenery and costumes. Plan will open on Monday morning.

A FITTING MEMORIAL.

On Tuesday of this week there was placed in the tower of the McDowall Memorial Church, South Fredericksburgh, a fine bell which with the stand weighs 600 lbs. It was cast at the McShane Bell Foundry, has a rich clear tone, and can be heard at a distance of several miles. The bell was given by the children of the late R. J. McDowall, of Kingston, in memory of their father. The following inscription is cast on it, "To the glory of God, and in memory of the McDowall fa'ly, A.D. 1798-1904." 1798 was the year in which the Rev. Robt. McDowall, the pioneer Presbyterian minister of this section of Ontario, came to Canada. His grandson, R. J. McDowall, of Kingston, died in 1904. The donation is a thoughtful recognition of a worthy father, and a memorial to an early pioneer who came to the then wilds of Canada to establish the faith in this new land. It would be well if the descendants of other worthy parents would in a like manner establish some fitting mark of affection and commemoration of our early settlers, who laid so firmly the foundations of our christianity and good government in the old U.E.L. district.

THE MUTUAL LIFE'S GOOD YEAR.

The thirty-fifth annual report of the Mutual Life Company of Canada appears in another column, on page 6, and is the best in the history of the Company, having done over $5,000,000 of new business. Its income was over $1,700,000, being an increase of $165,000. Its expenses were one per cent. less than the previous year, being less than any other company in Canada. Its assets are now over eight and a quarter millions, being an increase of over $600,000 over the previous year. Its surplus increased over the former year over $170,000, after having distributed to its policy holders "35,000 in the shape of dividends. Its surplus over its liabilities amounts to over $1,000,000. The volume of new business was larger that of any year in the Company's history, no less than 3,456 new policies having been issued. The large number of policy holders in this Midland district will be delighted with the splendid showing made; much of the Company's success being due to the energy and business acumen of that popular Belleville citizen, Mr. W. H. Burrows, the general agent for the Company in this district. It is safe to say that the Mutual Life, in all its army of agents, has no one who will look after its interests and the interests of its clients more sharply and successfully than Burrows of Belleville, or Mr. John T. Grange, the local District Agent.

Emma Heath, aged thirteen years, died at Kingston General Hospital from the effects of pouring carbolic acid over her head.

MADAME CURIE

The Famous Discoverers of Radium

All the known radium in the world could be put into a tablespoon, yet this less than an ounce of the magic metal has set the scientists of two continents guessing at the rare conundrum of life. The answers are very wonderful, very stimulating, but very unsatisfactory, so far as the theories are concerned, that seek to explain this rebel element which seems to defy so outrageously Nature's strictest laws. To M. Pierre Curie, a modest chemist, and his wife, belongs the honor of discovering the miraculous metal.

They are poor, hard-working people, consecrated to science, caring little for wealth or fame or position. Reserved and conservative, they speak with extreme caution as to their discovery made in 1898; although the non-scientific world has just awakened to the revelation in the past two years.

In a little, old-fashioned house at the extreme end of Paris, near the outer boulevard, whose criminals have given the section an unsavory name, lived for twenty years this wife with their one child and M. Curie's father, who is also a famous chemist. Some years ago Mlle. Sklodowski, a Polish girl, went from Warsaw, her native town, to Paris to study. She had talent and pluck for the double fight against poverty and opposition. Her first triumph was when she entered a competitive examination for higher mathematics. Her success was so overwhelming that the other competitors were eclipsed and eliminated. Not having money enough to enter one of the regular schools, she entered a municipal working-class institute, where M. Curie directed the laboratory. Soon she was his assistant and a little later his wife.

Some of the experiments of Becquerel on the radio-activity of uranium specially appealed to her, and she determined to examine the refuse of pitchblende, from which uranium is taken. It was then considered worthless, like the culm of our coalfields. She drew her husband into the search and it took four years to get enough traces of this metal, to which time and time its weight in pure gold, to show its properties. Her paper on radium won for her the degree of Doctor of Physical Science.

As a grain of musk will perfume a room for a century or more, constantly throwing off fine particles without decreasing its weight, so radium throws off energy in the form of light, heat, energy, and with a dozen other marvelous effects, without appreciable loss, and in a thousand million years it would have lost only one-millionth of its bulk. It is the Andrew Carnegie of the metals, constantly giving but never growing measurably poorer.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by W. C. Macpherson, at the Department of Agriculture.

NEWBURGH.

Mrs. George Madden is not improving.

Mr Barrett has moved into Mrs. Finkle's house, opposite the Methodist church.

Mrs. Warner, Colebrook, spent last week with her daughters, who are attending the High School here.

John Finn, Marlbank, has moved on the Bell farm, just east of the village.

Mrs. Nelson Shorey, who has been ill with the grippe, suffered a stroke of paralysis on Saturday, and slight hopes are held for her recovery.

Mr. Sidney Littlewood arrived from Watertown, N.Y., on Thursday for a short visit.

Mr. F. D. Moore left for Watertown, N.Y., on Saturday morning, to resume his work in the cheese factories there.

Master James Pomeroy, of Wesley, is very ill with pneumonia.

Little Miss Marion Sutton was able to be out for a drive on Monday.

Mr. Connor left Wednesday night for the Northwest.

Miss Annie Dunn is working in Tamworth.

There was no service in the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening.

Rev. Mr. Mears engaged the large congregation in the Methodist church on Sunday evening.

Rev. Mr. Down apparently values the High School, as it has sent a request reference to that institution in his address on Thursday evening. His reference to Newburgh as a "university town" is somewhat premature, to say the least. And he is right. The old institution has seen better days, and in addition than it is to-day. The recommendation of Inspector Seath that a fourth teacher be added may have to be acted upon this year. If the school increases this year as much as it did last two years, the question of an engaged will be necessary. The increased accommodation will be one of the problems that will confront the Board of Education.

Last Saturday night, a moonlight night and a good crowd made the teamering in the Methodist church a success. A very pleasant manner introduced the speaker of the evening, Rev. Mr. Down, of the Bay Circuit, gave an excellent address on the very appropriate theme "A Square Meal." Rev. R. Duke, Selby, followed in a short address on "Distortion." The music was furnished by the choir of the church, assisted by Mrs. Beeman and Mrs. Sharp. Rev. Mr. Mears said that if he were in any other church he would be saying some very nice things about the music but he might best said them and he one would have criticised, for the choir were in great form. They sang with that enthusiasm that comes from long practice, and their numbers called forth loud applause from the audience. The opening anthem "All Hail the Power," was worthy of special note. The soloists were in fine voice and took their parts with appropriate compass of voice. Mrs Sharp, Miss Nesbitt, Dr. D. Shorey and Dr. D. Moore, sang "Drifting," with fine effect. The organ solo, by Miss Thomson, was well received, winning hearty and long continued praise. J. H. Aylesworth and D. A. Nesbitt made short, spicy addresses and the programme closed with the national anthem. The proceeds were $46.00.

STRATHCONA.

The roads are in a very bad condition. It is almost impossible to drive on them.

Percy Pybus, who was employed in W. J. Pudig's paper mill, had the misfortune to burn his hand in the dryers, on Monday evening. He expects to give up her school for a short time, on account of ill health. Miss Calvin, of Napanee, will take her place.

Mr. Will Sparrow, of Wilseyford, is visiting friends here.

John Thompson, after a short illness of hemorrhage of the lungs, at his home on Centre street, on Saturday afternoon. He was a well known and highly respected resident of the town. The remains were placed in Newburgh vault.

We are pleased to say that Mr. Gildon Peters, who has been confined to the house for some time, is able to be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Gordon and Mr. and Mrs. S. Warner were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Johnson on Sunday.

Miss Ila Day, of Harrowsmith, spent Sunday the guest of Miss Helen Wartman.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hart entertained a number of their friends on Thursday evening. Games and refreshments were included in, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

It is claimed that the changes made in the new Autonomy bill for the new provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta regarding Separate Schools, met with the approval of the Liberal members who opposed the bill as first brought down by the Laurier Government, amount to almost nothing, and the act is supposed to be satisfactory to the separate schools. Mr. Borden will oppose the bill, and will demand full provincial right for the new provinces.

The jury at Belleville in the charge of conspiracy against Frank J. Rielly, of Kingston, of ballot box tolerably heavy, brought in a verdict of guilty. Justice McMahon at once pronounced the sentence of imprisonment in a very feeling way to the accused. He sentenced him to two years in the Central at hard labor. The Grand Jury found true bills against Rielly and T. S. Carman, accused of criminal libel, and the case was traversed until the next sitting of the Court. Barnes Harriett, on a charge of conspiracy, was also traversed until the next assizes. Rielly took his sentence quite coolly.

Chas. Drake, a mail carrier at Chapinville, Conn., says, "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the champion of all liniments. The past year I was troubled a great deal with rheumatism in my shoulder. After trying several cures the storekeeper here recommended this remedy and it completely cured me. There is no use of anyone suffering from that painful ailment when this liniment can be obtained for a small sum. THE above picture of the man and fish is the trademark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

WEDDING BELLS.

The home of Mr Anson Rose, Selby, was the scene of a very pretty wedding at one o'clock on Wednesday, March 15th, when Miss Lillie Reid was united in marriage to Mr. Lorn J. Innes. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. Duke, Selby, in the presence of a host of friends. To the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Amy Jewell, the bridal party entered the parlor. The bride was given away by Mr. Albert Rose, and Miss Edith Jewell performed the duties of bridesmaid, while Mr. James Innes ably assisted the groom. After the ceremony and congratulations the company repaired to the dining room, where a large table was heavily laden with delicacies. The bride looked charming in a skirt of dark blue cloth and cream silk waist with shirred drop-yoke and trimmed with cream silk lace. The bridesmaid also wore a dark blue cloth skirt and white silk waist. After doing justice to the good things provided, Mr. Duke arose and made a very neat speech and finished by wishing the young couple every success in life. Then all arose from the table, and after indulging in social conversation for a short time, the happy pair, amidst showers of rice and best wishes, set off for the bride's brother's home, where they intend to spend a week, after which they will settle in their home in Switzerville. The numerous presents were both beautiful and useful and showed in what high esteem they both were held.

VENTRILOQUIST MARS FUNERAL

Sam Johnson, a negro ventriloquist of Queenstown, Md., is likely to have had the effect of certain kind to not cheap Sam used his talent to break up a funeral; some negroes objected, the funeral was delayed, and Sam is in jail facing a fine.

Resplendent in a stovepipe hat and a Prince Albert coat, Sam joined the mourners on the way to the cemetery. The imposing raiment led to the belief among the other negroes that Johnson was a visiting parson, and great respect was shown him.

As the pall-bearers were about to lower the coffin into the grave a voice, apparently issuing from the coffin, said:

"Let me down easy, boys."

The pall-bearers prepared to decamp.

"Lower me gently, you scharcoal chumps," the voice continued. "If I've got to be buried, I want to lie reminiscently."

That "finished" the pall-bearers and everybody else but Sam. Sam staid because he couldn't run for laughing.

The joke was too good to keep; Sam told it, and the sheriff got him.

A MILLINERY FORECAST.

The Paris correspondent of the Washington Star has this to say regarding spring headgear:

"Every woman is on the qui vive to know what her spring hat is to be. One thing she may make up her mind to is that her pretty pompadour will be hidden, because the new hats will be worn well over the face. They are, generally speaking, small and the broad lines recently in vogue will also go out. As to trimming, wings arranged in groups between some kind of a bird's head are the correct thing, as de rigeur. Owls' heads are considered extremely modish, but I have a strange fancy that even a pretty woman takes on something of an owl-like expression when she sets Minerva's head on her pretty head. Aigrets of all kinds will find their place on the new hats; indeed, upstanding trimmings will supersede the winter flat effects. Shepherdess hats, built up of gold braid and crowned with flowers, are being made up by Virot, and the modiste Napoleon is one of the advanced shapes. The dauntless Virot, of the theatre caps are having a great vogue here in Paris, with the Juliet cap taking precedence. These dainty theatre caps, or matinee bonnets, as they are called, are little more than a framework with a light bow attached, but such a framework and such a bow as only a Parisian artist could achieve.

MISS CECELIA BALLANTYNE

Died suddenly at her home, West Bridge st., last Friday afternoon, aged 62 years. Deceased since her husband's death, five years ago, has apparently in good health up to the time of her death, being suddenly stricken with cerebral hemorrhage of Bright's disease, and which resulted in heart failure. Miss Ballantyne was a daughter of the late Captain Ballantyne, Deseronto Road, who some years ago retired from farming, and came to reside in Napanee. Miss Ballantyne was a woman of education and refined tastes, and was highly respected by all who knew her. For years she was a teacher in West Ward school, and will be long remembered by many of her pupils for her kindly disposition and delicate tact in creating in them a desire for education and instilling into them refined tastes and gentle manners. A brother and sister, Mr. Peter Ballantyne, in Alberta, and Mrs. Wm. Robb, Montreal, survive. A sister, Mrs. Jas. Hay, Kingston, died a few years ago. Deceased was a life long member of the Presbyterian church, the funeral services being conducted by the Rev. J. R. Conn, at her late residence on Monday afternoon.

No Argument Will Convince a Women that a flour is all right, if she can't make good bread with it. The one argument that wins every woman in favor of ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is, that it never fails to turn out the most beautiful Bread and Cake and the most crisp and delicious Pastry when used according to the very simple "Royal Household" recipes. That one fact outweighs all the theories of two thousand years.

No other flour has ever made so many intimate friends among Canadian women in so short a time.—Perhaps it's because "Royal Household" is made by the new electrical process—that makes a wonderful difference in flour.

Your grocer sells "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" and you can have the recipes by simply sending your name and address to The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited, Montreal, and mentioning the name of this paper.

The Yellow Holly

BY FERGUS HUME.

"What do you want?" asked Dorothy calmly, her nerves much more under control than Lola's were. Yet both were agitated.

"Ah," cried the foreign woman, throwing back her head, "give him to me! I love him—I worship him! Give him to me!"

"Of whom do you speak, mademoiselle?"

"Ah, mademoiselle—so he speaks when angry. But I am of the French. I am senora—I am Spanish. I have warm blood here in my heart." She struck her breast fiercely. "And if you take him from me I will kill you! Yes, I will give you the death—quick, sure, sudden!"

Her face drew near to Dorothy's as she spoke, and the girl could feel her hot breath on her cheek. But Dorothy had a brave heart of her own and did not flinch. For all that, Lola might intend to stab her at the very moment. The park keeper was some distance away, and it was useless to create a scandal by crying aloud for assistance. Lola was just the kind of mad creature to make a scene. Retaining control of herself, though her heart was beating rapidly, Dorothy fixed her eyes firmly on those of Lola. "Sit a little farther away," she said, "and we will talk calmly."

"Are you not afraid?" asked Lola, surprised. She had always found the savage attitude effective.

Dorothy laughed. "I was never afraid of anything or of any one in my life," she said coolly. "And I am not going to begin now. What do you want, mademoiselle? Why do you threaten me?"

"Bah!" cried the other, but moving back a little as requested. "You know, you blond white cat, you. It is Georges."

"What about George?"

"He is mine. He loves me. You would take him from me."

"If you are speaking of George Brendon"—

"Of who else should I speak? You know—ah, you know!"

"Yes. I know. I heard some rumors as to how he helped you. But I do not believe for a moment that he loves you."

"He does. You dare ask that he loves."

"I shall do nothing of the sort. We may as well understand one another, as you have no right to thrust yourself upon me."

"I do do what I do please," said Lola sullenly.

"This sort of thing is not allowed in England. I am sorry for you, and so I speak. Otherwise I should call the park keeper."

"I want not any sorrow. I do want my own George."

"Mr. Brendon is engaged to marry me," said Dorothy deliberately.

Lola sprang to her feet with flashing eyes. "It will not be!" she almost shouted. "I love him!"

"Sit down," said Dorothy, much in the same tone as she would have moved a fractious child, and Lola resumed her seat immediately.

"But I will have my George," she muttered.

"Listen to me," said Dorothy quietly. "I have no right to answer your questions. But I am sorry for you. I will speak to Mr. Brendon."

"No"—Lola looked up in terror—"you must not do that. He will be very angry—oh, much—much enraged."

"Then that shows me you have been speaking untruths, Mr. Brendon does not love you"—

"But I say yes—yes—yes!" Lola sprang to her feet again and poured forth her wrath. "Ah, you think he will be milor, and that you will marry him, but"—

"What do you know about that?" asked Dorothy, rising indignantly.

"Oh, I do know much—much," Lola snapped her fingers. "Yes, I know that which I do know. I can stop him from being milor, and that I will—for I will be milor he will marry you. But as my George he will make me—me"—she struck her breast again—"me, Lola Velez, madame his wife."

"You are talking nonsense," said Dorothy coolly, though she felt annoyed and puzzled. "What can you know?"

"That which I do know. Wait—oh, wait a day—one day, two day, three day, and then"— She snapped her fingers. "You see—yes—you see how clever I am. I go, I go, you white cat. I go to get my George."

Lola darted away at a run, which slackened to a rapid walk as she neared the park gates. Dorothy sat down again, too amazed to follow.

CHAPTER XIV.

KOWLASKI was a large, fat, good natured blackguard of a man, quite without principle. He came from some remote village in the Balkans. In his early days he arrived in London penniless and strove to make a living by selling toys in the street. Then he turned scene shifter at a music hall and while thus engaged educated himself to write and read and to speak English with wonderful fluency. Also he saved money and speculated in a small way, having a marvelous instinct of picking out lucrative ventures. Shortly he became stage manager; one thing led to another until he became proprietor of the very music hall which had witnessed his humble beginning.

When he first set eyes on Lola he had guessed that it would pay to invest money in her. The success of the ballet proved that Kowlaski was right, as usual, and he smiled his oily smile when he saw the crowded houses and looked over the receipts. The ballet would run for more than a year. He was sure of that, and set about some other business now that the music hall was flourishing. It was at this point that Lola demanded a week's holiday. Kowlaski whimpered. He usually did so to make people think he was weak, but under his apparent weakness he was possessed of an iron strength.

Having great experience with women, he thought to overcome Lola's will by being gifted with a superlative temper, laughed in his face. All his cleverness could not make her swerve from the point. "I want a week to myself," she said doggedly. They were talking in French, as Kowlaski could swear more fluently in that tongue and wanted freedom of speech.

"But, my dear child"—Kowlaski was always paternal—"it will not do. You are the draw, and if you go out of the bill the people will not come to my house."

"I don't care. I want a week, and a week I will have."

"Why do you wish for this week?"

"That's my business."

Kowlaski tried reproaches. "If you were a grateful woman"—

"Ah, bah! What of gratitude? You wanted me or would you have seen me die in the gutter?"

Kowlaski began to whimper. "You will ruin me, my dear. It cannot be done."

"It must be. I want it to be done."

In the face of this obstinacy Kowlaski gave in. But first of all he tried threats, and Lola threatened to throw a chair at him. He finally saw that she should have her week, and Lola walked out of the office without thanking him. That was the last he saw of her for seven days.

He made the most of her absence, declaring that she had been called away to nurse a dying relative, and would reappear with a broken heart to keep her engagements with the public. Bawdsey saw this notice.

It was the first he had heard of Lola's escapade, and he went at once to her rooms in Bloomsbury to ask where she was going. Lola had already gone and, according to the landlady, had left no information as to her whereabouts.

Bawdsey was disappointed. He saw that Lola had taken every precaution to hide her trail and that there was not much chance of finding her. However, he went to see Kowlaski, stage manager began to talk of the dying mother, and Bawdsey shut him up.

"Rubbish! That's for the public. I want to know where she is gone."

"My dear, I do not know," said Kowlaski, and for the first time in his wicked old life he told the truth.

Not to be beaten, Bawdsey sought out George Brendon. But George was as ignorant as the manager and the landlady. "I haven't the slightest idea," he said when Bawdsey asked, "and, to tell you the truth, I don't see why you should try to find out. I don't see what right you have to control her movements."

"Did she write and tell you where she was going?"

"No, and if she had done so I should not tell you," replied George, annoyed by the man's persistence.

"You may as well be civil to me, Mr. Brendon. You know that I am your friend."

"Oh, I've heard all that before. But people who talk much of friendship and gratitude are generally humbugs."

Lola threatened to throw a chair at him.

"I am not," said Bawdsey quietly. "See here, Mr. Brendon, Lola is in love with you"—

"That's my business. Leave it alone."

Bawdsey took up his hat. "Oh, very well. If you will not be civil I cannot help you to learn who killed your father."

"What!" George sprang from the table at which he was writing and seized the man's arm. "Do you know that?"

"Maybe, Mr. Brendon. No, I do not know, but"—

"Then what do you mean by saying"—

"We had better have a chat," said Bawdsey and sat down. "But I wish to know where I stand. Lola loves you. Do you love her?"

"No," said Brendon, seeing that he would have to humor the man. "I am engaged to marry Miss Ward."

"Will you help me to marry Lola?"

"Willingly, though, to tell you the truth, I know very little about you, and to make that girl marry you"—

"Ah, Lola can look after herself," Mr. Brendon. If she becomes my wife she will have the upper hand. But I am so deeply in love with her that I am willing to play second fiddle. Can't you dispossess her of this infatuation for you?"

"See here, Bawdsey, if you can persuade this woman to get over her liking for me and to marry you I shall be delighted. I do not know where she is just now, but it is my impression that she has gone away because she is afraid of me."

"Afraid of you? Oh, that's absurd!"

"No, it isn't. The other morning she saw Miss Ward, and there was a scene in the park."

Bawdsey hung his red head. "I fear that is my fault," he confessed. "I pointed out Miss Ward to Lola and"—

"And it was I who foolishly mentioned that Miss Ward sometimes took a walk in the morning in the park."

"Oh," said Bawdsey, "I mentioned that also."

"Did you wish Lola to see Miss Ward?" asked George angrily.

"No. Nor did I intend to say anything about the walking in the early morning. I simply pointed her out in the box to Lola so that Lola might see there was no chance of your marrying her."

"As if any woman would accept such an excuse," said Brendon contemptuously. "Then she questioned you about the walk?"

"Yes. She mentioned something about what you had told her, and I was rather free with my tongue. I am not usually," said Bawdsey penitently, "but there's something about Lola that makes me behave like a child. I'm wax in her hands. So she saw Miss Ward?"

"Yes. And she knows that I am angry. Of course Miss Ward sent to tell me at once, and I called on Lola to give her a talking to, but she was gone when I arrived. I am quite content not to see Lola again so long as she leaves Miss Ward alone."

"I will try to keep her away," said the detective, "but I have very little influence with her."

"Tell her I am angry and will be still more angry if she does not keep away from Curzon street. Well, we have discussed this matter. I now want to hear what you meant by your reference to Lola's father. Do you know who killed him?"

Bawdsey shook his head. "I can't say for certain. But be it remembered with the matter than you think."

"Who is that?"

"Mr. Roger Ireland."

George looked astonished. "But that is ridiculous," he said. "Mr. Ireland told me that he did not know."

"Oh, I don't say that he knows for certain. But he has been acquainted with the matter than you think."

"How did you come to know Mr. Ireland?"

"He called to see Miss Bull, and I dropped across him."

"How did you get talking of the case?"

"Well, you see," said Bawdsey easily, "we naturally talked of Mrs. Jersey, and one thing led to another until I discovered that Ireland had been in San Remo when your father was murdered. I wished to find out who killed him, so I questioned Mr. Ireland."

"Why do you wish to know who killed my father?" asked George.

"Because I think that the murder of Mrs. Jersey and the attempt at that crime. See here"—Bawdsey cleared his throat—"Mrs. Jersey was in San Remo at the time of the death"—

"How do you know that?"

"Don't I tell you I questioned Mr. Ireland?"

George looked sharply at the detective. "What magic did you use to make him talk? Mr. Ireland knows how to hold his tongue."

"Well, when he found that I was looking after the case of Mrs. Jersey—and I made no secret of that—he was good enough to tell me all he knew. He thought, as I did, that the murder in San Remo was connected with the crime of Amelia square. There is nothing new in that. Mr. Ireland declined to tell me who he thought was guilty, but he hinted that he had seen the lady in the blue domino unmasked."

"Did he recognize her?"

"I think he did, but he assured me that he could not be sure and that he had not seen the lady again."

"Then he did know the face?"

Bawdsey's face assumed an impenetrable expression. "I can only refer you to Mr. Ireland," he said. "And as to Lola"—

"Oh, she'll turn up again," said Brendon irritably. "Don't worry me about Lola. I wish you would marry her and take her back to your native land."

"What! Me, a native of Mr. Brendon?" asked Bawdsey calmly.

"America, I understand, but intend as much when we met."

Bawdsey shook his head. "I am as English as you are," he declared.

"Well," said Brendon, with a shrug, "I thought as much. Your accent fails at times. You are not a good actor, Bawdsey."

"Never you mind, sir. I can hold my tongue when I choose, and on this occasion it does suit me. But remember, Mr. Brendon, that whatever happens you have a friend in me."

"Are you referring to my father's murder?"

"And to Mrs. Jersey's. I have my suspicions as well, there's nothing more to be said. When I am certain I shall let you know."

"One moment, Bawdsey," said Brendon as the man rose to leave at the door. "Do you suspect Miss Bull?"

"Why should I suspect her?" asked the detective in surprise.

"Because she was not on good terms with Mrs. Jersey, and you have taken up your abode in the house"—

"I have taken her, you would say. Well, maybe," rejoined the man composedly, "I know what I know, and when I am more certain of what I know, sir"—He nodded. "Good day," he said and went abruptly.

It struck George that Bawdsey was a most mysterious person and knew far more about the San Remo murder than Derrington could have told him. Still it was possible that Derrington had questioned himself to Bawdsey, and it was necessary to do so if he wanted the murder of Mrs. Jersey cleared up. And Derrington, from his point of view, had to be was at the house on the night and about the time the crime was committed, seemed to know something that might lead to the detection of the assassin.

"Humph," said George to himself when alone, "I shall go round and see Miss Bull at once. It seems to me that Bawdsey is trying to serve two masters. It is impossible that my grandfather can know the truth. Yet, going by his height and build and that sable claret colored coat, he was certainly in the house on the night in question."

On arriving at St. Giles square he saw a carriage at the door of the Derrington mansion. On asking for Lord Derrington, George was informed that his lordship was engaged with Mrs. Ward and could see no one. Brendon turned away, wondering that he had not recognized the carriage, and he was still more vexed with himself when Dorothy put her head out of the brougham and called to him.

"My dearest," he said softly, so that the footman and coachman might not hear, "this is an unexpected pleasure. Why are you not inside?"

"My mother wished to see Lord Derrington alone," replied Dorothy. "I am waiting till she comes out. She has been with him for half an hour. I do know what they are talking about."

It was at this moment that a message was brought out of the house from Mrs. Ward saying that her daughter could drive home, as she would not be disengaged for another hour. Dorothy looked puzzled. "I can't understand," she said. "There is something wrong with my mother. Lord Derrington came to see her one day, and she has been upset ever since."

George shook his head. He suspected Mrs. Ward of knowing more than she chose to confess, and based his suspicions on the fact of the yellow holly which she had given Dorothy to present to him. Meanwhile he kept these suspicions to himself and made some excuse. "Oh, Mrs. Ward and my grandfather are probably talking over old iniquities," he said easily. "But I don't see why I should not take advantage of this chance."

"What do you mean, George?" asked Dorothy, with a nervous blush.

"Well, here is the brougham, and here you are. Why shouldn't we drive around the park before you go home?"

"My mother will be angry," said Dorothy, hesitating. Then she blushed again. "But I shall brave her anger. We have much to talk about, as I wish to speak of Lola Velez."

"Dorothy, surely you do not think"—

"No, and yet I want to ask a few questions. I believe she is mad, George. Get in and we will drive round the park."

Meantime Mrs. Ward was seated in a chair facing Lord Derrington. The old gentleman looked savage, but Mrs. Ward was quite at her ease. They had been having a bit of row, and Mrs. Ward so far had come off best. The conversation had been in reference to the sentence which the little woman's ear when he had made her promise to hold her tongue about George.

"Of course I do think it is the meanest thing a man can do," said Mrs. Ward bitterly. "What if I did cheat at cards? Every woman does that, and I was losing no end of money."

"I don't think your friends would take that view," said Derrington grimly. "I came to hear of the matter quite by chance, and it is plain that you won over a hundred pounds by cheating."

"It's that horrid Mrs. Wayflete who told you"—

"No. If Mrs. Wayflete knows she has held her tongue. I learned it from a source of which you are ignorant. But the fact remains you cheated, and if your friends knew it you would be ostracized by all of them."

"As if they did not do these things themselves," retorted Mrs. Ward. "But since you have been so nasty I intend to be nasty too."

"I shouldn't advise you to be nasty to me, Mrs. Ward. I have a large reserve fund of strength."

Mrs. Ward laughed. "You needn't repeat my adjectives," she said in her most frivolous manner. "If you want to know the way in which I intend to protect myself"—

"What do you mean by that?"

"I mean this," cried the little woman, growing angry all at once. "I am not going to be threatened about that unfortunate episode connected with the cards. It was that horrid Mrs. Wayflete who told you, so don't deny it. I am not going to be threatened without holding my own. Besides, I want Dorothy to marry your grandson."

"Which one?" asked Derrington coolly.

"You have only Walter Vane."

"Excuse me. George Brendon, whether there is a marriage or not, is equally my grandson. I dislike Walter very much, and it is my mind to acknowledge him as my heir."

"I thought as much after your sticking up for him the other day," said Mrs. Ward furiously. "Now, look here, Lord Derrington, if Dorothy marries that Brendon creature I won't be able to do a thing with her, very much as I love her. But Walter shall be Dorothy's husband. I have made up my mind."

"Because he's a fool and putty in your hands."

"I shouldn't be vulgar if I were you," said Mrs. Ward in a dignified manner. "But so long as George Brendon leaves Dorothy alone I shall say nothing."

"That's really very good of you, Mrs. Ward."

"Your being nasty won't make me change my mind. But you quite understand the situation, Lord Derrington. Walter is to marry my daughter, and George is to be kept away."

"I don't see how he is to be kept away. I assure you Brendon is a strong man, and his will is quite equal to mine."

"Nonsense! You have the strongest will in London."

"And you come here to try to break it."

"Life is a game," said Mrs. Ward, leaning back, with a pretty air of philosophy. "And at present I hold the trump card."

"What is it?" asked Derrington, wondering by what means she hoped to make him consent to her demands.

"I'll tell you presently," said Mrs. Ward in a most masterful tone, which

"That is the weapon with which Mrs. Jersey was stabbed."

amused Derrington. "But you understand that if George Brendon doesn't keep away I shall give information to the police and have him arrested in connection with that murder."

"Oh, no; you won't," said Derrington good humoredly.

"Oh, yes; I shall. As to your accusation about my having cheated, you shall say nothing about that."

"Indeed I shall do so if you trouble Brendon."

"Think of Dorothy."

"I do think of Dorothy, and I'm very sorry she has such a mother."

"You dare to insult me," began Mrs. Ward when Derrington, who was losing patience, cut her short.

"I've had enough of this," he said sharply. "You shall hold your tongue about Brendon or I'll tell what I know, or"—

What Is Anti-Pill?

A Somewhat Peculiar Name Explained —How Dr. Leonhardt Came to Call His Famous Prescription "Anti-Pill."

Dr Leonhardt found in his practice that chronic constipation and its kindred complaints were the result of a dried-up condition of the mucous membrane lining of the stomach and bowels. He investigated further, and found that this condition was invariably brought about by the use of cathartics, which all contain a certain amount of resinous matter.

After the active action of such medicines a resinous residue remains behind and this has a drying effect on the lining of the stomach and bowels. He then set his mind to produce a medicine which would act naturally and in accordance with Nature's own arrangements which would be entirely free from all resinous matter.

After much experiment he succeeded, and discovered the difference between his treatment and the old-fashioned, irritating, he gave it the name Anti-Pill."

Anti-Pill will cure dyspepsia, biliousness, or constipation perfectly and without exception. Anti-Pill is a pill habit left to be overcome later. Anti-Pill is sold by The Wilson-Fyfe Co., Limited, Niagara Falls, Ont. Sole agents for Canada. 10c

A CHICAGO ALDERMAN OWES HIS ELECTION TO CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Alderman Sherrick, 23d Ward, Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overheated, which settled on my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak above a whisper. A friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I think the medicine that I won my seat in the Council. This remedy is for sale at The Red Cross Drug Store.

We had one of the finest gatherings in Camden East on Monday evening, that this place has witnessed for a long time. The friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Coulter and Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Edgar met at the home of Mr. Coulter, about forty in number, and judging by the way each one enjoyed themselves and the amount of oysters, cake, coffee, etc., they devoured, there was no wonder at 3 o'clock in the morning that all started satisfied to go home. Following is the address.

To Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Coulter and Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Edgar:—

Dear Friends and Neighbors. — We your friends and neighbors, having been informed that you purpose moving in another locality, and realizing the loss our community will sustain by your departure, could not forbear showing the high esteem and respect we have for you, and the warm place we have for you in our hearts.

During the score of years which you have lived among us you have made many friends, who will regret the turn of fate which is causing you to sever your connection with us. We have watched with pleasure your business career, and the rapid advancement you have made by industrious, earnest, honest, painstaking efforts.

In parting with you we are fully conscious that we are losing two of the best citizens and two of the best business men, but feel the pleasure we have had in your home and your friendship will be always cherished by us. We would not forget to mention Mr. Edgar's mother, who has been so kind and obliging in times of sickness, and whom we have always had a kind and sympathetic friend. Our sincere wish is that she may be spared many years, and that her declining days may be cheered by the presence and comfort of him who doth all things well.

This address being read, in your honor and that of your dear wives who have faithfully stood by you in good word and work proves the warmth of affection of those who know you best and now for the present we say farewell, wishing yourself and kind families a bright and happy future.

Signed on behalf of the citizens of Camden East.

David Saul, R. J. LeRoy,
A. W. Hamilton, L. Williams,
James Skinner, Wm. Bicknell.

Mr. Coulter in very feeling terms told us they would never forget Camden East and said he was so glad to see us, as it was out to make him a farewell visit, and was very thankful in behalf of himself and his dear companion for the excellent address just presented.

Mr. Edgar said also that they would never forget their old home, and said they were not going to stay away, but would be able to see us often. With reference to that part of the address for his mother, he said that was his mother's religion, visiting and helping the sick.

In conclusion he said, "between the oysters and the address, I am too full to say anymore.

Mr. Coulter and family go to Sterling, and Mr. Edgar and family go to Yarker. After singing "God be with you till we meet again," the meeting dispersed.

Vote for the By-law's

On Tuesday next the By-law to give the canning factory exemption from taxes (except school taxes) for a period of ten years, and $75 a year for ten years to help cover expense of getting water, will be voted on at the several polling places in Napanee, the details of which will be found on page seven of this week's Beaver. It is the duty of every property owner to cast a ballot on Tuesday next, as every vote not polled is as good as if the ratepayer voted against the By-laws. In order to carry the By-laws it requires that the actual number of property owners on the list vote for the proposition. The promoter, Mr. Wm. A. Carson, of Belleville, proposes to establish a canning factory there, when equipped, at least $15,000, and to pay out annually in wages the sum of $8,000. All he asks is a sum to help defray the expense, and the benefit that the town will reap from the employment of a large number of hands here. Take into consideration the fact that the land now contributes about $60 taxes, whereas the school tax alone on the proposed factory will amount to over $50.

GREEN FOOD FOR THE CAT.

It is a common thing to hear women say that they cannot keep growing plants in the house as the cat eats them on account of the cat, who persists in nibbling and biting the leaves and stems as they grow, to the great annoyance, sometimes destroying in the course of a few days some favorite or rare fern or flower.

The reason for this seeming vandalism on the part of the cat ought to be. The cat requires green food, if it is to be kept healthy and happy, and the cat will eat the grass rather than go without.

In summer, following this need of its system a cat will eat grass freely in winter or in the city, when this supply of green fodder is cut off, common sense suggests that the cat be artificially provided with it.

For its own sake, as well as for the safety of the Boston fern and the rubber plant, why not plant a cigar box of soil with some quick-growing thing like oats or sorrel, and let the cat help itself.

A Family Reunited.

The work of the Provincial Immigration Office at the Union Station is not without its touches of romance, as the following story shows. Last week an elderly man and his wife arrived here from Norway in search of two sons who had settled in New Ontario a year ago. They did not know the exact whereabouts of the young men, and Mr. T. Southworth, Director of Colonization, was asked to give what assistance he could in tracing them. Sending the result, temporary employment was obtained for the man in this city. Yesterday the immigrants arriving in Toronto included two young Norwegian girls, who could not speak a word of English, and had through tickets from Norway to Lisgar, Ont., which, as the sequel proved, should have been made out to Lisgard, Ont. The services of Mr. A. L. Hertzberg, Consul for Norway and Sweden, were requisitioned and it was then found that the girls were daughters of the man and woman mentioned, and were looking for their brothers. The parents and their daughters were soon brought together, and their rejoicing at the reunion was most sincere. Meanwhile, the Colonization Department had, through its records of New Ontario settlers, traced the sons, who are farming near New Liskeard, and have written to them. A reply was received last night stating that the parents and daughters be sent on, and expressing pleasure at the manner in which the officials had looked after them.—Toronto Globe.

ALCOHOLISM
USED IN CONNECTION WITH THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC PROHIBITION SYSTEM WITH UNVARYING SUCCESS.

The City Council of Montreal has endorsed this marvellous discovery. The Finance Committee of Montreal recently voted $1000 to defray the expenses of a public test made in each of the city P. L. a stations, as prompt application of the Treatment is had cases will prevent the fatalities continually occurring in the cells.

No Sanitarium is required. The Treatment can be taken at home. No special diet required The desire to reform is simply necessary and spirits avoided for a few days.

This medicine is now within the reach of all, the price having been reduced to $10. The wonderful results obtained with the worst class of drunkards coming before the Judges of the Recorder's Court, Quebec and Montreal warrant the statement that the disease of Drunkenness can be cured as readily and easily under ordinary circumstances and with the reasonable desire upon the part of an inebriate

This treatment is simply the medicine of the medical profession—the only secret is as to its administration

Dr. Mackay's discovery is the result of 25 years of practice as a specialist and expert. He is a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the Province of Quebec

The Government of Quebec through the Judges ordered over 500 boxes of the medicine for the prisoners confined in the Courts in 1904—Official Reports establish 89 per cent of cures with these cases.

While the public and official endorsation and the record of results published it is unnecessary to waste money experimenting further. All communications private

VALUE OF A GOOD NAME

WHAT THE WORLD ESTEEMS, YET ONLY FEW FIGHT FOR.

LEGACY TO ONE'S CHILDREN

Imporishable Capital for the Right Conduct of the Business in Life—A Good Name Is Not a Pauper, But Gathereth the Rewards of an Earnest and Practical Industry—How it Is Attained.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Dixey, at Toronto, in the Dept's of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 13.—What the whole world esteems, yet what only the few strive for; what a man reverences and values as priceless, yet often flings away, and what every one wishes to bequeathe to his children is the subject of to-day's sermon, the text chosen being Proverbs xxii, 1, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."

What is capital? "Money, property or stock employed in trade, manufacture, etc., the sum invested or lent as distinguished from the income or interest," is the definition given by the lexicographer. It is wealth producing wealth, not wealth being absorbed or being eaten up by expenses.

But capital, according to the lexicographer's definition, is not representative of gold ingots only. I climb with the miner a hillside in Colorado or Nevada. He points to some rock and says, "There are millions of dollars' worth of gold buried here." "Why do you not get it out?" "Because," he answers, "I have no capital. I must have machinery to break the rocks; I must have miners to burrow into yonder depths; I must have money to cart away my ore to the smelting furnace. Money must be had before you can produce money."

I go into a store and see at work the busy manager of a great mercantile firm. I say to him: "Why are you working for others? Why do you not work for yourself? If you are smart enough to manage a business for other men, certainly you are smart enough to manage a business for yourself." "Nay, nay," answers the manager; "that is true. But I have not the money to start a business like this. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are to be sunk before I can make a cent. I must buy my goods three months in advance before I can sell them to my customers. I must rent a store and hire clerks and spend enormously in advertising. All these outlays demand a large amount of capital."

Capital represents the seed and the land, to use an illustration of the farm. Income represents the harvest. The farmer must own or hire his farm and plant his seed before he can get his harvests, or his income. Hence, as the farms and the miner's machinery and the merchant's stock are nearly always valued from the standpoint of money, it is a common custom to give these sentences as truisms: "It takes money to make money." "Everything animate as well as inanimate will bow before the sceptre of gold." "Midas' touch has in his hand the grip of iron." But today the author of my text emphatically says: "The best producing capital a man ever had in life is a good name.

A good name, in the first place, is not a pauper. Her mansion is not the poorhouse. Her wardrobe is not filled with rags. Her family plot is not a potter's field. As a rule, she has a comfortable house to live in. Her sitting room has a glowing fireplace. Her library shelves are filled with books. "She is not afraid of the snow for her household, for her household are clothed with scarlet." "She is like the merchant ships—she bringeth her food from afar." "Her husband is known in the gates when he sitteth among the elders of the land." For what her hand findeth to do she worketh with her might. She gathereth the rewards of an earnest and practical industry. She inevitably giveth to the holder of her family name all the necessities for a happy competency and a healthful physical and mental existence.

You can see this fact demonstrated in almost every department of life. "Honesty is the best policy," "whether it is found within church walls or down in the busy commercial section of a great city. My text does not say, "Be good, and you will be financially poor." Oh, no. If it did, that statement would not be true. It would not be true in professional life, in mercantile life or in domestic life.

Why does your family physician have such a large practice? You trust him not only as a good doctor, but as an honest man. You know when he is called he will not put you on bed for an attack of grip and call it pneumonia and charge you $100 to cure you of a disease you never had. You know he will not run up useless bills against you, as some dishonest dentists do, who, if they cannot find any cavities in your teeth, will bore holes into them just to send you a bill to make you support them and their families. You know that yonder merchant has a large business, not because he offers better goods than his rivals, but because you can believe his statements in reference to those goods. Indeed, I go further than my original assertion in reference to my text. A good name is more often found in a comfortable home than it is in a hovel.

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things will be added unto you." That means clothing, food, home, education. As a rule, all these blessings accompany the industry of a good name. In order to win a good name, sacrifices you will have to make. In order to win the battle of Waterloo, Wellington had to make awful sacrifices. A short time after his famous conquest the English commander wrote to a dear friend as follows: "What do you think of the total defeat of Bonaparte by the British army? Never was there in the annals of the world so desperate or so hard fought an action or one that so cost the victors. My heart is sick at the terrible loss I have sustained, of my old friends and companions and my poor soldiers." In the battle of Waterloo, in which you have to struggle for a good name, you will have to make many sacrifices, as did Wellington. But, as a rule, you will not have to suffer penury, hunger, homelessness and cold. A good name is won by industry, frugality, purity, honesty and doing with all your heart and mind what your hand finds to do. These characteristics of a man, earnestly and faithfully followed through life, will inevitably land a man in a better place than the poorhouse or potter's field. It does not follow because you are financially poor that you are holy; it does not follow because you live in a palace that you are a rascal. Beau Brummel died a pauper; Peter Cooper lived in a rich man's mansion.

But a good name does more than pay your butcher's and baker's and grocer's and clothier's bills. It does more than give you a title deed to the house in which you live. It adds to you the most priceless gift of Jesus Christ, the love of your family and your friends and the love and respect of the community in which you live. There is an old proverb which says: "A man cannot live on love alone. When poverty knocks at the door love flies out of the window." Poor proverb is that. The richest home on earth where love is not is poorer than the poorest man's hovel where love does dwell. The voice of a community is yours if you will earn it with the deeds and loves of a good man.

If you were a great man, a truly great man, I could not say this. Over 2000 years ago Jesus Christ declared as a rule, has to pay for his greatness is to suffer misrepresentation and slander and hate. Most of the contemporaries of John Milton never could appreciate the true merits of the "blind bard," who, in the black exile of national contempt had to go to his study for comfort. Even in our own time, and more of the glories of heaven than the two eyes of any inspired writer have seen seen since the day when Paul with a soiled statue in Westminster Abbey could be washed as white as the driven snow if it will but cleanse the souls of all the tears which once fell from the eyes of those whose bodies are now sleeping under yonder marble slabs. Those tears were shed in the days of neglect and ostracism and poverty. Only the other day I ran across an editorial written by one of the most famous of northern writers, who afterwards became one of the greatest apostles of our martyred President, Abraham Lincoln. This editorial was written in the heat of the civil war. "Any man who would go down to Washington and shoot the stupid fool in the White House would be conferring an inestimable favor on the American people, were it not for the fact there was a bigger blockhead in the Vice-President-ial chair." Ah, yes, the bitterest of execrations were showered on Lincoln when he was alive, as the most fulsome of eulogies are given to him now he is dead.

Though the world often has been unjust and bitter to the great men, I have always felt that in the unreasoning and this bitterness were not due, as a rule, to the innate meanness of the human race, but rather to its inability at certain times to appreciate the heroes and saviors who were exhausting their lives for the good of their fellow men. But, my friend, you need not be afraid that the world will not in the end appreciate you good works, if you are doing any good works. You are not a great warrior, a great statesman, a great reformer. You are only an ordinary man, living an ordinary life in an ordinary place. Therefore, if you are kind and loving and gentle and forgiving and helpful to your fellow men they will be kind and loving and forgiving and gentle and helpful to you. Why? Because each day of your life you come into personal touch with your little world, and the friends and the people of your community see you just as you are.

Taking another step forward in my subject, I declare that a good name is the most priceless gift of all inheritances which a man can leave to his children. It means more, infinitely more, than gold. It means more, infinitely more than social position, more than landed estate. It means more than anything else on earth that is worth having. Most of us want to leave our children the best we can. We must not forget to give them this treasure, which is of more value "than great riches."

How can parents financially poor leave to their children the priceless gift of inheritances? Let me explain more in detail. The adjective "good" comes from the anglo-saxon "god," and to be "good" in the highest sense means to be "goodlike" or "like Christ." Therefore, when a man bequeaths to his son a "good name" he gives to him, in the highest sense, a Christian example which will lead him in the opposite to his boy's side and put his hand in his boy's hand and lead him to Christ and give to come with me and kneel in prayer. I want you to come with me and learn how to read the Scriptures in the Christ like holy book. My son, when sinners entice thee, I want to tell you where I have found comfort in the hours of direst temptations. And when sorrows come, as come they will, I want you to learn where you can find God as a refuge and strength." Side by side with their children the Christian parents walk. Side by side they go with them through life. Long after the parents have pillowed their heads in the dust, the memories of their good names or their Christian examples live on to guide their offspring. Are you not going to leave to your children the inheritance of a good name or a Christian example, such an inheritance as that which your fathers and mothers left to you?

If any young men and women need to be held to the cross of Christ by the Christian example of a parent's life, trusting in God and being with God, those children of yours need it. They have exactly the same kind of temperament, such an inheritance as that of strung. They are impulsive. They can be easily swept off their feet by success and discouraged by defeat. What are they going to do in "the swellings of the Jordan?" My brother, even with all the advantages of the Christian surroundings of your boyhood still you have a hard struggle. What, then, are your children going to do when temptations assail them? They have never seen their father kneeling in prayer or walking with Christ. They have never thought that you had a divine sponsor. "A good name" as an inheritance? Why, it is simply priceless in value. Is not, for your children, a good name rather to be chosen than great riches?

But, if our good names are essential for our children after we are dead, how much more essential are they for us when we step out from this life into the next! The heaviest money that was ever secreted in the dark vaults of the rich man who despised the poor Lazarus grovelling on his palace steps cannot be carried by him or his friend one single inch beyond his grave. Do you not think it an absurd thing for a rich man to struggle and to keep on struggling for something he cannot keep over a few years at best? This money may and in all probability will, do his children a damage after he is gone. It is an old saying that "Shrouds have no pockets," yet many men seem to live as though their shrouds would be different from all other shrouds or that they would live on forever and never have to die.

Is this bearing the name of the Lord God Almighty to you a meaningless figure? Will you not at least reckon in it as much as you would for bearing the name of a human friend in your hand? You remember some years ago your business was going absolutely to pieces. You did not know which way to turn. The bills were coming in and had to be paid, or you would be flung into the bankruptcy court. All night long you kept walking the floor. You kept saying to yourself: "Oh, God, what shall I do? What shall I do?" The morning broke, but that morning was as black to you as midnight. Suddenly there came a ring at your doorbell. You thought it was one of your creditors. The hammer of that bell struck your brain as though it was a butcher's bludgeon. The parlor door opened. At first you were too dazed to look up. But when you looked, you saw, not a creditor, but a dear old friend—perhaps a father, a brother or a Jonathan. "Harry," said he, "I hear you are in financial trouble. You know I have lots of property. Well, here is a blank cheque to which I have signed my name. You can draw on me for all you need. God bless you, my boy, and never, never become cast down." What did you do? Did you thank him? Oh, no. You were too deeply moved for that. You simply cried like a little child. Then you brushed your tears away and went forth to meet your creditors. Oh, you were awake up; your step was firm; your lips were a happy smile. In your hand you knew that your friend who had financially saved you.

When God gives us a good name He gives us a pledge that He will see us through all the struggles of life. He says: "The sheep upon a thousand hills are mine. The gold mines in the deepest mines is all mine. The winds obey my voice. All that I have is thine. I will, if necessary, give it thee in this struggle of life." Oh, my friends, cannot you to-day feel that God is back of you when He gives to you the offer of a "good name?" Will you bear the image of Christ as your Saviour's mercy? Will you bear it upon your forehead? Will you allow your name to be engraved in the palms of his hands? When you choose between a good name and riches you do not choose between Christ and poverty, you choose between Christ with all the wealth of a universe, and gold as an oriole which might spread her yellow wings and be gone in a night.

When Cyrus offered to Artabazus a cup of gold and gave to Cyrsantas a kiss, Artabazus said, "The cup thou hast given to me was not so good gold as the kiss thou gavest to Cyrsantas." Why? Whey Cyrus gave his kiss he gave to his favorite his heart. He gave to him the symbol that hereafter he and all that he had were Cyrsantas' May the dear Christ place over you one of our lips a holy kiss! And then when he becomes a part of us and we a part of him, we shall enter into the royal family of which God is the Father and Christ the Elder Brother. His name shall be upon every forehead. "A good name." Oh, let us change the text! "The Christ name is rather to be chosen than great riches."

Directors' Report.

Your Directors have pleasure in submitting their 35th Annual Report, showing the transactions for the year, and the Financial standing of the Company as at December 31st, 1904. The business of 1904 was most gratifying in all respects, large gains having been made in Income, Assets and Surplus

INSURANCE ACCOUNT. — The volume of new business exceeds that of any former year, being 3,462 Policies for $5,848,168, all of which except $30,000, was written within the Dominion. The total assurances now in force is $40,476,970.58 under 27,742 policies, the net addition for the year being $2,888,419. While many of our native Companies are seeking business abroad, some of them in distant parts of the world, it is thought by your Directors that business is preferable to foreign business, which is secured with less certainty, as to its quality and excessive cost.

INCOME.—The total income was $1,725,308.90, being $1,373,364.69 for premiums, and $351,944 21 for interest. The gain over 1903 was $164,238.87.

DISBURSEMENTS — The payment to Policyholders amounted to $524,615.34, and consisted of Death Claims, $220,304.50; Endowments, $160,053; Purchased Policies, $52,394.54; Surplus, $83,183.49, and Annuities, $8,679.90. The claims by death were exceptionally light, being $51,404 less than last year, and only 41 per cent of the amount expected.

THE EXPENSES AND TAXES were $300,807, being 17.4 per cent of total income, or about 1 per cent. less than in 1903.

ASSETS.—The cash assets are $7,794,098.35 and the total assets $8,220,530.45, showing gains of $905,450 95, and $937,272.05 respectively. The funds are being invested in the same classes of securities as heretofore, principally in Mortgage loans on farm and city properties, Bonds and Municipal Debentures. The latter are taken into account at their book value or cost, which is considerably below their market value. The demand for money was active during the year, and better rates than for some years past, resulting in a slight advance in the rate of interest earned, viz., 5.09 per cent. Payments on mortgages for interests and instalments of principal were well met. The interest and rents over due at the close of the year were but a small portion of the receipts being only $13,740.18, none of which has been paid for.

LIABILITIES — The liabilities were again computed on the Combined Experienced Table with 4 per cent. interest for all business up to January 1st, 1900. From that date to January 1st, 1903, on the Institute of Actuaries Table with 3 1-2 per cent and thereafter on the same table with 3 per cent.

SURPLUS.—After making provision for all liabilities the surplus on our own standard is $772,672.87, being an increase of $159,929 20 over 1903, and this after distributing among Policyholders $83,183.49. On the Government standard of reserves, namely 4 1-2 per cent. for business in force prior to January 1st, 1900, and 3 1-2 per cent, thereafter, our surplus is $1,049,400.71. The earnings for the year were $254,103.60.

EXPERIMENTS WITH FARM CROPS.

The members of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union are pleased to state that for 1905 they are prepared to distribute into every Township of Ontario material for experiments with fodder crops, roots, grains, grasses, clovers, and fertilizers. Upwards of 1,600 varieties of farm crops have been tested in the Experimental Department of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, for at least five years in succession. These consist of nearly all the Canadian sorts and several hundred new varieties, some of which have done exceedingly well in the carefully conducted experiments at the College and are now being distributed free of charge for co-operative experiments throughout Ontario. The following is the list of co-operative experiments in agriculture for 1905:

The size of each plot in each of the first twenty-six experiments and of No. 29 is to be 1-4 rod long by one rod wide; in Nos. 27 and 28, one rod square; and in No. 30, four rods square, one-tenth of an acre.

Each person in Ontario who wishes to join in the work may choose any ONE of the experiments for 1905 and apply for the same. The material will be furnished in the order in which the applications are received until the supply is exhausted. If possible it will be well for each applicant to make a second choice, for fear the first could not be granted. All material will be furnished entirely free of charge to each applicant, and the produce of the plots will, of course, become property of the person who conducts the experiment.

There never was and never will be universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many complaints forbids that they were the germs of other and differently seated diseases—but the vital system of the patient—what would relieve one ill, in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine, when obtainable in a sound unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. Under its gradual and judicious use, the frail-est sufferer are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on Nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life has become a disease, and by tranquilizing the nerves disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, in its augmented, courses throughout the veins, strengthening all the healthy animal activity necessary result, strengthening the functions of giving life, to the digestive organs, which naturally demand more substance—result, improved functions of the system, thereby making sound, Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Digestive Cure, is given to the public their superior, in the Quinine Wine in its usual rate, and, engaged by the opinion of many who have used it, appreciate the nearest perfection of any in the market. "Don Quixote" Alive Yet.

From Sir Wilfrid Laurier's reference in a speech at Ottawa to the assurance that "Don Quixote" is a living book to-day. "Don Quixote" was given to the world in the form of a couple of years later the phrase "fighting a windmill" was introduced in plays on the English stage. Since that time many parodies and adaptations have appeared in English literature, notably Hudibras and Samuel Butler, and Sydney Smith's Peccas. "Don Quixote," if it does not stand alone, stands unequivocally by the side of the best satire ever produced.

To discern and deal immediately with new and severe troubles, rather than to battle with effects after the disease has reached a lodgement, is the chief aim of the medical man, and Hickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is the result of patient study along this particular line. The first appearance of a cold Hickle's Syrup will be found a most efficient remedy, arresting development and speedily healing the affected parts, so that the ailment disappears.

To put the brake on the wagon going down the hill is a help to the horse, when the wagon is loaded, but the man what driver would think of applying the brake to a load going down the hill? If he did, his sensible horses would probably balk. Many a man is in the condition of pulling a load up hill with the brake against him. When his stomach is out of order, and the digestive organs of digestion and nutrition impaired in their functions, a reaction is set up which has to be overcome in addition to the performance of daily duties. A foul stomach is a soggy brain, and the man with a disordered stomach often gropes his way through the day's business like a man in a fog. He forgets appointments. Problems seem presented to his mind wrong end to. This condition is entirely remedied by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts the stomach and digestive and nutritive system into a condition of perfect health, and gives a clear brain, a steady hand and a light step for the day's duties. When constipation clogs the channels of the body, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will work an effectual cure of that disastrous disease.

The Educational Clause

IN THE AUTONOMY BILL.

A STATEMENT BY REV. DR. CARMAN, GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT OF THE METHODIST CHURCH.

To the Editor of The Toronto News.

There is something astounding even in the realm of politics that the men who gained power in our Dominion in 1896 by resisting the coercion of Manitoba on the school question are now, in less than a decade, undertaking to impose a vastly heavier and severer coercion for all time on the new Provinces, Alberta and Saskatchewan. The effort that Sir Charles Tupper was to enact, under the provisions of the constitution, what was called Remedial Legislation; the desperate attempt of the Premier now, in utter disregard of the spirit of the constitution, and of violation of the reasonable interpretation of its letter, is to force Separate Schools with most exacting guarantees on the new Provinces, though it is written in the fundamental law of the Dominion, with explicit exemptions, that each Province shall have entire control of its own educational affairs. And this inexplicable attempt is made all the more hideous and oppressive by the preference of Separate over Public and National Schools, thereby endangering the very existence of Public Schools by conferring the power of taxation upon hierarchies and dissentient sects, and by promising to all separatists that can establish schools, which it encourages and assists, separatists to do a pro rata share of public educational revenues and public land. Is it a wonder Mr. Sifton resigns? How could he honorably do otherwise?

All honor to the man who has his intelligent convictions, his patriotic impulses, his principles of action and fidelity to his country, taking in the issues of coming time. Th s are mon strous propositions in the Autonomy Bill and should be resisted to the end.

IS THE LIBERAL PARTY MAD?

There are Liberals alive who never expected to see such anormalities attempted in the name of Liberalism, and propounded as a Provincial school policy of a Liberal government. It is inconceivable that the Liberal leaders, who, during the middle nineties made legislative balls resound, and filled the land with their irresistible eloquence and parliamentary eloquence against coercion, should, before ten years have passed, strive to force themselves in a timid subservicency and arbitrary and usurping legislation. Do they take it back and grave their words be that is the extremity of this measure they are making atonement? Or was it fustian then and fustian now? Is old Liberal, looking at what has occurred in Ontario, what is going on in Quebec and what is the position of the Dominion, may well raise the question, Is the Liberal party given over to madness that it does what it does? Does it join hands with the Nationalists in the proposal to make Schools in our new domain? Of course politically speaking, the main issue is the ruthless invasion of provincial rights. The merits or demerits of Separate Schools are not necessarily in the front of battle. The bigotry and aggressive advocates are forever pushing them into public consideration. We caught a glimpse in the British Dominions on this side the Atlantic to suppose that we have the Public School system in a position to be powerful mind and Public School system firmly planted among our institutions of civil and religious freedom.

Yet insidious and incessant are the schemes and efforts to weaken and uproot the Public School. It would do us good, as we march on to possess our noble heritage, to sing:

"We come to plant the Public Schools On broad prairie swells; And wake the echoes of the wilds With the music of their bells. We tread the land that's free and old, Our fathers sailed the sea To make the West as they the East, The homeland of the free."

NATIONAL SCHOOLS AND NATIONBUILDING.

We are presumed to be nation-building, enlarging and cementing Empire. This is the must conspicuous gain us and results of separatism in public education. We must do our part to secure the ruin of our God and coming time. People of all religions and of no religion are coming to us from many countries. Is it not desirable that we have a homogeneous citizenship, that all be fused and welded into a coherent and cosmopolitan nationality? Is it not presumable that our churches will, as in their proper obligations attend to the work of evangelism and in the exercise of religious freedom rear a Christian State? What Parliament has the fundamental or constructive right to put cast-iron Protestant and generous Roman Catholic fellow-citizenship on one side of the line, and many of them against their best judgment and will so far as the schools are concerned, and rope off on the other side Methodists, Presbyterians, Presbyterians, Anglicans and Baptists, Quakers, Jews, Greeks and Stundists and Salvationists deeply rooted in Unitarians, Agnostics and Infidels, call them all Protestants, and then establish a Separate School system for Separate Schools, providing for the latter and saying to the former "Look after the interests of your own people. Where are the Anglicans' rights, and the Methodists' rights and the Quakers' rights, and the Agnostics' rights, and the rights of Doukhobors and Jews? And if all these people claim their special rights and get them, and go taxing their separate communities and drawing on the public funds, where is your National School System? Where are your united populations, your firm and strong Canadian Commonwealth? Plainly the foe of our Public School system is the foe of national strength and prosperity. The leg sation that weakens National Schools threatens our liberties and fills the land with irreconcilable divisions and ceaseless strifes.

LOOK AT THE RESULTS

But the separatists say "We must have religious education." To this plea there are effective answers, both at home and abroad, to-day and through centuries gone. Does separatism in Quebec and Ontario give us higher intelligence, better scholarship, more widely extended education, advantages, a more exalted type of morality, a clearer exemplification of the teaching of the Son of Man, a stronger national spirit and a nobler citizenship than is given us by our Public Schools? We all know that it is the National system that compels separatists to struggle up to a fair standard of scholarship and to coalesce with the product of the Public Schools in citizenship, morality and the genuine fruits of religious life. For religious education they demand a share of the public funds and public revenues over and above the imperium in imperio, the power of taxation under ecclesiastical direction. Look at the Philippines. Look at Mexico and Peru where they have been religiously educating on their knees for ten generations. Is the result of their work what we covet for Canada? Study the map of Europe and see what has been going on there for centuries. How is it in Spain? How in Italy? How in France? Are these to be our models with a redoubled energy in our Northwest? Said Victor Hugo, one of the greatest of modern Frenchmen, speaking years ago of the condition of things under the so-called Fathers and Brothers, in noble and chivalric France: "You claim the liberty of teaching; let us understand the liberty you claim. It is the liberty of not teaching. Let us see the results. What have you done for Italy? What have you done for Spain? I shall tell you. Italy, which has taught mankind to fight, now knows not how to read. Spain, magnificently endowed Spain, which has received civilizations from old Romans and Arabs, has received, thanks to you, a yoke of stupor, which is a yoke of degradation and decay." We all know that at this very hour the religious orders are broken off by a resurrected France, and because they will not submit to civil law are banished by thousands from that mighty nation, striking awe for its liberties. Is this school of liberty for Autonomy? And an effort to settle them in our new Provinces and provide for them from the public treasuries and public revenues? It has been more than once said and proven, "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

MAINTAIN PROVINCIAL RIGHTS

Let the people of the new Provinces determine their own school matters, as the people in Ontario have done, as provided in the fundamental law of the Dominion. There are in the proposed Act of Autonomy the charter of the new Provinces, at least two iniquities, forcing separatism on the people for all time, and providing for it from public lands and public funds which constitutionally belong to national and public education. The rights of minorities can be secured by safeguards in the Act as they are is some of the older Provinces.

A SPRING DANGER.

Many People Weaken Their System by the Use of Purgative Medicines.

Ask any doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicines weakens the system, and cannot possibly cure disease. Thousands of people take purgative medicines in the spring, and make a most serious mistake in doing so. People who feel tired and depressed, who find the appetite variable, who have occasional headaches and backaches, or whose blood shows impurities through pimples and eruptions, need a spring medicine. But they must not content themselves with harsh griping purgatives that gallop through the bowels, tearing the tissues and weakening the system. A tonic medicine is what is needed in the spring and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the best. Here science has yet discovered. They are quickly absorbed into the system, filling the veins with the rich red blood that carries health and strength to every part of the body. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure skin eruptions, indigestion, headaches, nervousness, rheumatism and all blood troubles. They improve the appetite, and make depressed, easily tired men and women cheerful, active and strong. Mr. James McDonald, of Little Shippegan, N.B., says, "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a tonic and blood purifier' and have found them superior to all other medicines."

If you need a medicine this spring—and who would not be the better of a tonic?—be sure you get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Wood's Phosphodine,

A positive cure for all forms of Sexual Weakness, Lost Manhood and Impotency, Brain Worry, Insomnia, Nervousness, Lack of Energy, Failing Memory, Loss of Vitality, Impoverished Blood, all of which lead to Consumption, Insanity and Early Decay. Wood's Phosphodine is $1 per pkg., or five for $5. One will please, six will cure. Sold by all druggists, or mailed in plain package on receipt of price. Write for Pamphlet. The Wood Medicine Co., Windsor, Ontario.

OBSERVING JOHNNY.

"This history of teaching children by appealing to their reason isn't all it's made out to be," said a public school teacher recently, "I teach in a primary class, and it's my conviction that a youngster actually needs a good whacking once in a while for his health. It does cheer up a child as nothing else will. Here is an instance:

"One of my boys had skipped his classes, deceived his mother, been found out and caused much unhappiness all around. I took him aside and we had a heart-to-heart talk. Johnny sat still, looking at me intently and seeming to be deeply impressed. I thought I was making great headway and that my little sermon was surely penetrating Johnny's brain. I never was more astonished in my life at any event. What you never can tell. Just as I had reached the climax in my appeal to his better self, a light of discovery broke over Johnny's face.

"Say, teacher," he said eagerly, "it's your lower jaw that moves, ain't it?"

A TRUE APPETIZER AND TONIC.

Mi-o-na Will Make You Feel Hungry and Hearty, and Give Strength and Vitality.

Ask any friend who looks thin, pale, and out of health how many meals he or she eats a day, and the chances are that the answer will be "Not over two, and I don't feel hungry then." Two dinners, say, and no lunch eat three square meals a day, and their perfect health is due to a strong stomach and digestive system, as such a system takes out of the food all those elements that make for health, and gives nourishment and vitality to the body.

When one appetizer and tonic that should be relied on is Mi-o-na, the only agent known that will strengthen the stomach and digestive system, and put them in such perfect condition order that they will digest easily and thoroughly the food that is eaten, and send you to the table positively hungry for the next meal.

Without a strong stomach digestion will be poor, the blood impure, and serious liver and kidney troubles result. Sour stomach, bad breath, aches, spots before the eyes, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, furred tongue and bad breath, all of which can be readily overcome by the use of Mi-o-na, costing but 50c a box, as it goes right to the foundation of perfect health, the stomach.

Scores of leading people in this Province, including editors, ministers, bankers, and their families, gladly testify to the tonic, strengthening and health giving effects of Mi-o-na. Purchase from Wallace's Red Cross Drug Store, one of the most reliable druggists in this section sells Mi-o-na under a guarantee to refund the money if it does not produce satisfactory results.

We Will Buy

A 50c. Bottle of Liquozone and Give it to You to Try.

We want you to know about Liquozone, and the product itself can tell you better than we. So we propose to let us buy you a bottle—a full-size bottle—to try. Let it prove that it does what medicine cannot do. See what a tonic it is. Learn that it does kill germs, and how you will use it always, as we do, and as millions of others do.

This offer itself should convince you that Liquozone does as we claim. We would certainly not buy a bottle and give it to you if there was any doubt of results. You want those results; you want to be well and to keep well. And you can't do that—nobody can—without Liquozone.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Liquozone. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, after proving, in innumerable different cases, that Liquozone destroys the cause of any germ disease.

Liquozone has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. It is not made by compounding drugs, nor with alcohol. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by processes requiring enormous apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a Liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you.

Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle—as an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And the symptoms which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

This is our free gift, made to convince you; to show you what Liquozone is, and what it can do. In justice to yourself, please, accept it to-day, for it places you under no obligation whatever.

OPERA HOUSE, MARCH 27th.

The musical farce comedy "Maloney's Wedding Day," which will be presented at the Bruce Opera House, Napanee, on Monday, 27th March, has been constructed with the sole object in view of making people happy. The average life possesses enough sorrow and tribulation of its own, without sitting in a theatre to have it reproduced to the detriment of one's nervous temperament, tired brain or restful respose. This clever comedy presents a collection of comedians, singers and dancers who use every artifice in their humorous composition to make you laugh and that they have been successful is evidenced in the phenomenally laudatory notices they have received from the press everywhere. The comedy is liberally embellished with catchy songs and clever specialties.

WHEN THE THUNDER ROLLS.

Excellent authorities agree that in a thunder storm the middle of a room is much the safest place in a house. A carpeted floor or one covered by a heavy thick rug is better to stand on than bare wood. It is well to keep away from chimneys and out of cellars. In the open air tall trees are dangerous. A person sheltered under a low tree or shrub thirty or forty feet from a large and lofty tree is quite safe. If lightning strikes in the immediate vicinity it will hit the high tree as a rule, with few exceptions. Water is a very good conductor, and it is well to avoid the banks of streams in a violent thunder storm.

APPENDICITIS.

Twenty years ago the sufferer from appendicitis died—by another name, preferably "inflammation of the bowels" or "peritonitis." To-day the death rate in the best equipped hospitals is not two per cent. For years after the ascription of the disease to the troublesome little sac, whose useful function has been entirely superseded in the processes of evolution, it was supposed that the cause of it all was some such foreign substance as a grape or lemon seed entering the vermiform appendix. Occasionally the explorer with the knife will find something in the appendix that doesn't belong there, a recent case produced a lump of solder from canned tomatoes, but this is a rare exception. Appendicitis is caused by the development of bacteria in the sac, usually associated with inactivity of the intestine. Theoretically, the operation is as simple as digging a pearl out of an oyster. An incision, a stroke of the knife, a careful sterilization, a set to close the intestine, a dressing of the wound—and it's all over in twenty to thirty minutes. More than half the time it happens that way. About once out of five times the appendix, instead of being at the point of the intestine, and easily get-at-able, as it ought to be, is somewhere else. Then the practitioner begins his search. He may locate it two or three inches from the normal position, or he may find it far around behind, or he may discover it anywhere between; sometimes he misses it entirely. Or it may be so deeply involved that it cannot be safely cut out, but can only be relieved of its poisonous matter. Or it may have burst and scattered its contents through the abdominal cavity, in which case the method is to cleanse and disinfect the whole area, in the hope—not a very strong one—of warding off peritonitis. For it is these cases which form the death-rate and it is for this reason that timely operations for appendicitis are so important. A diseased appendix, diagnosed early, can be removed with practical assurance of complete success.—Samuel Hopkins, in March McClure.

CURLING.

The season practically closed last Friday with the annual match between the players north and south of Bridge st. The ice was first-class, and the games, afternoon and evening, proved most exciting, ending in a tie. After the evening game all the players took their annual dinner at the Campbell House. Host Taylor furnished an excellent spread, which was served in first style. The following are the scores:

CANADA.

Come all who love to sing,
Now let your voices ring,
In sweetest lays,
Of Canada, our pride,
Of our Dominion wide,
And all she is beside,
Come sound her praise.

Of all the lands on earth,
I'd choose thee for my birth,
Dear Canada,
Far o'er her wide domain,
Where waves her golden grain,
There, peace and plenty reign,
God bless her day.

Her infant voice I hear,
Giving to mother cheer
Across the sea;
We'll ever lend a hand,
When foes invade thy land,
And true and faithful stand,
Loyal to thee.

Dear mother, hear our call,
While at thy feet we fall,
And for thee pray.
For union now with thee,
May Britons all agree,
Then we shall ever be,
Thy staff and stay.

We'll feed thee with our bread,
For Canada'll be head
Of all the world.
She'll place it at thy door,
For yet ten millions more,
Ere time has one more score
Of years unfurled.

She'll love and honor thee,
As mother of the free,
And ever sing:
Long may King Edward reign,
Long may his throne remain,
Lord, with thy grace sustain,
And bless our King.

The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. Millinery Openings.

THE ROBINSON CO.

The beautiful Spring opening display Saturday throughout The Robinson Co.'s entire store was in harmony with nature's bright Spring day. The millinery was a feature of great interest to all the ladies. Miss Smith and her competent staff had a busy day of it, showing the beautiful creations of the milliner's art. The new millinery is certainly lovely. Miss Smith has excelled herself in producing distinctly high-class styles that are wearable. The first impression received on entering their spacious fashionable showroom was "the brilliancy of color." This is the keynote of the millinery this season. Browns, greens, claret, mahogany, shrimp pink, serves blue, grey and violine are all advocated in the color par excellence of the season. The small and medium shapes on the order of the Tricorne, Marquise, Napoleon, Corday, Tommy Atkins, and the Polo Turban are the favorites of the hour. Flatness has made the Polo an experiment. Fine flowers, such as Forget-me-nots, Lilacs, small and medium sized Roses are used in profusion with the embellishments of laces, mallines, ribbons, etc. Amongst the many much admired hats was a Marquise shape made in alternate rows of maline straw in sevres blue and pink, and shrimp pink rose petals, white ostrich pom poms on right side, finished with four tiny bows of pink velvet ribbon. Another was the Continental shape, in the similar green shades. The brim was a beautiful embroidered band with a flat crown made in crimped rolls of maline rolled ribbon in green shades with steel thrust at the side front and three shades in blue, rose and green shirred ribbon comes under the crown, finished at the back with two beautiful shaded roses.

The illuminated evening display was a treat of fashion that was much appreciated by the crowds. The writer heard complimentary remarks galore. Outside in front of the artistic windows, down through the main aisles of draped silks and dress goods, up in the carpet room and women's ready-to-wear section the crowds were loud in their enthusiastic remarks. No wonder that Napanee ladies have the reputation of being up-to-date when they have such a stock as The Robinson Co.'s to select from. The entire aisle was draped with the new white parasoll to match, tweeds for costumes, washable fabrics. The dress goods counter had individual drapes of evening fabrics, shirt waist suitings, black dress novelties with suitable trimmings attached to each. Sixty feet of ledge display was of the latest novelties in cotton and linen sheer materials. Full life-sized colored plates were shown to picture the garments when complete. On the first floor we found the crowds much interested in the new Spring jackets, raincoats, shirt waist costumes, tailored suits, etc. The display of carpets, curtains, rugs, etc., was simply beautiful. Mr. Shorey has this department looking better than ever. This big carpet room was divided in sections, showing individual room displays of rich rugs, with curtains to complete. The firm are to be congratulated upon having such a successful spring opening.

HARDY DRY GOODS CO.

This firm's millinery opening on Saturday morning is a subject of vital interest to every lady. The showroom looked very artistic. The draperies of lace caught up with bunches of spring flowers and loops of green were certainly artistic. We notice a decided difference in the style of the hats from those of last season. Some of the shapes are much smaller. The Charlotte-Corday, Polo, Tricorne, Continental, Marquise and Napoleon are all variations on the small theme also the knocked-in and tip-tilted shape. However, America will not this season accept the exaggeratedly small hat that prevails at the present time in Paris, as it would not be practical a change for us. But we may come to this, since small hats were certainly once in vogue in this country. So that what has once been may well be again. A very stylish black double plateau of lace, perfectly flat, was much admired, with an edge of small roses; the back was turned up and banked with bunches of ribbon in seven different shades. The novelty hat was made in the new broom shade, maple sugar. The hat had sides and back turned down flat, while the front was pointed and tipped down. The bee line crown was formed of medallions, while the back was filled in with roses and caught with ribbon in the banana shade. It is seldom that a more simple or more stylish model is met with. The shades that are most popular, pompon and vair are two fresh emerald greens, argent and plaine, browns, blues and pinks. The shades of green, blue and white have lost their popularity, as colors predominate. Fruits of all kinds and masses of flowers are used. The millinery opening was pronounced by all the onlookers as one of the "swellest" we have ever had in Napanee.

DONSEE & CO.

An important event to the ladies of Napanee was the annual Spring opening of Donsee & Co., on Saturday, March 25th. It had been advertised for some time and all were anticipating and looking forward to it with eager expectation some out on Saturday to see the latest creations and styles decreed by Dame Fashion. There is a great variety of colors, including champagne, vieux rose, greens and every shade; lady blue, fawns and brown, mulberry and creams of all shades. As great a variety almost is available in the shapes, and it is not much to say that a woman can wear practically any shape of hat this season without offending the proprieties. It would be impossible to give any adequate idea of the millinery display, so numerous and indescribably beautiful are the styles, but a few representative hats may be mentioned. An illnewest and most extreme style is the polo hat, originating in Paris, which has been modified and varied in different ways. One of the most artists of a small round cap made in jet, and trimmed with tulle and jet ornaments, and the eighteenth century poke for young ladies is in white chip, the facing of maline and a band of ribbon in vieux rose, and trimmed on the outside with marguerettes and with ties to match. Among the ribbon hats there is a beautiful sample trimmed with shaded wings and a cravatte bow falling from dark to light and shaded ribbon loops to match. Donsee & Co. also carry a full line of blouses, hosiery, neckwear, etc.

MRS. PERRY.

The first thing that we noticed in looking through Mrs. Perry's showroom on Saturday was not, among all the beautiful and stylish hats shown, one that was not unique. The straws are most popular, and when worked in the rich shades of brown, are decidedly becoming to the majority. The white braid hats are exquisite; they are made of pure white chip and other fancy straws, with fine and fancy edges of touch of black chantpagne, green and navy. One of the hats that elicited admiring remarks from our many visitors was a Corellian shape, with a top being made of a lacey Italian tuscan straw, with a facing of black maline, and black ribbon trimmings of clusters of ombre and green, French roses with trimmings to match. An all-over white lace hat with simple trimmings of white liberty ribbon and ornaments was also much admired. Another hat made of white maline with a facing of lilies of the valley and trimmings of the same, with black relvet bands and ornaments. The children were not forgotten, as we noticed several pretty confections, one child's hat of delicate white straw, trimmed with small forget-me-nots, and trimmings of the same flower and blue ribbon.

MADILL BROS.

display of general dry goods, carpets and house furnishings on Saturday evening last was much to the approval of the passing crowds. The dress goods department was artistically decorated with evening shades of dress fabrics, silks and trimmings. The staple department was profuse in its showing of light and airy muslins. The section given to the display of table linens was well worthy of comment, and was highly appreciated by the ladies, for many were the compliments received. In the ready-to-wear department was found all the latest creations in whitewear and white blouses. We also noticed the natty appearance of the shirt-waist suits, ladies' Spring jackets, walking skirts and raincoats. The smallwear department was in the lead with its choice selection of collars, belts, gloves, etc., and last, but not least, the carpet and housefurnishing department, which was tastefully arranged with the newest carpets and housefurnishings, of which they carry a most complete stock.

PARHAM.

On March 16th, Mrs. George Lake, after a week of serious illness, passed peacefully away at her home here. Deceased, formerly Miss Lizzie Shorey, was born at Fredericksburgh in 1818, and in 1838 by the bonds of matrimony, became the beloved wife of Mr. George Lake, with whom she lived sixty-five years until her death, being with one daughter, being the only survivor of a family of six, four girls and two boys. Now the ending day she was eighty-seven past, when she died she retained her physical strength to the last. She was a fervent member of the Methodist church and was oftentimes during the days of her general sickness read and successful part in religious revivals, apparently always striving to uphold by example and sincerity the rites of the church.

The gradual departure of the snow from the fields, which is now fast disappearing, is not keeping pace with the water has not risen sufficient to drive the mills, whose owners are anxiously waiting for the open season.

WOMAN'S GREATEST ENEMY.

Constipation the Cause of most Women's Troubles—An Easy way to Permanently Cure this Painful Condition.

There are few women indeed who do not suffer from chronic constipation. Nearly all are slaves to some kind of medicine to correct this trouble, and yet they get nothing but temporary relief. One period of constipation is followed by another, and it's physic, physic, physic, year in and year out, till life becomes a burden.

There is now a sure cure for this condition and a cure that does not have to be repeated. It is Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill.

Dr. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., is the author of this prescription. He used it for years with wonderful success in his own large practice as a remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness and constipation.

Many ladies who have suffered for years are now enjoying good health and a perfect freedom from the annoyance through the use of Anti-Pill.

Mrs. Tabb, 287 Emerald St., North Hamilton, Ont., says:

VALUABLE ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

If your child comes in from play coughing or showing evidences of Croup, Sore Throat, or sickness of any kind, get out your bottle of Nerviline. Rub the chest and neck with Nerviline, and give internal doses of ten drops of Nerviline in sweetened water every two hours. This will prevent any serious trouble. No liniment or pain reliever equals Polson's Nerviline which has been the great family remedy in Canada for over fifty years. Try a 25c bottle of Nerviline.

The Woman who Would And The Grocer who wouldn't.

Every day from five to fifteen letters are received by The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. from women living in the smaller towns throughout Canada, saying they have asked their grocer for Royal Household Flour but can't get it. One writes—"I told my grocer, Mr.----, that I would buy 'Royal Household' regularly if he would always keep it on hand, but he said he wouldn't take on another brand of flour until he was obliged to." Another says—"My grocer is an 'old fogie' and never gets the newest or the best things until the year after." A third says—"We haven't an enterprising grocer in our town and are obliged to send to-------for 'Royal Household' or take a poorer flour."

Write direct to Ogilvie's.

If you can't get "Royal Household" from your grocer, write to us direct—we will immediately give you the name of the nearest grocer who keeps "Royal Household" and send you also the "Royal Household" recipes. There is no good reason why your grocer should compel you to use inferior flour—no first class grocer will hesitate to order "Royal Household" for you, and even the smallest dealer will get it if you insist upon it.

ARDEN

A few more days of such weather as we are having will bring Old Mother Earth entirely to view again.

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bell on Wednesday evening, 22d inst., when their eldest daughter, Florence Helena, was united in marriage to Harvey Allen Boomhower, youngest son of Mr. Andrew Boomhower, one of the pioneer settlers of Kennebec. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. C. Huffman, in the presence of the immediate relatives, after which the company sat down to a table profusely laden with delicacies. The young couple left the following morning for Deseronto. Mr. and Mrs. Boomhower anticipate making it their home in the West near Saskatoon, where a number of other families from this vicinity have settled.

Mrs. Anson Clark suffered a narrow escape from death by falling through the ice on the river near her home. She was in the water about twenty minutes before help arrived.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW

WHAT AILS YOU

the U. S. mail will bring you the best medical advice for only the cost of writing materials and stamps.

Many people owe their present good health to the fact that they consulted Dr. Pierce by letter, giving him all possible information about their condition, symptoms, etc., and received in return good medical advice which cost them nothing. Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce by no means confines himself to prescribing the well-known medicines. He tells you in the most common-sense way what ails you, what you ought to do, what line of treatment should be followed out in your particular case, and if your case does not indicate the need for this proprietary medicine, he tells you plainly and frankly what you do need, and the best possible method of improving your health.

Dr. Pierce treats many chronic cases at a distance, through the mail and all you have to do is to write him your symptoms.

"During my two years of married life I have not had good health," writes Mrs. Daisy Studard, of 608 S. Esplanade Avenue, Leavenworth, Kans. "I was all run-down, and my husband got me to write to Dr. Pierce. I got a kind reply telling me what the trouble was. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and also the 'Pleasant Pellets,' and now can say that I feel like a new woman. I do all my work and do not feel tired out like I used to. I have taken eight bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription.' It makes one feel well and strong."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure dizziness and sick headache.

The Yellow Holly

BY FERGUS HUME.

"Then I'll do the same."

Derrington bowed politely. "By all means," he said. "My reputation is already so bad that a word or two from you can scarcely make it worse."

"Oh, it's more than that," said Mrs. Ward quietly. And she spoke in so positive a manner that Derrington began to recollect his past sins. "Do you remember the night you came home here at 1 o'clock and found me in this very room?"

"Yes. You came with the amiable intention of telling me that George Brendon was going to pass the night at Mrs. Jersey's and that you suspected that he was up to mischief."

"I took the trouble to come from a party for that very purpose," was Mrs. Ward's plaintive reply. "And how was I received?"

"Mrs. Ward, I am getting tired of this circumlocution. What is it you have to say?"

"Well, on that night you were in a fur coat."

"My usual coat in winter."

"It was the night when Mrs. Jersey was killed."

"Was it indeed? I never noticed the coincidence."

"No. But you knew about it," said Mrs. Ward. You threw your coat on yonder sofa. I seated myself near it by chance. There was something hard in the pocket of the coat. When you were out of the room I took the something out. There it is." And she laid an Italian stiletto on the table.

"What is that?" asked Derrington calmly, but with an anxious face.

"That," said Mrs. Ward, touching it daintily with her finger, "is the weapon with which Mrs. Jersey was stabbed."

CHAPTER XV.

IF Mrs. Ward expected to startle Derrington into a confession she was never more mistaken in her calculations. Derrington had not moved in diplomatic circles all his life without knowing how to guard against the display of emotion. With an utterly expressionless face he looked at the stiletto. It was a slender steel blade with a silver handle of renaissance workmanship, evidently a valuable and curious relic of the middle ages. But Derrington stared at it as though he knew nothing about it.

"Well," said Mrs. Ward sharply and rather disappointed he did not proceed on the instant, "what do you say?"

Derrington looked at her in rather a humorous manner. "What do you want me to say?" he asked: "Confess that I killed Mrs. Jersey and then brought this weapon carefully home in my pocket for you to discover and use against me?"

"That is a subterfuge," said Mrs. Ward. "You did not expect to find me waiting for you, and you never meant that dagger to be discovered, Lord Derrington."

"I certainly never did," he assented heartily. "I cannot imagine how you came to know more than I did."

"What do you mean?" asked the little woman sharply.

"Well, you see," said Lord Derrington quietly, "this is a very clever bit of business on your part, but so far as I am concerned it has nothing to do with me. I never saw that weapon before."

"Oh, that's rubbish!" said Mrs. Ward with a heavy laugh. "I found it in the pocket of your fur coat on the very"—

"You say you found it there," said Derrington mendaciously.

"Do you deny that it was in the pocket?"

"Certainly. Had it been in the pocket I should have known it was there. But it was not in the pocket."

Mrs. Ward stared. "You are very brazen," she said. "You knew it was there all the time."

"In the pocket?" asked Derrington politely and perfectly calm.

Mrs. Ward hesitated. Then she faced him defiantly. "I am so sure of my ground," she declared, "that I don't mind saying it wasn't exactly in the pocket. There was a hole in the pocket, and the dagger had slipped down into the lining between the inside fur and the outer cloth. It lay sideways, and what with its position and the heavy fur"—

"I could not have known it was there," finished Derrington, balancing a paper cutter on his forefinger. "You have found a mare's nest, my dear Mrs. Ward, and if this is your trump card I am sorry to say it won't take the trick you wish to secure. I did not know that this"—he touched the stiletto—"was in the lining of my fur coat."

"Then it was, and Mrs. Jersey was stabbed with it."

"Isn't that taking a great deal for granted?" said Derrington, with raised brows. "Mrs. Jersey, according to the doctor, if I recall the report of the inquest rightly, was certainly stabbed with a weapon similar to this, but why do you say this is the one?"

"Because I believe you were in the house on that night."

"Which house? Be explicit, please." Mrs. Ward was growing angry at this calm defiance. "In the house in Amelia square. You went there to prevent that Brendon creature from making Mrs. Jersey confess."

Lord Derrington laughed. "You would not make a good lawyer," said he. "By your own showing I did not know that Brendon was to be at Mrs. Jersey's on that night."

"I certainly came to tell you," said Mrs. Ward, feeling that she had missed a point, "but you could easily have heard it elsewhere."

"Who from? Brendon did not advertise in the papers that he was stopping with Mrs. Jersey on the night in question."

The little woman rose to her feet with an artificial laugh and shook out perfume from her silken skirts. "You are very clever and obstinate, Lord Derrington, but how will you explain this"—she pointed to the stiletto—"to the authorities?"

"There will be no need for me to do that," said Derrington, and took up the weapon. Mrs. Ward stretched out her hand.

"My property, if you please, Lord Derrington."

The old gentleman opened a drawer, dropped the weapon into it and closed the drawer with a snap. "It's locked now," he said coolly. "I shall take charge of this."

"How dare you? I insist"—

"Oh, dear, no! You insist on nothing." Lord Derrington rose, looking like a giant as he towered over the little woman. "My dear Mrs. Ward," said he quietly, but in his deepest tones, "I have been very patient with you, but this thing must end. You must promise to hold your tongue about Brendon and"—

"And about you, I suppose," she sneered.

"About me?" Derrington's tone expressed surprise. "What have you to hold your tongue about as regards me?"

Mrs. Ward stamped, though as a rule she was not given to betraying violent emotion. "Oh, it's too ridiculous!" she said hotly. "You can say to the police how I found the stiletto in your coat."

"I should advise you not to talk to any one about a thing which exists only in your imagination."

"The stiletto"—

"What are you talking of, Mrs. Ward?"

"It's in that drawer." She pointed to the table.

"Oh, dear, no, it isn't," said Derrington blandly; "there is no stiletto; there never was one. We have had a nice talk, and now we must part."

"Not before I have had my say," said Mrs. Ward savagely. "I see perfectly well that I have been foolish to let that stiletto get into your hands, but I thought I was dealing with a man of honor."

"Ah, Mrs. Ward, few of us can aspire to your high principles!"

The sneer infuriated her. "You can deny the stiletto if you like to the public, but you dare not do so to me."

"Why not? For the sake of argument we will admit the existence of the weapon. You come here with it in your hand and state that you found it in the lining of the coat. By doing so you have defeated your own object. Had you produced the weapon from the coat and showed it to me at the very moment of discovery action might have held water. As it is the thing is simply ridiculous. You come here, accuse me of a crime, and an alibi from the minute I left this house to the minute I returned to find you here. As to the stiletto"—you say you took out of my pocket; that is rubbish. On the whole, I think you had better hold your tongue."

"If I go to the police they will open that drawer."

"Oh, no! An Englishman's house is his castle, you know, and a man in my position cannot be treated in the way you suggest with impunity. Moreover, Mrs. Ward, there is ample time to destroy the stiletto."

"Which you will do," she said, recovering her composure now that Derrington found it was useless to protect.

"No. I wouldn't even mind showing it to the police and saying how you brought it here with an accusation. If the police can prove that this is the weapon with which Mrs. Jersey was stabbed, and if you and the police can prove that the stiletto was in my pocket on the night of the murder, then you and the police are extremely clever."

"Oh, very well," said Mrs. Ward, realising her defeat, "I shall say nothing about you. But Brendon"—

"Brendon will hold your tongue about him also. I quite understand how you proposed to hold this stiletto and the tale of its being discovered in my pocket over me. If I did not consent to the marriage of Miss Ward and Walter—eh?"

"She shall marry him."

"Why do you hate Brendon so?" asked Derrington. "I know he is a strong man, and for the money's sake you do not want him to be your son-in-law. But even this does not account for your hatred. Why do you hate him?"

"I have nothing to say," retorted Mrs. Ward, who had flushed and paled alternately during this speech. "Please see me to the door."

Derrington walked to the door and opened it, with a bow. "Willingly. I think we understand one another. I am sorry to ask you to leave me so soon, as our conversation is not enjoyable. But I have to see a certain Mr. Ireland"—

"Is that Brendon's guardian?" asked Mrs. Ward, coming to a sudden stop in the hall.

"His former guardian," corrected Derrington. "How do you come to know of him, Mrs. Ward?"

"I think Dorothy mentioned the name," she said in rather a faltering tone. "Please tell your man to call a cab. I sent away the carriage."

"Let me send you home in mine."

"No! No, I want to go at once," and she approached the door quickly. "When did you say Mr. Ireland was coming?"

Derrington glanced at his watch. "He is due now," he said and looked at her, wondering why she asked the question.

Mrs. Ward's face was turned away. She was dressed in furs and carried a muff. When the door was opened by the footman a gentleman appeared on the threshold. Mrs. Ward lifted her muff to her face, but not before the stranger had caught sight of her face and had uttered an ejaculation of surprise. "You!" he said, stepping forward.

"What do you mean?" said Mrs. Ward, with her face still hidden. "Lord Derrington, this friend of yours is making a mistake. Tell that man to be quick calling a cab." And she moved past the stranger.

"You!"

"Pardon," he said politely, "but I wish to speak with you."

Derrington bent his bushy brows. "Let the lady pass," he said. "Who are you, sir, to stop the egress of my guests?"

"My name is Rodger Ireland," said the stranger quietly, "and I have been looking for that lady for over thirty years."

"What does the man mean?" asked Mrs. Ward haughtily, but looking disturbed.

"Lord Derrington," said Ireland, "I think if you will permit this lady and me to have a talk"—

"There seems to be some mistake," said Derrington. "Mrs. Ward, will you not wait until we rectify it?"

"No. The man is mad. Let me pass, sir. There is the cab."

How Do You Know?

But Ireland would not let her pass. "Lord Derrington," he said softly, lest the footman should overhear, "this is the lady who was with your son when he was murdered."

Derrington was not easily startled, but he turned suddenly white. Mrs. Ward shrank back into the hall. Now that the truth was told she seemed to recover from her fears and to regain all her tact. "I shall not want the cab at present," she said to the footman. "Tell the man to wait. Lord Derrington, if you do not wish these private affairs to be discussed in the presence of the servants we had better return to the library."

When they found themselves in the library Derrington closed the door and went to his seat. He looked much older, having aged in a most extraordinary manner under the shock of Ireland's information. Mrs. Ward was perfectly cool and resumed her former seat. As to Ireland, he let himself carefully down into the most capacious armchair he could find. Mrs. Ward opened the conversation at once.

"You say you saw me at San Remo?" she asked.

"I did," replied Ireland in his heavy voice. "I was there at the time Mr. Percy Vane was murdered"—Derrington groaned—"and I was at the masked ball where"—

"The Veglioni," said Mrs. Ward. "Well, you were there. You say you saw me?"

"In a blue domino."

"There were plenty of blue dominos at that ball. At least I should think there were."

"Yes, but you wore a sprig of yellow holly. That was why I recognised you when you were masked."

"How did you know it was I?"

"Because early in the evening you went into a box. I was there talking to the Marchesa Belloni, to whom the box belonged. You removed your mask, and I had ample opportunity to see your face."

"What reason had you to observe me?" asked Mrs. Ward, just as though she were counsel examining a witness.

"Well," said Ireland, smoothing his face, "you see, I knew Mr. Vane very well. He married a woman of whom I was engaged. Derrington shifted restlessly in his chair. He did not like to be afraid. Lord Derrington. I do not intend to talk of Rosina Lockwood"—

"And I will say nothing," was his lordship's reply, and he watched the two faces before him with close attention.

"You saw me unmask in a certain box," said Mrs. Ward quickly. "Do you mean that after all these years, over thirty years, that you recognise me again? I was a girl then. I am a woman now."

"Quite so. But you have a mole on your forehead just above the left eyebrow. I knew you by that. And then I have a splendid memory for faces, and yours"—Ireland bowed gallantly—"is too beautiful to forget easily."

Mrs. Ward shrugged her shoulders. "It's a most remarkable memory," she said.

"It is, madam," assented Ireland. "My memory was always considered remarkable. And the fact is that I was thinking of the murder almost at the moment I entered the ball. Consequently your face was in my mind's eye. That made the chance of recognising you easier. Had I not been thinking of old days I might not have guessed so readily who you were."

"Why were you thinking of the murder then?" asked Derrington.

"Well, my lord, you sent for me to speak with me about George"—Mrs. Ward gave a short laugh, and Derrington smiled—"so I was naturally thinking of George; such a thought led to my thinking of his parents, and finally I was speculating on the appearance of your son's death, as I thought you might wish to talk of it, and therefore desired to get my memory in order. In this way did I recognise the lady."

"This is all very well," said Mrs Ward. "You say you recognise me, Mr. Ireland. Is that your name?"

"It is," said Ireland, who was not so good as mine. We met only once." Derrington was not so sure that Mrs. Ward's memory was not good, for he remembered how she had tried to get away before the arrival of Ireland. "Go on! Go on!" he said irritably. "I wish to hear your story."

"The worst is that I am supposed to have killed Percy Vane," said Mrs. Ward coolly. "So you accuse me of that?" she asked Ireland.

"By no means. But you were at that ball"—

"I was in a blue domino with a sprig of holly at my breast."

"And you were with Mr. Vane?"

"No, I was not!"

"You were not with Mr. Vane."

"I did not. It was my sister."

"Your sister!" said Derrington. "Hah!" And he relapsed into silence. Mrs. Ward shot a suspicious look at him, but his inscrutable face betrayed nothing.

"I remember," said Ireland in a slow, queer way, "that there was also Miss Howards at San Remo, at the Hotel d'Angleterre. They were with their father, General Howard. I never met them, Mr. Vane went frequently to call at the house."

"He did," said Mrs. Ward, "if by house you mean the hotel. The fact is, my sister Jenny was in love with Captain Vane"—

"I heard it was you," said Ireland disagreeably.

"It was my sister Jenny who loved Percy Vane. She would go to the ball and persuaded me to go with her. We slipped out of the hotel and went without a chaperon. Our father would have been shocked had he known, but it was merely the escapade of two schoolgirls. I went with a friend, and Jenny looked about for Mr. Vane. We agreed to meet after an hour and go home. As there were other blue dominos at the ball, we each wore"—and Mrs. Ward repeated the word to emphasize the fact—"each a sprig of yellow holly. I went to a box to have supper with a certain cousin of mine, and my sister then departed with Mr. Vane."

"Why did she leave the ballroom?" asked Derrington.

"Because Mr. Vane was shocked. He recognised her voice and made her unmask. He insisted on taking her home first, and then intended to return for me, as he could not find me at the supper. They went out together, Mr. Ireland, and that is the last I saw of Mr. Vane."

"What was the last your sister saw of him?"

"She was at the hotel and in our bedroom when I returned, which I did after leaving vainly for her. She said that Mr. Vane had escorted her to the hotel and had left her at the gate at her earnest request, as Jenny was so afraid that her father would hear of our escapade. She said good night to Mr. Vane and then went to her room. When we heard of the murder next morning she became very ill and my father took her away. But she always declared to me that she did not know who murdered Percy Vane."

"Did your father ever know that she was in Vane's company on that night?" asked Ireland.

"Never! We kept our folly a profound secret from him."

"You did," said Mrs. Ward sharply, "and Mr. Vane did, and a servant at the hotel—an English servant who attended to us. In fact, it was she who procured the yellow holly by which Jenny and I were to identify one another."

"What was her name?" asked Derrington quickly.

"Eliza Stokes."

"Ah! I thought so. Mrs. Jersey?"

"Yes, Mrs. Jersey. And now, Lord Derrington, you know how I came to take such an interest in the death of that woman."

"Yes. But I cannot understand how you came to know that Mrs. Jersey was Eliza Stokes."

"That's my business," flashed out Mrs. Ward.

"Or why," pursued Derrington, unmoved—"why you sent her the yellow holly?"

"Because I was not quite positive if she really was Eliza Stokes. I thought that the yellow holly, being connected in her mind with the death of Mr.

FOR A SHORTER SKIRT.

In the educational crusade against consumption, now being planned by the Illinois Medical Society some attention should be given to prevailing fashions in women's dress. The street dress which sweeps the sidewalks is a death-breeder. If the wear of this dress went out deliberately to gather up the germs of disease and distribute them in her own home and the homes of her friends she scarcely could succeed better. The woman with the train to her dress goes down town, dragging the pestilence-making contrivance behind her. Of course, she holds it up sometimes, but often it trails along in the dirt, gathering into its folds millions of microbes of unnumbered breeds.

When she gets home again this woman who conforms to the prevailing fashions hangs her dress in a closet. The closet no doubt is dark. The rays of the sun never penetrate it. Tuberculosis germs make good order disease germs love the darkness. They like to get away from the fresh air. They plot and flourish in this woman's dark closet. After a time some member of the woman's family falls ill. The dread consumption attacks the fairest one of the lot, perhaps, or a little child is taken off with scarlet fever, or whooping cough. Then this grief-stricken woman wonders where the disease came from.

It is high time the dressmakers abolish the train. There are enough other ways of contracting diseases. Chicago Journal.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

Tuesday, the 21st March, witnessed a very pleasant scene at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Howard, Emerald, Amherst Island. The event was the celebration of their golden wedding. Fifty years ago they were united as blushing bride to the altar of St. James' Church. To-day none the less gallant as he led her to dinner, where a goodly number of their relatives and friends, about thirty in all, partook of their hospitality. Mr. R. A. Fowler in proposing the health of Mr. and Mrs. Howard, made a very bright little speech in which he pointed out the difference between the present celebration and the one fifty years ago. In the first one the bridal couple were looking forward with every hope and ambition, and now they were looking back on a life that has made them respected and loved by all present. A number of beautiful presents were received and with each one the love and respect of the giver.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard have the best wishes of their many friends, who all hope they will be able to preside at yet another celebration of the happy event.

JAPANESE SHOE SHOPS.

Like all other shops in Japan, a shoe shop opens a broad side to the street.

"It seems a misnomer to call it shop then, for a place where you can only buy sandals or glass things we are not accustomed to call shops.

There is a low platform in front; upon which the customer sits and drinks tea while making his or her purchases, the shopkeeper meanwhile squatting on his heels and discussing the news of the day.

The sandals worn by the rickshaw coolies are called waraji; they are woven of rice straw, and are sold for a half-penny a pair. They are made in the country villages, and the forelgner watches the weaving or buys amused interest.

The prehensile toe of a Japanese is of great assistance to him in the matching and holding the straws, leaving the hands free to weave.

The pack horse wears straw shoes as well as the farmer who leads him. New pairs are strung around the high saddle, and as the moving beast is re-shod every few miles.

In the Japanese shop one will find many varieties of clogs; a few with caps, others plain. A few years ago the height behind the heel of woman or girl was indicated by the kind of clog worn and the decoration on it.

April is washing machine month. We have all the leading makes, wash boards, clothes lines, pins, etc.

OPPORTUNITY.

Lord Strathcona, the grand old man of Canada, in the course of an interview which appears in Young Canada gives the following practical advice to young fellows starting in life.

"Be content with your present lot, but always be fitting yourself for something better and something higher. Do not despise what you are doing, but be satisfied for the time, not grumbling and finding fault. If you want to get higher, to better positions, only cheerful perseverance will bring you there; grumbling will not help you on an inch. Your future really depends almost entirely on yourself, and is what you like to make it; I would like to impress this fact upon you. Do the work yourself; don't wait for friends to use their influence on your behalf; don't depend on the help of others. Of course, opportunity is a great thing, and it comes to some men more frequently than to others. But there are very few whom it does not visit at one time or another, and if you are not ready for it and have not prepared to welcome it, that is your fault, and you are the loser Apart from that which we call genius, I believe that one man is able to do as well as any other, provided the opportunity presents itself, and he is blessed with good health. Much of what I would advise you young men to do is contained in the old counsel, 'Trust in Providence, and keep your powder dry.'"

AUTOGRAPH TABLECLOTH.

The autograph tablecloth is a fad of certain ladies who are clever with their needles, and who also like to preserve the autographs of friends. One such tablecloth is said to be of great interest. It belongs to a particularly clever journalist who entertains large groups of statesmen and other celebrities, and it is used on these interesting occasions. Just before the guests leave the table they are asked to write their names in lead pencil on the damask, and, at her leisure, the hostess embroiders the autographs in silk. Such a relic of feasts of the mighty ought to be handed down as an heirloom, and already this clever collection of interesting autographs will probably be even more valued than it is by its present owner.

WORDS A DOG UNDERSTANDS.

Dogs have undoubtedly been taught to understand that a certain combination of letters means something they like or want. Dogs that are particularly fond of candy pick up a number of words when they live in one family a long time. My little dog, for example, without any effort on my part, has learned to understand the words, "Go up in your chair," "Go up" or "Go down stairs," "Go to bed," "Chocolate," "Ice Cream," "See who's coming" (he will jump up in a chair and look out of the window when we say that), "Take your bone in the kitchen," "Going to walk," "I'll call Bunny" (this when he wants his dinner, Bunny is the cat), "Get your hat," "Smile," "Naughty dog," "No, no," and other little sentences commonly used in talking to him. Some dogs have been taught to answer sums given them in addition and subtraction, but the secret of these tricks has been revealed, and so far no proof has been shown that satisfied any but the very credulous that a dog, however intelligent he may be is able to puzzle out a sum in arithmetic.

—A large audience greeted "Maloney's Wedding Day" at the Opera House on Monday night. Those present were after and Monday morning. Of the many rank shows Napanee is presented with "Maloney's Wedding Day" was "it." The Hale Line Circuit shows may be money-makers for some, but it is freely expressed around town that Manager Brim would be either a fool or a fav'r if such shows as Marks' Bros., H W. Young, etc., were brought here.

The subject was ably handled by the above gentlemen and all present seemed to be in favor of the new project.

—Prof. Wrong, Toronto University, gave a most entertaining and instructive lecture (the fourth of the Collegiate series), in the Town Hall, last Friday night. The attendance was larger than usual, and all enjoyed the evening. The subject was "Japan before the Transformation," and given in conversational style with an easy flow of choice English, which greatly enhanced his most interesting subject. The last of the series will be given by Prof. Knight, Queen's University, on Friday, 14th April, subject, "Shifts for a Living." The streets will be in better condition and we trust there will be a full house. It is also likely that the lecture will be given in the Collegiate Institute.

"Now," chortled the amateur Sherlock Holmes to his lady partner, "it is easy to see that gentleman yonder is not married."

"Pray, how can you tell?"

"By his neglected air," the frowzy appearance. No woman would let a man go about like that. His coat under two buttons, you perceive, and he is not brushed.

"Still," said the lady, "he is married."

"You know him, then?"

"I am his wife!"

THE PROPOSED QUINTE BASEBALL LEAGUE.

To lovers of baseball it will no doubt be pleasing to learn that a movement is on foot to organize a baseball league along the B. Q. Ry., including Deseronto, Napanee, Newburgh, Tarker, Sydenham, Maribank and Tweed, a very likely looking circuit. For the benefit of those interested in such a league we wish to state that there will be a general baseball meeting held in Tarker on the evening of April 10th, for the purpose of organizing a league. It is to be hoped that there will be a good attendance from all the above named places, and lay the foundation stone for a good summer's sport.

HIS WEDDING FEE.

A New York preacher was conversing with a lawyer member of his church, and asserted that ministers receive less for their work than any other class of professional men. The lawyer disagreed, and remarked that the item of wedding fees amounted to quite a sum. "What do you think is the average fee I receive?" asked the clergyman.

"I should say $20 is a low average. I have known persons to give $100, and $50 is quite common."

"Your calculation is too high; we marry poor people," replied the minister.

"I will give you $10 for half your next fee," said the lawyer.

"I will accept the offer," said the minister.

The next day a tough-looking farmer and a blooming country maid came to the minister to be married. After the ceremony the farmer said, "We hain't got no money, but I have a nice pup here that would make a nice pet for your children." Then he opened a box and out rolled a white pup. The minister could hardly contain his mirth, thanked the bridegroom, and went his way to the lawyer's office.

"I had no idea," he said, "that I should come to claim your offer so soon, and I should not have accepted it so quickly had I known I was to receive such an usual fee."

"Backing out now?" said the lawyer. "Here's your $10. Hand over half your fee."

FRAUD IN FURS.

Field and Stream.

As a people we are very fond of furs. We don't much care for law, and we love to be fooled. In no line of commerce are we more regularly fooled and defrauded than in the retail fur trade. The ermine which my lady buys for the collar of her opera coat cost her some dollars a skin. She may pay $1 for the black tip of the tail of a single ermine skin. The trapper who caught the weasel from which came the ermine got, perhaps, ten cents for the skin; perhaps five; perhaps nothing. That is not so bad, and no one could object to a commercial transaction of that kind. A great many persons know that ermine is weasel. How many know that muskrat pulled and dyed is so often sold as seal; that astrin similar, T. G. Chesnellan, Esq. Parents and guardians of blind children in the electoral district of Lennox will confer a favor by communicating with the local member, T. G. Chesnellan, Esq. arly treated is sold as seal or beaver; that rabbit is treated is sold as seal or electric seal; that pulled, dyed and otter is regularly sold as seal; that marmot dyed is sold as mink and sable; that fitch dyed is sold as sable, and rabbit also sold as sable; that hare and muskrat are sold as mink or sable, and white rabbit as ermine or chinchilla or fox; that goat is dyed and sold as bear; that many kinds of lamb are sold as Persian; that skunk is called Alaska sable; that American sable is sold as Russian crown sable; that monkey and lynx and dog and fox and polecat and muskrat and cat, and all sorts of different furs, are sold under all sorts of high-sounding names; that white hairs are regularly inserted in fox skins and sometimes in sable skins! Surely not all of our readers were advised as to these details. There is a vigilance committee appointed by the London Chamber of Commerce whose duty is to spread information against these trade frauds. We do not see much nothing of that sort in America, for here we don't mind being fooled.

Rose to the Occasion.

Once there was a man—a most real, flesh and blood man—who made fun of his wife's cooking.

"I believe I could get up better meal than this myself, Arabella," he said.

"I am glad to hear it," she replied. "You may get up the meals yourself hereafter. I won't."

Since which time they have been taking their meals at a restaurant.

Woman's emancipation depends upon her ability to seize the right moment.

A Good Scheme.

Husband—Why do you scold the butcher? It isn't his fault that the meat comes to the table all dried up. Scold the cook. Wife—I don't dare to, but I'm in hopes that if I keep on scolding the butcher he'll get mad and come around and scold the cook.

Justifiable Suspicion.

Mistress (to pretty housemaid)—By the way, Mary, should my husband ever attempt to kiss you just box his ears soundly. Maid—Shure, ma'am, he's fet the weight of me hand twice already.

Struck In.

Mr. Stubbs—Look here, Maria, why is our daughter's head so full of nonsense these days? Mrs. Stubbs—Why, John, she's been putting her curls up in comic papers.

DR. MACKAY'S SPECIFIC

For the Treatment of

ALCOHOLISM

USED IN CONNECTION WITH THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC PROHIBITION SYSTEM WITH UNFAILING SUCCESS.

The City Council of Montreal has endorsed its marvellous discovery. The Finance Committee of Montreal recently voted $500 to defray the expense of placing the medicine in each of the city Police stations, as prompt application of the Treatment to bad cases will prevent the fatalities continually occurring in the cells.

No hardship is required. The Treatment can be taken at home. No special diet required. The desire to reform is simply necessary and spirits avoided for a few days.

This medicine is now within the reach of all, the price having been reduced. The wonderful results obtained with the worst class of drunkards coming before the Judges of the Recorders' Courts in Quebec and Montreal warrant the statement that the disease of Drunkenness can be cured—readily and surely—under ordinary circumstances and with the reasonable desire upon the part of an inebriate.

This treatment is simply the medicine of the medical profession—the only secret is as to its' administration.

Dr. Mackay's discovery is the result of 25 years of practice as a specialist and expert. He is a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the Province of Quebec.

The Government of Quebec through the Judges ordered over 500 boxes of the medicine for the prisoners appearing in the Courts in 1904—Official Reports establish 83 per cent of cured with these cases.

With the publication and official endorsation and the record of results published it is unnecessary to waste money experimenting further. All communications private

DANGERS IN BUSINESS

THE EVILS OF INDISCRIMINATE RECOMMENDATION.

INDISCRIMINATE INDORSING

Indorser Goes into His Trap as Unsuspectingly and Innocently as the Wild Turkeys and Just as Fatally—Vivid But True Picture of the Misery and Injury to Morals Caused Thereby.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Diver, at the Minister of Agriculture's Office, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 26.—In this sermon the preacher points out the many dangers in business and morals, of reckless indorsement and the evils of indiscriminate recommendation. The text is Proverbs vi. 2, "Thou art snared with the words of thy mouth."

There are many ways of killing game. The one is to go after it with gun, arrow or spear; to slay it, as "Scotty" McDougall slew Krag, the Kootenay ram of Mountain Sheep range; or to lie in wait for it, as did Rosalyn George Gordon Cumming, the mighty "lion hunter" in African jungle; or to relentlessly follow it through American forests, as did Pathfinder in his old "Leather Stocking Tales;" or to course for it, as the old English sportsman with hounds runs down the wily foxes over the Lancashire flats; or to pursue it with hawks, as the knights of old in falconry wrought such havoc of the air. As the eyes of the jungle monarchs or the kings of the air look into the fearless and unflinching eyes of man, the hunter knows that an unsteady hand or a bullet miscarrying in mark one inch may mean his own death. Then the "lives of the hunted" might become the "lives of the hunters."

Mighty must be the exhilaration of a brave man when killing big game. Almost intoxicated with excitement must that modern Esau, Chanler, with, in the solitude of an African forest hundreds of miles inland, where the wild roar of a man eating monster coming nearer and nearer to the deer licks. Lying there, I know that if he can only slay yonder mountain of muscle he will save scores and perhaps hundreds of human lives. The man eating lion or tiger has been known to live for years upon human flesh. So fearful do the natives become of such human destroyers that they have depopulated whole villages and towns, fleeing from their reach.

Next to the actual experience of personally hunting the wild beasts of the forest is the fascination of reading about the marvelous deeds of the sportsmen who capture them. Hunting such animals single handed and alone always has had and always will have an attraction for the strong. The hunter's life is a dramatic and an exciting one. But there is a more effectual means of destroying the forests of their game than the gun, the arrow or the spear. The trapper's work has always been more fatal to game than the aimed rifle of a Kit Carson. Where a modern American Nimrod has been able to shoot one mountain lion in a night the trapper of the Hudson Bay Fur Company was able to come into camp staggering under the pelts of ten, twenty, fifty wild beasts killed in the same night. The trapper's work is the most widespread and dangerous and deadly to the wild beasts of a forest. As the Rocky mountain bear might put his great shaggy paw into a merciless trap, whose iron jaws snap shut and whose teeth probe their way through his flesh to the bone, this Bible scene of my text describes the predicament of the indorser who foolishly becomes the guarantor of a friend or an acquaintance's honor. As old brute tugs and pulls to get his leg loose and keeps on tugging and pulling until at last his pulls of his leg or in desperation eats it off to get free and then goes hobbling away to his den, so King Solomon, with official endorsation and the record of results published it is unnecessary to waste money experimenting further. competent friends or mere acquaintances for positions which you do not positively know they are able to fill. These two evils come in the same category.

Why is the indorser's predicament like that of a wild turkey caught in a trap? First, because he is actuated into its dangers unawares. He does not seek them out of a silly curiosity or from mere idle desire, like the antelopes that come nearer and nearer to the white flag waved by the hunter lying hidden in the grass. He does not charge them, as a wounded stag might turn upon the hounds, or an angry boar, caring not what happens, might rush against the fatal spear held out for his destruction. But the indorser goes into his trap as unsuspectingly and innocently as the wild turkeys are caught. The trappers build a cage with a small opening. Then they scatter corn along the path leading to the cage, and the wild turkeys, with their heads down picking up the corn, walk into the trap, and by the time their heads they cannot see the exit and are easily taken. So the indorser goes into it and is captured as the mighty Bengal tiger is caught in a cage. The agile beast makes one spring upon the bleating sheep tied to the stake in the middle of the cage, and immediately the trapdoor slams shut. So the indorser is caught and are like the victims that Jeremiah describes as good man being entangled unawares in the nooses of sin. "For among my people are found wicked men. They lay in wait as he that setteth snares. They set a trap. They catch men."

Indorsers are innocently caught in a trap. How? The merchant is in his office, and a friend enters. He says: "Hello, Mr. So-and-So. I am glad to find you in. I am in a financial hole and want you to help me out. You know spring is here, and I must lay in my goods or lose my trade. My business was never better than now or prospects brighter. However, in order to compete with other men I must branch out and get more stock. The wholesale firms say if you will indorse my notes they will let me have the goods. Of course there is absolutely no danger of your ever being called upon to pay. Will you help me for old friendship's sake?" You pin the man down. By long argument he seems to prove that there is no possible danger of your being compelled to pay. Then, for friendship's sake, you sign the fatal note.

Or perhaps the man wants a responsible position. He is about to be appointed cashier of some institution. He says he must have certain indorsers, and down goes your name. Then, by another, he would be all right for you to sign your name there if you felt you could afford to make good that pledge if it ever came back to you. But the trouble is that most of us, with our present financial struggles, cannot afford to pay. Aye, I go further than this—nine men out of ten, ninety-nine men out of a hundred, and ninety-and ninety-nine men out of a thousand, never can pay or intend to pay the notes they indorse. They are taking their friends. As soon as the notes fall due and come back upon the indorsers they begin to squirm and twist and try to wriggle out of their difficulties. Sometimes they try to shirk often by foul, sometimes they try to shirk and repudiate their debts of indorsement, and sometimes they manage to clear off their debts by putting their money in their wives' names and then, going into a bankruptcy court, ask for a clean financial sheet.

Is not the picture true? What would you do if you were asked to pay off dishonest debts of your friends which you indorsed? Would you do it? Would you do it even if you had indorsed their notes and could find a loophole to crawl out? Would you do it, as did Sir Walter Scott? Would you do it even though it cost you your life to die an honest man? Would you pay those indorsed notes, as William McKinley paid the ones he indorsed for a friend? In order to pay those notes he literally gave up all his own money and all his wife's money. A short time before his death he was living in a ministerial friend of mine, and he said: "Mr. Campbell, people sometimes wonder why I am so devoted to my wife. Could any husband but an ingrate be otherwise when his wife willingly gave up all she had to save his honor?" William McKinley never expected to be called upon to pay those indorsed notes, but he paid them. Would you pay, if necessary, those notes you are about to indorse, as William McKinley paid? Or would you repudiate or at least try to repudiate those debts, as many men and thousands have done? Dare you, with your present financial burdens, risk the sinful temptation of repudiation which you may be the face if you become a financial surety for a friend?

But my dear sir, see the old mother bear struggling to get her paw out of the fatal trap I do not pity her, even with all her sufferings, nearly as much as I do the little cubs who are dependent upon her for their lives. As I see a man struggling in the indorsement trap, with all his misfortunes, I do not feel nearly so sorry for him as I do for his wife and especially for his children, who are dependent upon him for financial support. Yet to those who would talk you would suppose that in order to be kind, loving, big hearted, generous, a man should be reckless of his friends and when they need it to sign all their notes, no matter what might be the financial risk that man may run in reference to his own children. Now, my friends, I believe one of the best tests of a true, Christian man is not how he looks after his friends' notes so much as how he first looks after his own flesh and blood.

Do you mean to tell me there is any honor, any justice, any big heartedness, in a man going upon a friend's note when in order to do it he may have to take the very bread out of his children's mouth and go shabby, get their backs and the old homestead away from their inheritance? This is just what many men have done in order to win the name of being big hearted. I recall to mind one of this type whom I knew years ago. He was a big hearted but who purchased that reputation at a fearful price. The man whom I speak was for years the president of a New York company. His income was at least $30,000 per year. He could have made much, he spent much. Every person in distress could go to him for succor and get it to the extent of scores of notes. Every little while he would gather five, ten, fifteen, of his daughters' friends together and give them a banquet and a "good time." The last act of his life was to buy a family and a home for a young couple about to bury his little girl. When that man died the beautiful acts of kindness which he did were recounted at his bier.

But would you like me to tell you the aftermath or the second sowing of that life of indiscriminate generosity? The notes he had signed for friends his estate had to pay. The moneys he had lent here and there and everywhere were never paid back. Caring for every one but those of his own house, he became in the sight of God worse than an infidel. His two daughters, to whom he could deny nothing when he was alive, had to deny themselves many of the thing when he was dead. His only son, the pride of his heart, the boy to whom he gave unlimited pocket money and sent across the seas on pleasure trips, applied a few years ago in Chicago for the position of solicitor, and was found not get work at that. This was the aftermath of the career of a man who charged them, as a wounded stag might turn upon the hounds, or an angry boar, caring not what happens, might rush against the fatal spear held out for his destruction. But the indorser goes into his trap as unsuspectingly and innocently as the wild turkeys are caught. The trappers build a cage with a small opening. Then they scatter corn along the path leading to the cage, and the wild turkeys, with their heads down picking up the corn, walk into the trap, and by the time their heads they cannot see the exit and are easily taken. So the indorser goes into it and is captured as the mighty Bengal tiger

A Carefully Prepared Pill.—Much time and attention were expended in the experimenting with the ingredients that enter into the composition of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills before they were perfected to the state in which they were first offered to the public. Whatever other pains may be, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of much study and skill, and persons suffering from dyspepsia or disordered liver and kidneys may confidently accept them as being what they are represented to be.

A Successful Medicine.—Everyone wishes to be successful in any undertaking in which he may engage. It is therefore, extremely gratifying to the proprietors of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills to know that their efforts to compound a medicine which would prove a blessing to mankind have been successful beyond their expectations. The operation of these Pills is so gentle that a guarantee that a pill has been produced which will fulfil everything claimed for it.

Every mother should be able to treat the minor ailments of her little ones. Prompt action may prevent serious illness—perhaps save a child's life. A simple remedy in the home is therefore an absolute necessity, and for this purpose there is nothing else so good as Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles, break up colds, allay fevers, destroy worms and teething and make little ones healthy and cheerful. In fact, they contain no opiate or poisonous nothing stuff. Mrs. John N. Pringle, Forest Falls, Ont., says:—"I think I can thank Baby's Own Tablets for my baby's life. He was badly constipated, but after giving him the Tablets he was relieved at once. We also find them good when he is at all restless, and feel I cannot say too much in their favor." For a Disease Germ That Liquozone Can't Kill.

On every bottle of Liquozone we offer $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. We do this to assure you that Liquozone does kill germs.

And it is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the diseases, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is this fact which gives Liquozone its worth to humanity; a worth so great that, after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, we paid $100,000 for the American rights. And we have spent over one million dollars, in one year, to buy the first bottle and give it free to each sick one who would try it.

Acts Like Oxygen.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there any alcohol in it. Its vitalizing forces are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 20 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It kills all disease germs in the blood and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is an absolutely certain germicide. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

Liquozone goes into the stomach, into the bowels and into the blood, to go wherever the blood goes. No germ can escape it and none can resist it. The results are inevitable, for a germ disease must end when the germs are killed. Then Liquozone, acting as a wonderful tonic, quickly restores a condition of perfect health. Diseases which have resisted medicine for years yield at once to Liquozone, and it cures diseases which medicine never cures. Half the people you meet—wherever you are—can tell you of cures that were made by it.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

Asthma, Bronchitis, Anæmia, Kidney Disease, Blood Poison, Piles, Bowel Troubles, Ulcers, Gout, Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Cancer, Fevers, Diarrhœa, Neuralgia, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Boils, Stomach Troubles, Throat Troubles, Hay Fever, Influenza, La Grippe, Malaria, Neuralgia, Many Heart Troubles, Piles, Pneumonia, Consumption, Contagious Blood Poisons, Scarlet Fever, Smallpox, Typhoid Fever, Womb Troubles, Dropsy.

Diamond—Erysipelas, Tumors, Ulcers, Pyæmia, Gonorrhœa, Women's Diseases.

All diseases that begin with fever—all inflammation, all bacterial—contagious diseases—all the results of impure or poisoned blood.

In nervous disorders Liquozone has a vitalizer, accomplishing what no drugs can do.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE.

Mrs. I. F. Aylsworth,
Odessa, Ont.

Dear Madam,—At a regular communication of Prince Arthur Lodge, A. F. & A. M., No. 228, G.R.C., held on March 20th, it was unanimously resolved that we, the Brethern of our late brother, I. F. Aylsworth, deceased, desire to convey to yourself and family our deepest sympathy in your great bereavement. It is with heartfelt sorrow that we have to record the untimely death, so far the past thirty-two years he has been our constant associate in the capacity of one of the most trustworthy officers of our Lodge, as Treasurer. We regret the loss of such a true and noble brother and good citizen. We assure you that his memory will ever be cherished in our hearts, and we pray that while you mourn the loss of a kind husband and father, you may be comforted by the Divine Ruler of the Universe, who is ever ready to comfort us in our sorrow and to watch us in our afflictions.

Signed on behalf of the members of the Lodge.

R. L. GILBERT, W. Master.
ROBT. BENNETT, Secretary.

Take care of the stomach and the health will take care of itself. If people only knew the importance of that statement the majority might live a good deal longer than they do. The eye unit dimmed, the natural force unbalanced, if the stomach is out of order the blood is made. It is from the stomach that nourishment is dispensed to nerve and muscle. If the stomach is "weak" the nerves, the whole work for each part of the body is done in a feeble manner, while all the nourishment with which the blood is supplied is poisoned throughout the body. It was the realization of this fact that induced the proprietors of the most extensively advertised medicine in the world, Dr. Pierce to prepare his "Golden Medical Discovery." To assure a stomach that will digest the food it receives, which is solely and singly a medicine for the blood and organs of digestion and nutrition. It is a temperance medicine containing no alcohol, whiskey or other intoxicant.

THE BIG WESTERN PUDDING.

At Ottawa now, as you well understand,
There is a big stir in the kitchen,
With all the ministers from within our great land,
Just over the big western puddin'.
To season it well with sectarian meal
And give it the proper good flavor,
The chief of the kitchen has tried to conceal
The taint of its obnoxious savor.

He cast in the meal of Italian design,
And with it he fully consulted,
Invited his comrades to sit down and dine,
While the pudding was repented.
Sir: Of this vile mixture we cannot partake,
For would ruin our reputation;
A change in the pudding you still have to make,
Or bring a disgrace on the kitchen.

Then with a big ladle he stirred it about,
With plenty of Orange and Grit,
And gave them a dish of his sawdust and grout,
Then, oh! what a change they discovered.
They thought that the pudding could easily digest
This wonderful western pudding;
So down goes the school bill upon the North-West,
With all its sectarian plotting.

CHICAGO LETTER.

Chicago, Ill., March 21, '05.

Dear Beaver,—No doubt you have been looking for letters from me, having been away since the 28th of January. Well, the reason is this, I had the real grip this time and never knew what it was before, and I never want to know again, I really thought that it would end in pneumonia for two weeks. I remained in Toronto till the 28th inst., and kept inside as the weather was fearfully rough through February and the first half of March, consequently. I did not get much chance to pick up details in Toronto. However, things are always occur, and strange to say, three sudden deaths occurred in the Daly building the morning of winter. The first was before I got there—a man smothered to death by gas, by blowing it out or turning it on to commit suicide. The next was T. H. Doncaster, the proprietor, who on day and in the evening was taken with heart failure and only lived three hours. The third was about the 10th inst. of a carpenter from this city, and a former resident of Napanee, Ont., who with a blonde beauty, age twenty, went to a room at the Daly for the night and wife, and was assigned room 1 and 2. About midnight the report of pistol shot was heard, and the lady rushed into the hall for help, the landlord to let her out. He came and said, "you have got the key inside, unlock the door," but the door had been locked and the key withdrawn and laid upon the bed in her excitement could not find it. But the next calling "let me out. Young Doncaster went for it, and was simply astonished at the door, and there stood the terrified lady in the night dress, the floor with a 32-calibre pistol at her feet, and still gasping. He was removed to the hospital as soon as possible, but died before reaching it. A coroner's jury found that the woman was willing to blame no one but himself, as he said it would be the lady who would end the report awakened her. He said I am sorry I did it, but I could not help it. The lady was taken into custody and held as a witness, but after that she first met her so chilled from the cold on the street, and the afternoon previous to taking their rooms at the Daly at the same hotel. Magistrate after hearing her evidence and seeing the couple, told the lady to go thy way and sin no more." She is now a beauty in the city of Chicago. Those who saw her when she came were on the stand a quart bottle of gin. Pretty strong, I think those who saw her they do not hesitate did not show it. The supposition is that the shock relieved the temporary insanity that caused him to shoot himself.

I saw the street car that jumped the track on Clark street, and ran into a candy store. The waiter in the basement heard the noise, and ran up the grass showing green. Coming home on the 19th, I saw a snow storm and half way between Toronto and Napanee I saw a bear. Now I know I saw a bear you have plenty of log and snow to make it out of, and I am sure it was a bear.

Those electric lights, arbitrators would call them, and copy after the elevated railroads, are a failure. Look at the snow. And then they could stand all the rain. The people are complaining. Indeed there are over two thousand miles of this wire in the streets of this city.

I noticed by The Beaver that a number of old acquaintances have passed away since I left. Portsmute, myself, to remain. This is a beautiful May Day as I write, and I must go out and get the air a little. So good-bye.

FRED. MEMBERY.

YOU CAN'T TELL.

You don't know what that cough will stop. The cough of consumption, that's such a beginning. Then Scott's Emulsion will check the trouble before it is managed.

A BRIDGE COLLAPSES.

While Mr. John McFarlane was running his traction engine across the Woods Bros.' bridge at Roblin, on Monday, last, the structure collapsed and Mr. McFarlane and his engine were thrown into the Salmon River, in about five feet of water, the engine dropping about ten feet. Mr. McFarlane is unable to swim, and as the current is rapid, he had a narrow escape from drowning, escaping on a cake of ice that was floating by. A bee was arranged, and it took about sixty men a couple of days to drag the huge machine to land. The engine is practically uninjured, but the bridge is a wreck. The engine weighs about five tons, and was at full steam when the accident happened. Mr. McFarlane, when he saw what was happening, shut off the steam, and there was a great commotion when the water extinguished the fire.

LIFE'S DREAM IS OER.

On Tuesday morning, March 28th, one of Napanee's estimable young ladies, Miss Ethel Hemstreet, was called to her reward. Deceased was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Hemstreet, Centre st., and was ill but one week, peritonitis being the fatal disease. Miss Hemstreet, who was but twenty-four years of age, was a popular young lady, of sweet, lovable disposition, and a general favorite with her numerous friends. Life looked very bright for her, and it was just a short time until her marriage was to have taken place to Mr. Fred. Johnson, of Deseronto. During her very painful illness deceased was extremely patient, was conscious until the last moment, and fully prepared to cross the bourne from which no traveller returns. The funeral, which took place on Wednesday afternoon, was largely attended and the floral tributes from friends were many and beautiful. Besides her parents, deceased leaves one brother and one sister to mourn the loss of a kind and loving daughter and sister, Mr. Wesley Hemstreet, Boston, Mass., and Mrs. Harry Patchette, Toronto.

LEAVING TOWN.

We are sorry to report the departure of Dr. MacCormack, our popular veterinary surgeon, who has been compelled through ill health to leave the river. Since coming here he has built up a large practice, and some time ago was appointed by the Dominion Government and Washington authorities as health inspector to examine all animals coming from and going into the United States, for the county of Dundas. The farming community especially will regret his departure as he was skilled in his profession. He leaves Saturday for Napanee where we hope he will gather around him as many friends as he left here.—Iroquois News.

Dr. MacCormack has purchased Dr. Bradshaw's practice in Napanee.

DEATH OF MRS. SIMMONDS

From the Times, Chester, Penn., March 14th, we note the death of Mrs. Amelia Ann Simmonds, wife of Mr. A. D. Simmonds, a well known bookseller of that city. The funeral services were in charge of Rev. A. L. Latham, of the Presbyterian church, assisted by the pastor of the Baptist church. Mrs. Simmonds was a member of the Third Presbyterian church, and in speaking of her life both pastors referred to her as a consistent Christian and as an earnest laborer in the cause. Mrs. Simmonds was in her fifty-fourth year, and was born in Bristol, England. With her husband and family they removed from Kingston, Ont., about fourteen years ago. Death was due to pneumonia. She leaves besides her husband, seven children. Mrs. D. B. Floyd, of Tamworth, being one.

LUND—ALLEN.

A very pleasant event took place on Wednesday, March 29th, at the residence of Mr. B. Allen, Fairview, the marriage of their eldest daughter, Agnes, to Mr. R. Blanchard, of Napanee. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. R. Conn, B.A., in the presence of a large number of guests. The bride was beautifully attired in a gown of white silk and was assisted by her sister, Miss Sarah, dressed in a suit to match. The groom's present to the bride was a beautiful gold watch and chain; to the bridesmaid a gold brooch set with pearls. After refreshments were served the happy couple left on the 2.23 train for Toronto and other western points.

DIED IN CALIFORNIA.

We received word this week from Mrs. J. R. Hite, nee Miss Julia Wright, late of Napanee, now of San Jose, Cal., of the death in San Francisco, Cal., of Mr. Joseph Trumpour, a former resident of this county. Deceased was born in Adolphustown, in 1828, and owned the farm opposite Glenora, now occupied by Dr. Young. He also operated the Adolphustown-Glenora ferry for a number of years. Mr. Trumpour married Miss Catherine M. Blanchard, sister of our esteemed townsman, Mr. John B. Blanchard. Together they went to California in 1878, where they have resided ever since. Besides the sorrowing widow, three children are left to mourn, Dr. J. P. Trumpour, Mrs. (Dr.) G. A. Christensen and Mr. Anson B. Trumpour. Also two sisters survive, Mrs. P. Dorland and Mrs. Ezra Mallory, Adolphustown.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL CANADIAN.

Mr. C. H. Young, quite well known in Napanee and vicinity, is another young man who has done well in the United States. He attended the schools of this town some years ago and taught public school for a number of years at Chambers. After taking a course at the Central Business College of Toronto, he taught in "Hillcroft" Academy, Kingston, for a while, resigning that position to go to Coatesville, Pa. He has charge of the Shorthand Department of the Coatesville Business College and is Lecturer on the Science of Education and Art of Teaching, in connection with the Normal Course of that institution. Mr. Young was successful in passing the examination prescribed by Isaac Pitman & Sons, for teachers, and is, therefore a Certified Teacher of their system of shorthand. Besides he is editor of "Greater Coatesville," one of the periodicals of the town in which he lives. Mr. Young is a hard worker, and is well qualified for the profession he follows. If ambition, energy and optimism can place a man at the top, this young Canadian will reach it. His parents reside at Marvell.

REPEAL THE ACT.

Toronto World.

The situation at Napanee has emphasized the iniquitous character of the Conmee Act, and it is stated that the act will be amended. The act should not be amended. It should be annihilated. The legislation is wrong in principal, denying as it does the right of a municipality to engage in municipal enterprises like gas and electric lighting as freely as private interests. So long as this principle is retained there can be no object in bringing forward amendments.

Public opinion in Ontario demands that municipalities and private interests be placed on terms of absolute equality in the right to engage in the establishment and administration of municipale services. Fortunately the Conmee Act has not been long enough on the statute books to create any large vested interests. The act has been in force not less than six years. A special exemption might be made in favor of the old companies that have established municipal utilities during that period. Enterprises which were in existence previous to the enactment of the Conmee legislation deserve no consideration whatever. They went into the business of supplying certain utilities to the public, but for the profit they see in these enterprises. They were given valuable franchises, and in most cases they are the public's debtor. Why should the Ontario legislature have stepped in to protect these corporations from municipal or any other kind of competition? Other business concerns do not enjoy legislative immunity from competition. They have to fight their own battles and not infrequently they go down in the fight.

The Conmee Act violates the principle of equality of rights, first by extending to one form of business freedom from competition which no other business enjoys and secondly by denying municipalities the right to engage as freely in municipal services as the individuals who constitute a private company. To say that the legislation was designed to aid the municipalities by making it possible for them to buy out any private company is to state a deliberate untruth. Not a municipality in Ontario petitioned for the legislation. There is not a municipality in the province that would not gladly have the act stricken from the statute books. In theory the municipality can compel the company to sell but in practice it is helpless. Take the case of Napanee, where three lighting plants are so situated that they are incapable of supplying light. The Conmee Act gives the town the power of remaining in darkness, or buying up lighting plants which would be so much worthless junk on their hands.

Napanee's helplessness in the grip of the Conmee legislation calls for immediate action on the part of the Ontario government. Mr. Whitney cannot show a higher appreciation of the confidence the public has manifested in him than sweeping the Conmee Act off Ontario's statute books.

In Perfumes at the R-d Cross Drug Store we have the good old fashioned odors like Jockey Club, White Lilac of the Valley, etc., as well as the newer ones coming out all the time. 7

EARL GREY

Canada's New Governor-General

Earl Grey, the brother of Lady Minto, does not come to Canada as a stranger, for he has been a frequent visitor at Ottawa during Lord Minto's term, and for the sixteenth century. His grandfather, the second Earl Grey, was the Whig Prime Minister who carried through the Reform Bill in 1831. Alfred Henry George Grey, the new Governor-General, does not need to secure. He was educated at Harrow, Trinity College and Cambridge, taking high degrees in history and law, and at an early age entered politics, being elected to the House of Parliament. In 1894, while he was making an extensive tour of South Africa, he came to him of the death of his uncle, to whose title and estates he succeeded.

Earl Grey was a close friend of Cecil Rhodes, and was the one man who knew how to manage him; and on more than one occasion when the Colossus of South Africa threatened to cut loose from the mother country and make his own business enjoys and secondly by denying Grey made the threat fade into thin air. He is one of the executors of Rhodes' will, and has an influential voice in the Rhodes scholarship scheme. Rhodesia, and here his strength of mind and purpose, his knowledge of men and methods, his tact, diplomacy and personal magnetism stand him in good stead. He has the courage to take the initiative whenever it seems right to branch out into new lines of work, and is a strong friend of co-operative partnership; he is the organizer of the Public House Trust Company, which takes over and manages the saloons of England in the public interest. At a labor meeting in Scotland a few years ago he stated his belief that the gigantic trusts of the United States could be checked only by a co-operative plan, limiting the interest to five per cent. and prohibiting the sale of shares in the open market.

Earl Grey has clear-cut features, dark eyes, a slight patch of hair, making an oasis in the desert of his baldness, a military bearing and a quick, energetic, decisive manner. His family consists of his wife, his son, Viscount Howick, and three daughters, Lady Victoria Grenfell, Lady Sybil Grey and Lady Evelyn Alice Grey.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by W. C. Black, at the Department of Agriculture.

NEWBURGH.

The familiar sound of the wheels once more announces that spring is here. The water did little damage in this vicinity. The academy hill will need some attention from the Council, however, as the water has carried away the earth and gravel in two strips near the length of the hill. The depth of the ruts is about a foot. It is a very dangerous spot for a horse on a dark night, and it should be attended to at once.

By the way, the town fathers might just take a look at the sidewalks which are in a terrible condition. They should be repaired before someone is injured.

The literary in the N. H. S. on Friday afternoon, was one of the best of the year. The chair was occupied by Miss Bessie Hagerman. The first pleasing manner introduced a very interesting programme. The order of features of the programme was a debate, "Resolved that country life is more conducive to happiness than city life." The debaters were Miss Mary Ryan and Juanita Thomson, Frank Ryan and Kenneth Hinch, while Miss Annie Eaton, Fraser Paul and Ralph Warthman were the judges. The debate was decided—how else could it be with the overwhelming array of debaters. Each side showed conclusively that they had given the question a deep study and the result was a very close decision. Miss Mary Ryan, Miss Mary Finn, Fred Mears and Rev. J. F. Mears, after giving the question careful study, gave their decision in the "darmcrs."

A baseball club was formed in the N.H.S. on Wednesday, with the following officers: Hon. Pres., Dr. Nesbit; Pres. and Capt., Mr. F. G. Miller; Vice Pres., Mr. W. H. Hedley; Sec.-Treas., Harry Wagar; committee, Bert Paul, Roy Parney and Bernard McCaul.

Mrs. James Holmes, of Lindsay, was renewing acquaintances in town on Wednesday.

A very sad event occurred on Tuesday evening when a young man who spent a short time in our midst, and who apparently alienated the affections of a large number of the fair sex while here, was forced, no doubt by circumstances over which he had no control, to leave himself away from this little "burgh." To many this was a great grief, the young ladies to the number of 26, dressed in deep mourning, walked up and down the grandstile walks of the B. Q. station on Tuesday evening, bewailing their misfortune, and no doubt expressing their sorrow to their young friend at parting, "tears of bitterness." On the 11 o'clock assume out of the yard it carried the object of all this sorrow away, and we are informed the young man kept up the same strain in a remarkable manner and as the train passed Bath Road and the little village was lost to view in the distance he was seen to pace the platform and entering the coach seated himself in one of the Pullman chairs and was soon lost in deep reverie.

One of the amendments which Hon. Mr. Hanna intimated would be made to the Ontario Liquor Act this session will provide against the sale of liquor to persons under 21 years of age under any circumstances. The law now in force prohibits the selling to persons who have a note from parents, guardians or employers, asking that liquor be sold them.

Mrs. Gilmore, of Toronto, is a prominent citizen, of Toronto, lost diamond ring valued at $2,000, stolen from the woman's toilet room at the Toronto Exhibition. The New York board of education voted to abolish the home work of the pupils in the first year of the elementary schools of the city. The pupils in the three and one-half hours, and studies of the first year are reading, writing, "Trills and fads." This does away during the first year with the teaching of sewing, physical training, drawing, nature study and language, and leaves only a great extent with reading, writing and drawing.

A Canadian cheesemaker has given a South Shields, England, tradesman a rather difficult task. On opening some cheese he latter found a small bottle containing a communication, apparently from Prankville, Canada. The communication requested him to write a letter addressed to the "Prankville Cheese Factory," and to put the letter in the bowl with which the writer of the correspondence was to make his next cheese. The Englishman prepared to carry out the request.

WEDDING BELLS.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Sills, of McLean, on Wednesday morning, March 29th, at 10:30 o'clock, when their second oldest daughter, Miss Emily, was united in marriage to Mr. Frank Thompson, of Enterprise. Rev. Mr. Clarke, Mountain Grove, performed the ceremony. Miss Ida Sills, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. John Keech, Trafford, performed the duties of best man, in the presence of about thirty guests. The couple stood under an arch of evergreens and roses. The bride looked charming in a skirt of pearl grey voile with white satin blouse, and carried a white fan. The bridesmaid wore a dress of pale blue danish cloth trimmed with white chiffon and white applique. Immediately after the ceremony a dainty dinner was served after which the happy couple left for Enterprise, where they took the 4.30 o'clock train for Napanee, Kingston and other southern points. The bride received many costly presents, showing the esteem in which the young couple were held. They have the best wishes of their many friends for their future welfare. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will reside at Enterprise.

A TRUE APPETIZER AND TONIC.

Mi-o-na Will Make You Feel Hungry and Hearty, and Give Strength and Vitality.

Ask any friend who looks thin, pale, and out of health how many meals he or she eats a day, and the chances are that the answer will be, "Not over two, and I don't feel hungry then." The plump, rosy, and robust eat three square meals a day, and their perfect health is due to a strong stomach and digestive system, as such a system takes out of the food all those elements that make pure blood, and give nourishment and vitality to the body.

The one appetizer and tonic that should be taken is Mi-o-na, the only agent known that will strengthen the stomach and digestive system, and put them in such perfect working order that they will digest easily and naturally all the food that is eaten, and send you to the table positively hungry for the next meal.

Without a strong stomach digestion will be poor, the blood impure, and serious liver and kidney troubles result, causing headaches, backaches, spots before the eyes, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritableness, a furred tongue and bad breath, all of which can be readily overcome by the use of Mi-o-na, costing but 50c a box, as it goes right to the root of all of perfect health, the stomach.

Scores of leading people in this Province, including editors, ministers, bankers, and their families, gladly testify to the tonic, strengthening and health giving effects of Mi-o-na. Furthermore, Wallace's Red Cross Drug Store, one of the most reliable druggists in this section sells Mi-o-na under a guarantee to refund the money if it does not produce satisfactory results.

A Chapter on Tamworth

By Rev. W. H. Adams.

"Wheeler's Mills" was the name of old time popularity given to the thriving little town on the Salmon River which is the metropolis of Addington County. The Wheelers, who were the first to settle on the spot, came from the States, but were of English extraction. And Mr. Calvin Wheeler it was, the progenitor of all hereabouts now bearing his patronymic, who named the place Tamworth. He was a warm admirer of Sir Robert Peel, the Prime Minister of England, who sat in the Commons (as did his father before him, and his son after him) for the staunch old borough of Tamworth, in Staffordshire. This high opinion of the British statesman it is alleged, accounts for the old settler's choice of a name for the then newly rising town. It may just as likely have been other reasons also. For Wheeler is not an extirpated name at the present time in the old English borough; and in the year 1352, Richard le Wheeler was High Bailiff there, while some bearers of that surname, who, however, dropped the prefix "le", filled the same office at various subsequent dates.

Not a few mid-England names terminate in "worth", as for example, Wentworth, Kenilworth, Wirksworth, Lutterworth, Epworth, etc. A "worth" designated the wattled enclosure within which the primitive peoples of England were wont to dwell together. The "worth" which stood for this place, Tamworth, was Tameworth or Tamworth. And, although the wattle and daub was but rudely represented by walls of solid masonry, and many changes and chances came to the place itself, the name only slightly altered, came onward the lordly Trent and the North Sea, and Tamworth remained an indelible place-name in the history of the land.

Tamworth lies on the border of what was once the great forest of Arden, and but a mile distant from Watling Street—the ancient Roman road constructed in Britain under the Roman Cæsars. From the "street" in question there ran a Roman by-road to the place itself, and traces of the Roman occupation are not wanting. The most interesting of all these relics is a pig of lead disinterred some seventy years ago. The ancient Latin inscription upon it indicates that it was smelted in the year 76 of the Christian era.

The written history of Tamworth dates from the time of the Saxon "Heptarchy." It was the favorite place of residence of the great King Offa, whose reign began in 755. This monarch built (for those times) a magnificent palace at Tamworth, and fortified the town by surrounding it with a vast entrenchment and bank, traces of which remain to-day, and retain the name of Offa's Dyke, or the King's Ditch. Two of the charters granted by Offa were dated from his "palace of Tamworth" (in regali palatio Tameworthie), as were also charters of his successor Coenwulf (791-819); of Berhtwulf (838-852); and of Burhred, who fled the country at the time of the Danish invasion in the year 874, when Tamworth was razed to the ground.

It is said that the town lay in ruins for forty years in the expiration of that time Ethelfleada, the Lady of the Marches," daughter of King Alfred the Great, fortified Tamworth, and made it her general residence until her death in 918. She raised the great artificial mound upon which Tamworth castle stands to-day, and which has withstood the storm and stress of nearly a thousand years. She is described in one of the charters as "a woman godly, righteous, and wise, stepping in the footsteps of Alfred, her father." Here she brought up her nephew Athelstan, who was to come after her, teaching him not only the wisdom that is in books, but also the knowledge of men and how to rule them.

In 925 Athelstan, having succeeded to the throne of England, sought to cement peace with the constantly invading Danes by giving his sister Editha in marriage to Sihtric, the Danish King. Both sovereigns came to Tamworth, where the nuptials were solemnized in 925. In 941, however, Anlaf, a son of Sihtric by a former wife, invaded England, besieged Tamworth, and took the town after great slaughter, carrying away much plunder. The town did not recover from the disaster, and thence forward ceased to be a royal residence.

William the Conqueror, in 1066, bestowed Tamworth castle and its lands upon his Dispencer or Steward, Robert de Marmion, one of his Norman followers. He also granted Marmion the manor of Scrivelsby. Both were to be held on condition that Marmion or his successors performed the right of Royal Champion at every Coronation. It is worthy of note that the present owner of Scrivelsby, Mr. Frank Seaman Dymoke, a lineal descendant of Robert de Marmion through one of his heiresses, is the hereditary champion at the present day). The Marmions survived, in the direct male line until 1291, when the Manor of Tamworth Castle passed by marriage into another family, it frequently changed hands until 1497, when it was purchased by the Corporation of Tamworth for the Burgesses of the Borough in commemoration of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee. It was then formally dedicated to the use of the public for ever.

Of the historic incidents in connection with Tamworth Castle it may be noted that Queen Matilda seized the stronghold because the third Robert de Marmion identified himself with the claims of Stephen in 1135. On Stephen's release the Castle was restored to Marmion.

Again, the fifth baron, Robert, when in France with King John (1199-1216) for some offence sided with the French King, and John, by revenge, ordered Tamworth Castle to be pulled down. The order, however, was not carried out, probably because the castle was strong enough to resist an assault.

During the Civil War, the Castle was, in the autumn of 1642, occupied by the King's party. The whole neighborhood is said to have favored the cause of Charles. In the following June Cromwell marched against it, and after a two days' siege compelled the garrison to surrender. The doubtful warfare which was waged in that part of the country at this period greatly impoverished the town and the surrounding territory.

Although not a royal residence since Queen Elizabeth's time, it has nevertheless often been the scene of many royal junketings. William the Conqueror doubtless visited his Dispencer here; while his son, Henry I., held his court here in 1111. Again, on March 12th, 1158, Henry II. paid a visit to the town and castle of Tamworth, being accompanied by Theobald, Archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas A. Becket, then Lord Chancellor, and other noted persons. In the reign of Edward IV. (1461-1483)

CENTREVILLE.

Our community was shadowed with a gloom on the 21st ult., by the death of Stella Kearns, aged twenty-two years. The young girl was ailing but a year, and her early demise was a great shock to all who knew her. During the six months that the delicate frame wrestled with that fatal disease, all that medical skill and loving care could do to ease her sufferings and nurse her strength was done, and God called her up higher. During her last days on earth friends and acquaintances came from far and near to tender their sympathy to one whose life had been so much to them. Deceased was always of a bright and cheerful disposition, a loving sister and a faithful daughter. With her mourning parents she left two sisters, Mrs. J. McKeown, Napanee, and Nora, at home. The remains were placed in the R. C. vault, Centreville, to await interment. The pall-bearers were Stanley Reid, Anthony Kenny, Byron Scanlin, Herbert Milligan, Charles Ingoldsby and Lawrence Donoghue.

WOMEN WHO WEAR WELL.

It is astonishing how great a change a few years of married life will make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the buoyancy vanish like the bloom from a peach which is rudely handled. The matron is only a dim shadow, a faint echo of the charming maiden. There are two reasons for this change, ignorance and neglect. Few young women are so favored by birth as to have the whole system through the change which comes with marriage. Many neglect to deal with the unpleasant drains which are often consequent on marriage and motherhood. Understand that this secret drain is robbing the cheek of its freshness and the form of its fairness. As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate womanly organs, so surely when these organs are established in health the face and form will show the effect in renewed comeliness. Half a million women have found new hope, health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"We had rather a rough interview, George," he said, "so I have invited you to smoke the pipe of peace."

Brendon shook the old man's hand quietly, but without much enthusiasm. He could not conjecture what Derrington meant by behaving in a way so different from that he usually adopted. His hoist felt the slack hand clasp and winced on seeing the want of response in Brendon's face.

"Dinner will be ready soon," said the old lord, waving Brendon to a seat; "only our two selves. I wish to consult you."

"Consult me?" George could not keep the astonishment out of his face. "It's rather late in the day, is it not?" remarked Derrington dryly. "But you see I am old, George, and have not much time to spare. Yes, I wish you to consult with me after dinner about—but that can come in the course of our conversation. Meantime let us talk of anything you like."

"The weather, sir!"

"No, confound you," snapped Derrington, with a flash of his old irritable self; "talk of wine, wit and women if you like, but spare me platitudes."

Brendon stared at his shoes and smiled under his mustache. "I do not think I can say anything very original about the subjects you mention," he said quietly.

"Talk of Miss Ward then. You can be original on that point."

Brendon would rather not have mentioned Dorothy, but he was quite determined to show his grandfather that he fully intended to marry his ladylove and that he was not afraid to speak his mind. "I do not fancy that there is anything particularly original in a love story. I met Miss Ward some three years before, I have loved her ever since and we will marry when"—

"There, there," interrupted Derrington, waving his hand, "let us not get on to that subject as yet. We can talk of it after dinner. In fact, you may as well know that I asked you here to discuss your position. We must have an understanding."

"I think you must intend it to be a pleasant one," said Brendon, "as you have asked me to dinner."

It struck Brendon that his grandfather looked old and very haggard. He had lost his fresh color, his eyes were sunken and the defiant cast was out of his enormous mustache. He moved slowly toward the door, and George felt sorry to see him so changed.

Moved by a sudden impulse, George moved to the elder man's side and offered his arm. The footman was holding the door open, and Derrington could not express, even by a look, the satisfaction he felt. With a surly grunt he took Brendon's arm, but George guessed by the warm pressure that Derrington was pleased.

It was quite a banquet, for Derrington lived in a most expensive manner. The table was a round one, with an exquisite taste, and was placed under a kind of velvet tent, which shut off the rest of the room and made the meal particularly cozy. It was perfect, and after the somewhat stale food of his lodgings George enjoyed the meal greatly. Derrington himself did not eat much, but he took great pleasure in seeing George enjoy his viands.

After the dinner, during which the old lord was confirmed in his good opinion of George, he said: "There's coffee in the library, and we can talk over our cigars. Up I get, George, your arm."

He not only asked for it, but took it with marked pleasure. The footmen in attendance returned to the servants' hall to state that the "old devil" (the domestic name for Derrington) had quite taken to the new young gentleman.

Meanwhile Brendon was seated in a comfortable chair enjoying one of the best cigars he had ever placed between his lips. At his elbow smoked a cup of Mocha, and in the chair on the other side of a roaring fire of sea timber smiled Lord Derrington. He looked a grim and determined old gentleman as he bent his shaggy brows on his grandson.

George was very comfortable and also felt grateful for the kindness which his grandfather was showing him. At the same time he felt as though he were acting wrongly in behobnobbing with a man who persistently blackened his mother's memory.

"I suppose you wondered when you received my invitation," said Derrington.

"I did, sir. I wondered very much."

"And you felt inclined to refuse."

"I had almost made up my mind to."

"Why did you change your mind?" George pondered and looked again at his neat shoes. "Well, sir," said he, after a pause, "I thought that after a dinner we might come to understand each other better, and I am anxious for that."

"And for recognition of your birth."

"Naturally. The one included the other."

"Does that mean you will fight till you get what you want?"

"Yes," said George curtly and then closed his lips with a firm determination to prefer it speedily if needful. At the same time he felt it was rather awkward after eating Derrington's food. A sudden impulse made him rise.

"What's the matter now?" asked Derrington, not moving.

"Well, sir," burst out Brendon, "I have a feeling that we are going to quarrel, and in your own house, and after that very excellent dinner I don't want to behave rudely. It will be better to postpone this talk."

BLOOD CELLS,
IN HEALTH. IN DISEASE.

Man is a millionaire many times over in the possession of blood cells. What we get are not quite so rich, for scientists have proven that the normal number of red blood cells in adult men is five million; in women four and a half million to the square millimeter.

The normal cell is not absolutely round in its health, but, in disease, becomes extremely irregular in shape. Every one can be in perfect health and possess the millions of rich red blood corpuscles if they only know how to go about it. Dr. R. V. Pierce, consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., advises every man and woman to prepare for a long life by observing nature's laws. In the first place, if your digestion is faulty, and the food you eat is not taken up by the blood and assimilated properly, you need a tonic and digestive corrector, something that will increase the red blood corpuscles. He believes in going about this in nature's own way. Years ago, in his active practice, he found that an alterative extract of certain herbs and roots, put up without the use of alcohol, would put the liver, lungs and heart into fuller and more complete action. This medicine he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. By assimilating the food eaten, it nourishes the blood, and, instead of the ill-shaped corpuscles, the person's blood takes on a rich red color and the corpuscles are more nearly round. Nervousness is only the cry of the starved nerves for food, and when the nerves are fed on rich red blood the person loses those irritable feelings, sleeps well at night and feels refreshed in the morning.

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER.

If you want to know about your body, read Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, which can be had for the cost of mailing, 50 cents in stamps for the cloth-bound book, or 21 stamps for the paper-covered volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and stimulate the sluggish liver.

"Not a bit of it," said Derrington quickly. "We are relatives, and quarrels between relatives do not count. Sit down. I have something important to say to you."

George sat down and prepared for the worst. "We'll let the question of your birth alone for the present," said the elder in a hard tone. "At this moment I wish to talk of Mrs. Jersey's death, also about your father's death."

"What has that to do with this, sir?"

"I believe the one is connected with the other."

George remembered what Bawdsey had said. "I've heard that remark before," he observed.

"Of course. I set detective I employed to watch you made it."

"He did. I think you trust that man too much, sir," said Brendon after a pause.

"Do you? I thought he was a friend of yours?"

"Oh"— George shrugged his shoulders. "I saved his life, but that does not constitute friendship. I don't think Bawdsey is worthy of your confidence."

"I know he isn't. But you see I can't help myself."

George looked up quickly. "Blackmail?"

"Something of that sort. I intend to trust my own flesh and blood—that is, you—and tell you all I know connected with the Jersey case and ask you to help me to get the better of Bawdsey."

"Assuredly, sir."

Derrington was rather moved. "I have not behaved well, George."

"That's true enough, sir," said George, who was not going to be weak, "but you can make amends by acknowledging that my mother was an honest woman."

"I believe she was, George, for none but an honest woman could have borne

"My boy, I have behaved badly."

a son like you. But, you see, I know no more than you do, where the marriage took place."

"Do you acknowledge that there was a marriage?" asked George, starting, to his feet. Derrington rose also, and the tall men faced one another.

"My boy," said he, "I am sure there was a marriage. I am also sure that you are my legitimate heir, and, by heavens, I intend to acknowledge you as such before the week's out."

Brendon was moved by this sudden recognition of all he longed for that a sudden weakness seized him, and he sat down, covering his face with his hand. Derrington thought the young man did so to conceal his tears, but in reality George was putting up a short thanksgiving for this unexpected turn of affairs. His grandfather again touched his shoulder. "My boy," he said again, and his voice was broken with emotion, "I have behaved badly. I ask your pardon."

George put out his hand blindly and grasped that of his grandfather. When it was once in the old man's grip he seized his grandson with a jerk and made him look him in the face. "You forgive me?" he asked.

"With all my heart and soul," said Brendon quietly, and after another handshake they resumed their seats.

"I can marry Dorothy now," said Brendon, with a contented sigh.

"If my influence can help you, you," Derrington paused and shook his head. "But there is a lioness in the path, George."

"Mrs. Ward!"

"Exactly. She will move heaven and earth to prevent the marriage."

George looked puzzled. "I see no reason why she should oppose it if I am willing to be judged as your heir."

"Nor do I. I thought myself that it was simply the money she wanted, and if you were the son-in-law she would not get her claws on the gold. But there is more in it than that. She seeks revenge."

"On me? I have never harmed her."

"It's a vicarious revenge. I believe that woman loved your father, George, and that he slighted her. That is why she wants to visit his sin—as with a vindictive spirit she may regard it—on you."

"Did Mrs. Ward know my father, sir?" asked George quickly.

"Yes. She met him at San Remo."

"Then she knew he was murdered?"

"Of course. I saw Mrs. Ward the other day, George. She came here to force me to harm you and to consent to Walter marrying Dorothy."

"Oh! Then you refused to that."

"I have answered her challenge by asking you to dinner and will acknowledge you my heir. Mrs. Ward will then try to make mischief."

"Can she do so?"

"Yes. She knows that I was in Mrs. Jersey's house on that night."

"And you were, sir?"

Derrington made a most unexpected reply. "No, I was not."

CHAPTER XVII.

GEORGE was rather puzzled to reconcile the apparent contradiction in Derrington's speech. The old gentleman saw his bewilderment, and before the young man could speak he anticipated his question.

"You are perplexed," he said quietly. "I thought you would be. To explain myself clearly it will be better to tell you the whole story from the beginning."

"What story?"

"The story of your mother's marriage and of my quarrel with your father. Do not be afraid. I shall say nothing to hurt your pride. But I fear Percy was not overburdened with brains. He was gay and thoughtless and thriftless. Your talents, George, come from your mother. She must have been a remarkable woman.

"However, to continue," pursued Derrington, pushing away his empty cup, "Percy saw Miss Lockwood, he fell in love with her, and finally he eloped. I wrote Mim a letter saying he was to return or I would never see him again. He declined to return and remained in the continent with his wife. I never did see him again," added Derrington quietly, "for three years later he was murdered at San Remo."

"In his letter to you did my father say he was married?"

"He did, but at the time, as he did not say where the marriage was celebrated, I thought he mentioned it out of obstinacy."

George colored. "I don't see why you should have so misjudged my mother," he said hotly. "Admitting that she was not born in the purple, she was in a good position and had no reason to run away with my father."

"She was in love with him, I believe."

"Even then she would not have eloped unless it was to be married."

Derrington nodded. "You are perfectly right," he said. "I failed to believe in the marriage, but in my own heart I knew there was one. I have behaved badly, my boy, George."

"You have, sir. But as we are now reconciled the less said about the thing the better. You are quite sure you do not know where the marriage was celebrated?"

"No, George, I do not. After the death of your father I tried to find out, but it was impossible. Had I really seen the register of the marriage I should have acknowledged you as my heir, as a matter of fact," added Derrington, with a burst of candor, "I did not trouble much to search, as I feared lest the marriage should be verified."

George looked at his seat. "Let us say no more," he said.

"Very good. I have confessed my sins, and I have received absolution from you. At the exact moment that you will leave the murder of your father at San Remo alone and come to the appearance of Mrs. Jersey in my life. You were with your grandfather when he stood in Amelia square. I had constituted my second son my heir, and I had relegated to obscurity the escapade of my son Percy. All was quietly settled, in my humble opinion, when Mrs. Jersey appeared to make trouble. That was eight years after your father's death."

"Where was she in the meantime?"

"I cannot say. She told me nothing of her history, but from a few words of hers which she let slip I believe she must have been in the United States. Why she went there from San Remo or for what reason I cannot say. She came here to see me—we had an interview in this very room—to demand money."

"What threat did she make?"

"She said that she knew where the marriage was celebrated, adding that if I did not give her an annuity she would go to Lockwood and help him to prove that you were my legitimate grandson and heir."

"Did she say if the marriage was celebrated in England or abroad?"

"No, sir. Mrs. Jersey was a remarkably clever woman, and if my son Percy had married her she would have made a good wife."

"Then she really was in love with my father?"

"Very deeply in love—as she told me herself. But she did not regard his memory with such veneration as to desire to aid his son. She was content that you should lose your rights, provided that I paid her an annuity. I tried in vain to learn from her where the marriage had been celebrated. She refused to open her mouth, and I offered her an annuity of five hundred a year. I arranged that the money should be paid through my lawyers, and she vanished."

"Where to?"

"I can't say. She might have gone to rejoin Mr. Jersey if there ever was such a person. She sent a messenger regularly to the office of my lawyers for the money, but did not trouble me in any way. Her next appearance was shortly after the death of your grandfather."

"What did she want this time?"

"To set up a boarding house in Amelia square. She said that her life was lonely—a remark which made me think Mr. Jersey was a myth—and that she wanted company. I expect she learned in some way that I was buying old Lockwood's house."

"Why did you buy it?"

"I have a lot of property in that district, and I wanted to round it off with this house. Ireland, in his rage at me for my treatment of your mother, would not have sold it to me. I bought the house through an agent. Mrs. Jersey must have heard of the purchase, for it was then that she came to me and asked me to set her up in the house as a landlady."

"I wonder why she did that?" said George thoughtfully.

"She was lonely, I understand." George looked at his shoes. "As Eliza Stokes she lived in that house along with my mother previous to the elopement. I expect she had a kind of affection for it."

"Well, whatever her reason was, I did what she asked. She agreed to pay me a rent, and her money was as good as any one else's. Besides, I felt that as my tenant I could keep her under my own eye. When she was away I never knew but what she might die and part with the secret to some one else, who might come on me for blackmail also. I thought it best Mrs. Jersey should have the house, so she went into it and used the old furniture. I don't deny but what she was a good business woman and made the house pay. At all events she was never behindhand with her rent."

"I wonder she paid you any at all."

"Oh, she had her annuity and was afraid of pressing me too hard. I refused to let her the house on a seven years' lease. She only had it from year to year, and in that way I kept a check upon her. She knew if I once lost my temper I would throw her over and acknowledge you as my heir."

"I wish you had done so," said Brendon moodily. "It would have saved a lot of trouble."

"I do so now," replied Derrington testily. "Better late than never. Well, Mrs. Jersey lived and flourished for fifteen years. I tried to find you out, George, lest she should get at you"—

"Oh, was that why you offered to make me an allowance?"

"It was. I intended to give you a yearly income on condition that you went to Australia. Then I could be sure that Mrs. Jersey would not seek you out. But you refused my offer and disappeared."

"I went to college under the name of Brendon," observed George.

"And that is why Mrs. Jersey never found you and why I could not come across you until you put those advertisements about the marriage into the papers. It was that which"—

"Yes; so Bawdsey told me. You had me watched."

"I did," said Derrington, "and in that way I found out that you were going to stop in Mrs. Jersey's house."

"How did you learn that, sir?" asked George in surprise. "I never told any one."

"Oh, yes; you told Lois."

"So I did," said Brendon quickly. "She bothered me to come and see her, and I said that I was going to stop in the neighborhood of Amelia square with a friend and would call on her the next day. I expect she told this to Bawdsey."

"Exactly, and Bawdsey told me. I was afraid lest you should make Mrs. Jersey confess. I wrote to her and asked her to see me. She refused to come to my house, so I made up my mind to seek her out in Amelia square. I arranged by letter with her to call about 11 o'clock at her place and see her secretly."

"Why secretly, and why at night? Your visit could have been accounted for from the fact that she was your tenant."

"Ah," said Derrington grimly, "I never thought of that. I received a note from Mrs. Jersey saying she would wait for me on Friday evening at 11 o'clock in her sitting room. It was a foggy night, if you remember."

"Yes," said George; "I suppose you traced the house by means of the red light over the door."

"I did not trace the house at all," said Derrington quietly. "I did not go near the house."

"But I saw you," insisted George.

"You saw my coat and a man with my tall figure, and, having my assaulting turn yourself in your head, you jumped to the conclusion that the figure was me."

"Then if not you, who was the man?"

"Bawdsey!" said Derrington curtly.

George stared. "In your coat?" he said incredulously.

"It seems strange," said Derrington, "but the fact is that Bawdsey is one of the few who have got the better of me in my life. It was in this way that he prevented me from seeing Mrs. Jersey. He knew that night I visited him at his rooms, which then were in Bloomsbury. I desired to tell him that I intended to see Mrs. Jersey and to warn her against receiving anything. I don't suppose the warning was needed, as she knew when she was to see me. But the fact is, Mrs. Jersey was not in good health and was feeling compunction about keeping you out of your rights. I learned from Bawdsey that Mrs. Jersey had written out a confession of the whole matter and that she intended to leave this to her niece, Margery Watson, so that I might be forced to continue the lease of the house."

George uttered an ejaculation. "I thought from Miss Margery said that there was some such confession," he remarked, "but it is missing. It was not found among her papers after her death. Unless Miss Bull took it and forced you to"—

"No," interrupted Derrington vigorously, "that came here quietly and put the case of the matter to me. She also undertook that the rent would be paid regularly and that through Miss Watson she would manage the house. I was quite satisfied with the existing arrangements, and, moreover, thought that if such a confession were found, out of gratitude Miss Watson might bring it to me."

"If Miss Bull had told her to she would have done so, but not otherwise," said George. "She is under Miss Bull's thumb."

"The best place she could be. Getting back to Bawdsey, I've been idiot, from what I saw of her. However, you know why I renewed the year by year lease. Where the confession is I have no idea, but the person who holds it will certainly make use of it some day to extort money, and then we will have the whole story, my son."

Derrington proceeded with his account of his doings on that night. "As I said, I went to see Bawdsey at his rooms, and a most dense fog was thick I had considerable difficulty in finding the place. The rain and fog chilled me, for I am not so young as I was, and I felt cold and inclined to shivering. But I was too anxious to tell Bawdsey about Mrs. Jersey to think of myself. He made some water to give me a glass of hot whisky, but when the water was boiling I told him I was going to see Mrs. Jersey. He asked if I was mad to go late into the house without being admitted by one of the servants and thus run a chance of my being known."

"Did it never strike him that Mrs. Jersey expected you and would admit you when you rang?"

"Yes, it did strike him, but he knew that I didn't want any one to know that she had a visitor so late at night."

"I don't know why you took all these precautions, sir."

Derrington smiled dryly. "Perhaps they were rather unnecessary, but I thought it best to be on the safe side. As a matter of fact, I had a latchkey."

"I thought that Mrs. Jersey never allowed latchkeys."

"This one came to me when I bought the house and was given to me by the agent. I told Mrs. Jersey I had it and that I would put myself in. She expected me at 11."

"I know she did," said George, "for on that night she asked the boarders to be in at that hour, as she gave a party at 10. I wondered if she was having any one to meet her then."

"I was not expecting me. It was after 10 when I told Bawdsey, and I explained to him that I had a latchkey. He gave me the whisky, and, being chilled, I drank it down in fact asleep."

George looked up suddenly. "The whisky was drugged," he guessed.

"It was," assented Derrington, "and while I was insensible Bawdsey took the latchkey out of my pocket and put on my coat. He is rather my height, so with that and the fur coat I expect he passed himself off as me to Mrs. Jersey until she saw his face."

"When she did, she would have nothing to do with him. Although," added George, "he was an old boarder in the house."

"Wait till I tell you the rest," said Derrington, "and then you can give an opinion. When I awoke it was after 12. I never suspected that the whisky had been drugged and thought that it was some sort of illness. Bawdsey was in the room when I awoke. He did not tell me that he had been to Mrs. Jersey, and I now saw that it was too late to go there and that I must be on the morrow, saying that it was doubtful if you would speak to her on that night."

A Chapter on Tamworth

an amusing incident is said to have occurred, which formed the subject of a ballad entitled "King Edward and the Tanner of Tamworth." A tanner journeying towards the town met the King on a hunting excursion, and supposing him to be a robber afforded him much amusement by his bluff conversation.

In the time of Richard III (1485), Henry, Earl of Richmond, passed through Tamworth with his army on the way to the famous field of Bosworth. He is said to have lingered behind his troops and to have lost sight of them. Next day he publicly rode through the streets of Tamworth that he might be known. Shakespeare, in his play of Richard III, has not overlooked the parts which Tamworth played in the era of the history of the nation, and in representing Richmond as addressing his followers on the eve of the battlefield at Bosworth, makes him say:

"From Tamworth thither is but one day's march."

In God's name cheerly on."

Readers of Scott's "Marmion" will be interested in the following extracts from Sir Walter's Journal: "April 6th, 1828. Breakfasted at Ashbourne and went on to Derby; * * * from thence to Tamworth, where we slept.

"April 7th. We visited the Castle in the morning. * * * It is a fine old place, neglected; but therefore more like hour antiquity. The keep is round. On the apartments appear to have been modernised, temper d Anne.

There was no small quantity of armor and old furniture, which I should have been glad to possess. There was a fine demipique saddle said to have been that of James I. The pommel rose and finished off in the form of a swan's crest, capital for a bad horseman to hold on by." This reference to Sir Walter Scott leads to the memory the lines from "Marmion":

"And there with herald pomp and state
They raised Lord Marmion;
They hailed him Lord of Fontenaye,
Of Lutterward and Scrivelbaye,
Of Tamworth Tower and Town;"

as well as the subjoined from James of Scotland in the same poem:

"* * * if within Tantallon strong,
The good Lord Marmion tarries long,
Perchance our meeting may be made
At Tamworth, in his castle hall."

to which the haughty Marmion made reply:

"Much honored were my humble home,
If in its halls King James should come;
But * * * many a banner will be borne
And many a knight to earth be borne
And many a sheaf of arrows spent
Ere Scotland's King shall cross the Trent."

Of course, as says a recent writer, "Scott's Lord Marmion is a fictitious personage of the male line died out in the reign of Edward III, but a younger branch of the Marmions did flourish for many centuries in the male line and took a prominent part in the Scottish wars. Still, no one quarrels with Scott's mixing up with magic art he blended together history and romance, truth and fiction, in order to produce an immortal poem."

The finer-de-lis has for centuries been the symbol of old Tamworth. It is embossed on the Mayor's chair and is carved on the facade of the Town Hall, and floated in gold (on a dark blue ground) on the Castle flag. Above the above "chapter" was sent to the press our own Reeve and Council have recommended, at their regular meeting held on April 3d, that we adopt the same device for local supplement here. Accordingly, the Gilbard Furniture firms is arranging for the immediate manufacturing of souvenirs bearing the Tamworth lis-ough seal—the finer-de-lis surrounded by the mediaeval Latinism, "Sig. Burgi, de Tamworth in Comitat. Warwic." at the foot. The whole will be enclosed within a border having the legend, "A Souvenir of Tamworth Ontario."

It should have been stated that in March 28th, 1905.

SARON times a Royal mint was established in Tamworth. The coins struck there are quaint in design, exceedingly rare, and highly prized by numismatists. The coins of Offa (755) are remarkable for the beauty of their execution. The most curious coin made there is the reign of Edward the Confessor (1042) was a silver penny, bearing on the obverse "Edward Rex," and on the reverse "Brunine on Tam." Bruning was the Master of the Mint in the time of Henry I. (1100) the minting operations ceased.

CENTREVILLE.

The April session of the municipal council met on Monday last. Several questions of importance were on hand and the hall was crowded. The question uppermost in the minds of most of those attending seemed to concern the town hall, for on every hand are heard conversation bearing on "Enterprise, Centreville, our Town Hall."

A petition to the effect that the new town hall should be built in Enterprise was tendered to the council. One of the four moved in Saturday accepted but could find no seconder. Then the man that we all voted for last January proved his word by moving that the new hall should be built in our own town, found a seconder, and carried it. Thereupon the delegates from that little town to the east of us stood in the door with the smile on the other side of their face. Next the tenders for the old town hall and lot were examined and it was found that Mr. E. W. Lochhead had secured the building for the sum of $176, and Mr. A. Bird for the lot, $10. Mr. Cyrus Edgar, who had completed the plans and specifications, rendered them and found everyone satisfied. So he was told to go ahead. Then the man that we all voted for last January proved his word by moving that the new hall should be built in our own town, found a seconder, and carried it. Thereupon the delegates from that little town to the east of us stood in the door with the smile on the other side of their face. Next the tenders for the old town hall and lot were examined and it was found that Mr. E. W. Lochhead had secured the building for the sum of $176, and Mr. A. Bird for the lot, $10. Mr. Cyrus Edgar, who had completed the plans and specifications, rendered them and found everyone satisfied. So he was told to go ahead, build or brick or stone, steel roofed, ceiled with metallic ceiling or hard wood, as he thought best. The dimensions are 60 ft. x 32 ft., and it will be completed about $3000.

On Monday evening the Track Committee met in the reception room of the King Edward. All business was completed and Centreville, rare struck. A new staff of officers is to be selected and are to start with a clean slate before them. We are glad to know that the society is in a flourishing condition and have quite a sum to their credit.

A song service comprised of the hymns of Miss Fanny Crosby will be held in the Methodist church at the usual hour on Sunday morning.

Mr. Ira Asselstine has had Mrs. W. I. Fitzgerald, who has been seriously ill for the past three weeks, in no better.

The funeral of Mrs. P. Dewey, who died on Monday, took place on Tuesday morning, the remains being placed in the R. C. vault.

At present we are listening to a proposition upon which all agree. Namely that a steam mill with capacity and power to grind all grists for a radius of five miles, should be built. A bonus is to be raised to give the affair a starting point, and we are now looking about us for a competent man with some capital. The lack of such a necessity has been felt for some time, and as Centreville is the centre of a good agricultural district trade need not be considered as lacking.

To all whom it may interest may it be known that the contract for building the new town hall is now open for tenders. Plans and specifications at the clerk's office.

A sugar social, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society, will be held at the town hall on Wednesday, April 12th. Admission 10 cents.

NOW FOR A

SALE OF WOMEN'S RAINCOATS

Commencing Saturday, April 8th.

We are going to start in Saturday morning with a Sale of Women's Raincoats that will stir up the community. We have the ammunition to do it with, and we are going to place them on sale now WHEN PEOPLE NEED RAINCOATS THE MOST.

While we say Raincoats, keep in mind that most of them are Cravenettes, and made up with a snap and style about them so that they are nice enough to wear anywhere anytime. The kernel of this bargain is a lucky purchase of Sample Raincoats sent out to Canada by the J. & W. Campbell Co., of Glasgow. We are going to add to them a lot of Coats from our own regular stock, and putting the two lots together gives us quantity, variety and sizes enough to keep the Sale going from Saturday, April 8th, and continuing April 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th.

Here is the way we will price them. A Coat that you can buy in the regular way 5.00 will be 3.75, the 6.00 kind will be 4.50, the 8.00 ones will be 6.00, the 10.00 Coats for 8.00, 12 50 Coats for 10.00, 15.00 Coats for $11 25.

Remember the dates, April 8th to 15th.
